HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

LITTLE ACTS OF LOVE.

Not mighty deeds make up the sum
Of happiness below;
But little acts of kindliness,
Which any child may show:

A glass of water timely brought,
An offered easy chair,
A turning of the window-blind,
That all may feel the air:

An early flower, unasked, bestowed,
A light and cautious tread,
A voice, to gentlest whisper hushed,
To spare the aching head.

O! deeds like these, though little things
Yet purest love disclose.
As fragrant atoms in the air
Reveal the hidden rose.—Selected.

CONGRESS should settle this tariff business as soon as possible.

THE Pine Lands Investigating Committee held a meeting last week and concluded to try a couple more cases.

JUDGE FLANDRAU continues to lead in the race for candidate for Governor. He would give Mr. Nelson a lively race.

THE News Ledger and several other papers are booming August T. Koerner of Litchfield for State Treasurer on the Republican ticket.

ABOUT $6000 was realized by the bank of Minneapolis, by the sale of Phil Scheig's library, camping outfit, horses etc., at auction a few days since.

THE MINNESOTA DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATION will hold their annual meeting in St. Paul on January 16, to elect officers and talk over affairs generally. A banquet will be held in the evening.

CHURCH WORK in the interest of the People's church St. Paul is a neat little publication received this morning. Dr. S. G. Smith has succeeded in paying for his fine $175,000 church edifice and is still a popular preacher of the Capitol City.

CONGRESS is again at work. It is to be hoped that they will get down to business and pass some laws, about which they have long since made up their minds as to what they want and upon which months of "talk" will not be likely to change a vote. Save your wind gentlemen for next fall's stumping,

IF Patrick Eugene Prenderghast is sane and should be hung for shooting Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago, why should not Frauk Hoskins be tried for libeling the bankers in Otter Tail county, as is alledged he did? Are there any stronger proofs of Hoskin's insanity than of the craziness of Prendergast?

I. DONNELLY thinks it would be better to vote for reformers and elect them to office and then see what they will do than to detail in the platform th ir ideas and get voted out every time. Perhaps he is figuring on swinging his party into one of the old parties at the next opportunity. Looks a little that way.

FRANK HOSKINS, editor of the Alliance Advocate, of Henning, Otter Tail county, has been sent to the asylum for Insane, at Fergus Falls. One reason given for considering him insane was that he quoted the Bible to back up his theories. If that is a good reason, neighbor Eaton, of the Buffalo Journal, who this week, has nearly a column editorial mostly of quotations from the Book of books, must be as "crazy as a bed-bug." "Judge not, that ve be not judged." Mat. chap. vii, v. 1

Election of U. S. Senator.

One of the strongest points in favor of electing United States Senators by a vote of the people, or in some different way from the existing method is the fact that State Legislators are selected almost solely for the purpose of sending this or that man to the United States Senate. The fitness for the important office of State legislator does not seem to weigh much as against whether the law maker will vote for or against certain men for the higher office. So long as this mode of choosing State Senators is in use, so long will our State legislatures contain scheming politicians; elected for the express purpose of casting one vote in the legislature, that for U. S. Senator, and at liberty to fill other schemers in passing laws not in accordance with the wishes of the citizens of the State, or in leaving laws unpassed that should be placed upon our statute books and enforced. Our State is growing in population and wealth and deserves a legislature of honest, honorable, upright men, who will look after the interests of importance at home. Our agricultural, commercial, mining, lumbering, manufacturing and other interests deserve and should have the ablest men in our State to make laws for them. Our schools, asylums, prisons, and many other institutions should be allowed the intelligence of the state to provide for their needs. These important matters should not be placed in the hands of men who are sent to the legislature simply to vote for any man for State Senator. But legislators should be chosen for their ability and willingness to work for the best interests of the State, and if they must, as at present, elect the Senator, trusted to pick out the best man. It is entirely wrong to sink the interests of the State at home into oblivion for the purpose of sending a man to the Senate who perhaps can not possible do better than would his opponent had he been chosen. It is well to agitate these questions and look at them from all sides, and vote our convictions. Were all men elected to the legislature on account of their fitness to be there rather than their fitness to serve Tom, Dick and Harry, and their supposed ability to "draw" votes the present way would not be so objectionable. But when it is openly said you must vote for every man on the legislative ticket in order to have so and so elected to the United States Senate; no matter if you do know you are voting for a shyster, a man you would not wish to have there and for whom you would not vote under any other consideration, it is about time to "pause and consider" the situation. Should this issue be brought out again, as it was at the last election, show by your vote whether or not you favor it.

Money and Tariff.

Now in the days of Cleveland the President, there came wise men from the East to Washington, saying to Cleveland, "You must call an extra session of Congress, to repeal the silver purchasing clause, make gold a single standard, restore confidence to the people and put money in the banks of Wall street." These wizards of Wall street have the cunningness of foxes, especially when it comes to filching money out of the people.

And so Cleveland sent forth a decree that Congress should meet in extra session on the 7th of August last for the purpose of fixing up things in a general way.

For six or eight weeks they held a sort of Revival meeting, but did not get one convert to turn from the traditions of his fathers. But finally they passed the Repeal bill, restored confidence to the people and went home.

Democrats are human, they have their misgivings, and do not differ materially from other men of the Anglo Saxon race.

But there is coming the cry all the while from the four corners of this continent that the democrats are not doing what they promised to do for the people, but it must be remembered that large bodies move slowly, and every thing can not be done in a day.

The leading prognosticators on the Republican side of the House say we have not had such hard times since the days of Ulysses, when the Republican Congress demonetized silver in 1873.

High protectionists say to the democrats: "Hands off the McKinley bill, if you tinker with that our country is ruined; for the McKinley bill we hold to be almost infallible." And they preached it so much that they have got the western farmer to believe that it is about as binding as the ten commandments. Now there is no use to be foolish about this McKinley bill, my brother republican, just because it is the production of a republican brain. But look it square in the face and see how much you are getting out of it brother farmer.

Now the McKinley bill puts a protective duty on farm produce. For what? To make the farmer think he is looked after with great interest by these fellows.

Let us see. The tariff law of '83 put a duty on wheat of 20 cents per bushel. The McKinley bill of 1890 made it 25 cents per bushel. Is the farmer getting any more for wheat now than before the McKinley bill went into operation? Are farmers getting any more for wool under the McKinley bill? Any more for eggs, butter, cheese etc? Perhaps a little more for Limburger cheese. The duty on barley under the tariff law of 1883 was 10 cents per pound. Under the law of 1890, McKinley bill, it is 30 cents per bushel. Do you get any more for barley?

Before me I have an agricultural statistical report, just received from Washington, D. C., which says that the average farm price of barley as returned for December 1893 is the lowest on record. Under the tariff law of '83 duty on potatoes was 15 cents per bushel, under the tariff law of '90—McKinley bill—the duty was made 25 cents per pound Are farmers getting any more for potatoes? Under the law of '83 oat meal was one-half cent per pound under law of '90 one cent per pound. Is that any cheaper? High protection favors corporations etc.

It is an old saying that "corporations have no souls," can't vouch as to the truth of it. But if they are any more destitute of that heathen imaginary wind gushing, second addition to man than some individuals, Lord help them. How is it if you buy an all wool suit of clothes, get them any cheaper? Have to pay just as much for them as before.

The McKinley bill put a heavy duty on plate glass and the fact is that under the high protective duty the trusts advanced prices so high that foreign manufacturers were able to import largely notwithstanding the duty, so it seems that a high protective duty is not always beneficial to the poor man.

Another important issue before us, one which Congress will have to deal with the present session is the money question. The people want an honest dollar, but the wizards of Wall street want a gold standard and a money they can handle regardless of the people. We find that on the 15th ult. the money supply in banks of the different countries as was follows:

Bank of England in gold $127,620,510.

The Bank of Germany in gold $146,850,000.

The Bank of Germany in silver, $48,950,000.

The Bank of France in gold, $340,671,960.

The Bank of France in silver, $252,421,780.

So we see the little country of France has $250,673,230 more money in her bank than both England and Germany and $252,421,780 is silver. Now can it be possible that a silver dollar is dishonest money?

Please allow me to quote the exact words of Tom Reed in his speech in the House of Representatives, August 26, 1893. Those who have his speech can find it. In regard to tariff Mr. Reed says, on the third page of his speach, "I do not undertake to raise any question, as to whether the system of protection is a wise one or not. I do not undertake to dispute the proposition on the part of the Democracy that protection is a tax, wicked and iniquitous. For the purpose of discussion and for that purpose only I am quite free to admit that protection is a fraud and that virtue resides only in a revenue tariff, but there remains, even if it be admitted that the propositions of the Democratic platform are righteous every one. There remains the fact that the system upon which the manufactures of this country have been regulated for thirty years is threatened with a total change; whether that change is to to be for the better or not no man can know."

Why is it that Mr. Reed admits so much in regard to the tariff, it would seem from his own words that he is not such strong a believer in high protection.

Now, Mr Editor, as time and money are precious I will bring this communication to a close, hoping that what may be done by Congress may be done for the benefit of the masses and the country at large.

The time has come and now is when the people of this country demand wise and just Legislation.

Francis Wayland, D. D., on political economy says: "Protection tends to demoralize our national legislation." He also says: "Protection tends to corrupt the public morals and the public service." Wayland's works on Political Economy is counted the very best.

OLD SETTLER.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 29, 1893.

The use of money to defeat the Will those who have grown rich at the expense of the consumers of the country by reason of the so-called protection son tariff bill is the dominant idea of legislation of republicans. Returning democratic Congressmen from districts having protected manufacturers nearly all agree in saying that money is being freely spent by those manufacturers in order to work up a bogus public sentiment in those districts against the Wilson tariff bill, hoping thereby to influence the Rrepresentatives to vote against the bill. Not only are halls hired for meetings to be held to protest against the bill, but individuals are employed by the hundred to come to Washington, and to get signatures at home to petitions asking that the bill be not passed, and space is bought in the colums of impecunious newspapers which claim to be independent which is filled with shrewdly written articles adapted to the locality and intended to frighten the ignorant into the belief that the passage of the Wilson bill will be a local calamity of incalculable magnitude.

All of these things were expected. The democrats knew that the men who had grown rich by legislation would not see that legislation upset without spending a part of their easily acquired wealth to prevent it. But the money is wasted as far as its influence upon democratic Congressmen is concerned. It is easy to find democratic Congressmen who would like to change some schedule in the Wilson bill and who propose to state their reasons for desiring a change to the democratic caucus soon to be held and ask that it be made, but the number of democrats who will refuse to vote for the bill if the caucus does not agreee with them can be counted upon the fingers of one hand with fingers to spare. They generally recognize the fact that the Wilson bill is a party, not an individual measure, and that as good democrats it is their duty to support the bill as it will be approved by the democratic caucus, and they will do it. No party measure has ever been passed by the Congress that did not receive the votes of men whose personal inclinations and interests were opposed thereto and none ever will be. When a man cannot bring himself to vote for a party measure, particularly when it represents tariff reform, which has been the keystone of the democratic arch for so many years, it is high time that he should cease to call himself a party man or to expect to receive honors from the party he declines to support.

The presence of several democrats who would be willing to preside over the Government Printing Office, together with the knowledge that the period covered by the bond of the republican Public Printer will expire at midnight of next Sunday, makes it look as though the appointment of a new Public Printer would very shortly be made. The democrats have waited very patiently for this change to be made, as there are more places outside of the civil service rules in that office than in any other single branch of the government.

To have heard some of the men who think themselves entitled to advance knowledge of all the President's movements talk this week a foreigner would have supposed that President Cleveland committed a great crime when he went down the river in company with Secretaries Gresham and Carlisle for several days recreation without telling his would be guardian beforehand. The antics of these smart alecks would be amusing if they were not so absurd.

Representatives McMillan, of Tennessee, and Bryan of Nebraska, who were appointed a subcommittee by Chairman Wilson to report to the democrats of the Ways and Means committee of the House the features of the internal revenue bill that is to make up the deficit that will be made in the revenues of the government by the Wilson tariff bill, have decided upon the report. It will recommend that a tax of 2 per cent be imposed upon all incomes of $4,000 and over; that a tax be imposed on inheritances of personal property, the rate to be fixed later, that the tax on cigarettes be increased to $1.50 per 1,000, and that a tax of 5 per cent a pack be levied on playing cards. They estimate that a bill on these lines will bring in about $45,000,000.

A subcommittee of the senate committee on Foreign Relations, composed of Senators Morgan, Butler, Gray, Sherman and Frye, this week began the Hawaiian investigation authorized by Senator Morgan's resolution. They heard several witnesses friendly to the provisional government and adjourned until next Tuesday, when other witnesses will be here. Nothing will be made public until the work is finished and the report of the committee made.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A dispatch from Vienna to a news agency in this city says that Carcow (Poland) newspapers contain accounts of a recent abortive attempt to poison the Czar. According to these reports, on the 124th anniversary of the founding of the imperial order of St. George, a grand dinner was given to all those who had been awarded the decoration. The Czar as the head of the order, was present, and partook of the banquet. The first course was but half consumed and the Czar had ordered that what was left be sent to the Nicholos orphan asylum, where the children also ate of the food. Later in the evening the Czar, the guests at the banquet and the orphans were all taken sick, and an investigation revealed the fact that the fish had been poisoned The sickness in the orphan asylum was officially attributed to cholera. The above story is very similar in many respects to a dispatch sent out from St. Petersburg on Dec. 17. This dispatch stated that forty persons who had attended the banquet had been made sick by eating of a pie made of tainted meat and that fifteen of them had died. Their sickness, it was stated, resembled cholera.

PARIS has an insurance company that refuses to issue policies on the lives of any who use hair dyes.

NORWAY is the only country in the world which is not increasing its annual yield of cereals. The reason is found in climatic conditions.

THE man who got up that dangerous counterfeit one hundred dollar bill exhibited more ingenuity than judgment. A "five" is too big for the average man to change just now.

THE American Bell Telephone company's earnings in 1893 have been $8,960,000, which is nearly 20 per cent, on its capital of $20,000,000. The Bell patents expire next year.

AN Oakland (Cal.) man who was struck on the head by a flying bolt has come out of the surgeon's hands otherwise perfectly cured, but he cannot recognize his wife's mother. There will be a scramble for that bolt.

COL. ALTON R. EASTON, who died in St. Louis recently at the age of 87, had two towns named after him—Easton, Me., and Alton, Ill. He won a national reputation through his bravery in the Mexican and Black Hawk wars.

SOME of the dead game sports around Chicago have been beating the faro banks in a highly successful manner. They play single out; that is to say they single out the dealers at the point of a revolver and get a full deal with the limit removed.

THE four train robbers who held up the International express at Duval, Tex., recently have been sentenced to thirty-five years' imprisonment each. They admitted their guilt and thus secured the lightest sentence the law allowed. A few cases of this kind will have a wholesome effect upon train robbing.

WESTON'S big walk and good time from New York to Albany is a reminder of his great feat about twenty years ago, walking from Portland, Me., to Chicago. When he reached Chicago the streets were densely packed with people to see him. The long period since does not seem to have diminished his powers.

GEORGE C. HUNTER, of Oakland, Cal., has just come out of the surgeon's hands without a memory. His skull was fractured by a flying bolt and the brain was injured. Although he is now otherwise perfectly well he cannot remember his wife or his mother. Although he had a good education, he can now neither read nor write.

IT is thirty-four years since Blondin aroused the interest of small boys the world over by walking across Niagara falls on a tight-rope. That was a generation ago, and it is not surprising to learn that he will soon be 70 years old. But his skill in aerial feats has not abated, and he is now amusing the patrons of London's crystal palace.

IN France hay is so scarce that the minister of agriculture has authorized the free gathering of all the fallen leaves in the forests. The grace and magnanimity of this act may be better understood when it is known that to gather these leaves without permission is punishable by a fine of thirty francs if a horse is used in gathering, or six francs if only a man or woman pack off what they can carry in sacks.

THE biggest winner on the English turf the past season was Mr. McCalmont, whose winnings were $127,000, while the most successful turfman in France took in $170,000. Mr. Keene, of the American turf, led both these gentlemen with winnings of $270,000, and $190,000 of this was won by Domino alone. These winnings are exceptional. There are hundreds of men who tried to win and lost on the horse during the past season.

SANTA CLAUS is a pretty myth, and it is well to allow him to remain so. A Pennsylvania farmer is to-day of that opinion. He decided to do the Santa Claus act, and make a descent down the chimney of his home. Everything went well until he got to the center of the chimney, and there he stuck. His yells for aid made the family leave the house terror-stricken, and the chimney had to be partially torn down and the assistance of three men secured before he was extricated.

A PHILOSOPHER says: "There are three things which a good woman ought to resemble in one particular, but not in another. Thus, she ought to be like a snail, which always keeps in the house, but she should not copy its example in putting all she possesses on her back. She should resemble the echo, which never speaks unless spoken to, but she ought not, like the echo, always try to have the last word. Lastly, she ought to be true and correct as the town clock, but she ought not, like the clock, to make noise enough to be heard all over the town."

A NEW YORK medical man announces that transfusion has been applied successfully in the treatment of epilepsy. The material injected is prepared from the vital organs of the sheep, the greatest care being exercised in securing its absolute purity, and fresh preparations considered necessary daily. The hypodermic puncture is made in the side, just above the hip joint. The aim in this treatment is to supply the nervous force with naturally-prepared food from a clean, healthy animal, which will assimilate with the blood and nourish without unduly stimulating the nervous system.

CHICAGO divorces will "go" in Canada hereafter. A few years ago Mr. Foster, the finance minister of the dominion, married a Chicago grass widow, but both the governor general and the premier refused to invite her to their receptions. Lord Aberdeen, the new governor general, however, has disregarded the precedent set by his predecessor, and Mrs. Foster is finally established in Canadian society. There are few things that a Chicago grass widow fails to accomplish if she sets about it, even to overcoming long-established precedents of monarchical governments, if it suits her purpose to do so.

ITS FAIR NOW OPEN.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—Owing to the rainy weather in the last month and delay in arrival of exhibits, mostly foreign, from Chicago, the formal opening of the California midwinter exposition was not made Monday, but will be made in a few days. The gates of the fair were opened to the public, however. The midwinter fair band was in attendance and many of the concessional features were in full blast, and many persons availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the grounds and buildings in advance of the formal opening.

The site of the exposition is one of the most beautiful imaginable. In a spacious basin at the foot of Strawberry hill, in Golden Gate park, surrounded by trees and gentle slopes that protect it from high winds, the landscape gardener has prepared 160 acres as a foundation and setting for the work of the architects. Golden Gate is in plain view and the magnificent bay of San Francisco, bordered by the city itself, splendid Oakland and lovely Berkeley, and dotted with islands and spreading sails, furnishes a glorious panorama of beauty.

The five main buildings—Manufactures, Mechanics, Agricultural and Horticultural, Fine Arts and Administration—are excellent examples of the modern treatment of ancient architectural models. The first named is the largest. It is 450 feet long, 250 feet wide and 55 feet high, of the Moorish type and exceedingly picturesque. The cost of this structure has been about $150,000. A. Page Brown, who designed the California building at the world's fair, was the architect.

Next in importance as in size to the Manufactures is the Hall of Mechanic Arts, which has cost about $100,000. It is East Indian in style and resembles the buildings so common in Delhi. The dimensions are 324 feet in length by 160 feet in depth and 60 feet in height. In the rear is an annex 246 by 35 feet, which contains thirty boilers of 100 horse-power each. The exterior is covered with staff and the roof with gilding. E. R. Swein is the architect.

The Administration building—also designed by A. Page Brown — resembles somewhat the world's fair building of the same name. It is Byzantine-Gothic, with Moresque ornamentation. In plan it is square, with hexagonal towers at the corners, each supporting a small dome. From the center of the building, and conveying the impression that it receives its support from the four small towers, extends a hexagonal tower bearing a splendid dome in general outline harmonious with the smaller ones. Each tower has a projecting battlement and there is a garden on the roof all around the big dome. The domes are covered with gilt bronze and the general coloring is Byzantine in its richness. The entire structure is of wood and staff.

Samuel Newsom designed the Agriculture and Horticulture building, which is not very unlike the California building in Chicago. The whole building is 400 by 200 feet, and has cost about $90,000.

The Fine Arts building, designed by C. C. McDougall, is notable for its quaintness and originality. It is a collective and comprehensive illustration of the art of building as practiced by the Egyptians. The entrance is flanked by full columns grotesquely ornamented, which in the second story assume the form of, or give place to, elephants. A small pyramid surmounts the vestibule. The columns are of wood and surround a plain, solid, rectangular, fireproof brick structure which is intended to be permanent. The walls of the interior are decorated with curious Egyptian figures and hieroglyphs. The cost of the structure is about $75,000.

Of the sixty or more smaller buildings most are well under way and some are completed. They are all, except the county buildings, private concessions and are not shut off from the exposition proper, as was the case in the world's fair, but are scattered all over the grounds. The whole of "Sunset City" is a Midway Plaisance.

One of the most interesting features of the fair will be the collection of county buildings, after the fashion of the state buildings at the world's fair. Every county in the state will be represented—two or three to each building. The handsomest and most interesting of them all is the Los Angeles county or southern California exhibit, which is now nearly finished. The other county buildings are almost as well along.

The management hope and expect that the fair will be largely patronized by easterners. Rates have been reduced by the railways and every preparation for great travel has been made. But the bulk of the patronage, of course, will be furnished by the residents of the Pacific coast, who take a deep interest in the success of the enterprise. Last Sunday, when the grounds were inclosed for the first time, more than 5,000 people paid twenty-five cents each to enter. The facilities for transportation from the city to the park are complete and admirable.

To Amend Iowa's Prohibitory Law.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 3.—At its coming session the Iowa legislature will amend the prohibitory law. Several bills have already been prepared.

Death of a Jurist.

PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 3.—J. E. Bennett, presiding judge of the supreme court of South Dakota, died suddenly of heart failure in this city. He had been judge since the beginning of statehood and last November was elected for another term. He was a prominent Knight Templar and a Knight of Pythias.

Dropped Dead at the Bridal Altar.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 3.—While Mrs. Phœbe Johnson and John Cleaver were standing up to be married in this city Monday night the woman died of heart disease. She was 56 years old and the intended groom 50.

ROSTON'S PRIDE IN ASHES.

BOSTON, Jan. 3, 3 30 a. m.—Fire was discovered at 1:15 a. m. in the cloakroom of the Globe theater. The flames spread with great rapidity and at 1:20 the auditorium was a mass of flames. An alarm was rung in from the Globe theater box at 1:20 o'clock, followed by a second, third, fourth and general alarm. At 2 o'clock it seemed as if the entire square in which the theater building is located would burn. This includes buildings between Essex, Washington and Harrison avenues and Hayward place. At this hour (3:30 a. m.) the fire seems to be under control. There is probably not one of the fifteen buildings in the square that is not more or less damaged. The total loss will be $500,000.

The loss on the Globe theater will be $250,000. Hanlon Brothers lose $100,000 worth of scenery used in the presentation of "Superba." The heaviest losers outside of theater are Bryant & Stratton's business college, C. E. Weyeth, hats and gloves; L. Benari, boots and shoes; R. T. T. Almy & Co., clothing; Flynn & Mahoney, printers and dealers in Catholic books and church furniture; S. C. Chase & Co., rubber goods; Hotel Pierpont, Leach's sewing macnine emporium; Wilcox & Gibbs, sewing machines. The insurance is not known definitely, but an agent said he felt certain one-half the loss was covered.

At 1:50 the flames spanned an alley in the rear of the theater, setting fire to the corset factory of John P. Harner on the Harrison avenue extension. The firemen were then driven from this building, from which they had been fighting the fire. They hardly had left the roof when an explosion occurred and flames shot into the air 50 feet. Five minutes later another explosion occurred and within ten minutes there were three more explosions. The explosions were presumably of gas.

[The Globe theater is the second theater of that name on the site. The first, originally named Selwyn's theater, was built in 1867, and in 1873 was destroyed by fire. The structure just burned was built in 1874. John H. Selwyn, Charles Fechter and W. R. Floyd were successively its managers. The theater was the enterprise of Dexter H. Follett and Arthur Cheney. After the retirement of Mr. Follett Mr. Cheney continued as sole proprietor. In the rebuilt theater 150 seats were held by gentlemen, each one having paid $1,000 for his seat, and to this extent they were stockholders. Mr. Chesney died in November, 1878. He was succeeded in the management by John Stetson, once the proprietor and manager of the Howard athenæum. For a brief season Mr. Stetson conducted the theater with Mr. Cheney, and thereafter for another season alone. Then the theater was closed until the autumn of 1879, when the lessees of the estate took possession of the property. January 1 following Mr. Stetson obtained from all the lessees, with the exception of Asa P. Morse, leases of the theater for six months, and in October, 1880, he succeeded in obtaining a satisfactory lease for ten years. He greatly altered and improved the theater, adding to its attractiveness, and so adorned and beautified it as to make it one of the most inviting and best appointed play houses in the city. Its stage was counted one of the best in the country. The auditorium was 60 feet in height.]

DEED OF AN OMAHA MAN.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 3.—Fire started in a cottage owned by John Cummings at 515 South Fourteenth street at about 2:15 o'clock Sunday morning. The fire was quickly extinguished by the department. Four bodies were discovered huddled together in the corner of the bedroom. They were the remains of John Cummings and wife, one child 3 years old and Mrs. Margaret Fox, mother of Mrs. Cummings. The story of the fire as related by Willie Fox, grandchild of Margaret Fox, is peculiar.

John Cummings had been ill in the bedroom adjoining the sitting-room in which the family were seated at the time. The child was with the father. Young Fox said the mother, who was reading a book, arose from beside the stove and went in the room. Mr. Cummings overturned the lamp, which was standing on the center table, and the house immediately took fire. Mr. Cummings closed the bedroom door and according to the story of the boy held it tightly shut. The four human beings were penned up and could not escape. They were burned to a crisp in the devouring flames. Young Fox was in the sitting-room. He attempted to open the bedroom door, but in vain, and when the fire burst into the room in which he was he was driven into the street. Cummings was a heavy drinker and had been suffering from excessive drinking for some time. It is supposed that he had an attack of delirium tremens and was in an insane fit when he committed the awful deed.

A TEXAS TRAGEDY.

CEDAR, Tex., Jan. 3.—In a dance here Lemon Gayle became boisterous and attacked a rival, E. N. Williams. Gayle, his brother, Loudon Galye, and Robert Ealy began firing at Williams and others. Loudon Gayle shot through the window and killed two boys, Eli Waddy and Isaac Scott. A perfect fusilade followed from guns and pistols. A woman was killed. Lemon Gayle was shot through the body and will die. A girl was wounded in the face and another in the head. Others received slighter wounds. Loudon Gayle is in jail, and it is reported that Ealy has been captured.

A TERRIBLE LEAP.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Mr. and Mrs. Magnus Ahlberg of No. 548 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street celebrated the new year by entertaining a party of friends Sunday night. The guests were looking at a Christmas tree when it caught fire. Mrs. Ahlberg's clothing ignited and, although her year-old babe was in her arms, she ran to a window and jumped out, falling four stories to the pavement below. She is not expected to live. The baby was killed. The loss to the building was $25,000.

A BIG PIE.

ASHLAND, Wis., Jan. 3.—The sensation of New Year's day here was the feeding of 1,000 children on a mince pie 22 feet in circumference and 4 inches thick, weighing nearly a quarter of a ton. Half dollars contributed by hotel guests were put in the pie edgewise and drawn in each piece. Over 1,000 pieces were given out from this one pie to children, and it proved a happy and a novel gift to the hundreds of poor children.

MANCHESTER REJOICES.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 3.—The great ship canal from Eastham to Manchester is now an accomplished fact, and the town of Manchester, situated about forty miles from the seaboard, can be reached by sea from New York about ten hours after arriving at Liverpool. On December 7 a steamer conveying the directors made the entire journey of the canal, but the formal opening did not take place until New Year's day.

The weather was brilliant and the occasion was made notable in every way possible. There was much rejoicing in this city and all along the line of the canal. The mayors and corporations of Manchester and Salford started for Latchford, and at Modewheel joined the sea vessels which arrived here after a three hours' passage, and were cheered by over 100,000 people.

The procession started at an early hour from Warrington-on-the-Mersey, 16 miles east of Liverpool. At the head of the procession was the steamer Norseman, conveying the directors. It was followed by other steamers bearing the members of the corporations of Manchester and Salford. A number of sea-going vessels, decorated with flags and bunting, joined these steamers at the Modewheel locks.

There were twenty-five cargo-laden vessels in the procession. Some of them were from the leading British ports, while others were from Mediterranean ports, Holland and Norway. Everything appeared to work satisfactorily and the vessels were locked through the canal with considerable rapidity. The first six vessels of the fleet occupied three hours in making the passage to Salford dock, a place that has now 3½ miles of quays. All the swing bridges over the canal worked admirably.

Monday's ceremony was performed with much eclat, and the procession was greeted with hearty cheers as it passed along in the direction of Manchester. Though Monday saw the formal opening of the canal it is hoped the queen or prince of Wales will open it with elaborate ceremonies at Easter.

The route of the procession was about 14 miles long. Probably 750,000 persons visited some part of the canal during the day. There was no hitch whatever in carrying out the day's programme.

In order to realize the full significance of the opening of the canal and of all that it implies one must consider the sudden creation of a great port in direct communication with all parts of of the world, close to and partly within the confines of an immense commercial city and surrounded by an industrial population of 3,250,000.

Besides the actual canal the docks are of a most extensive character. The smaller docks and quays and the upper reach will be principally occupied by coasting vessels, while in the larger docks will be moored ships from the United States, Canada, India, etc. At other docks are accommodations for cattle, and, in fact, Manchester has at a stroke become one of the largest and most important ports in the united kingdom.

The work is the outcome of a series of long investigations in parliamentary committees in the years 1883, 1884 and 1885. The supporters of the canal, who spent £150,000 in obtaining the act, were the manufacturers and merchants of Manchester, and its principal opponent was the corporation of Liverpool. With the use of the electric light steamers will be able to navigate by night as well as by day, and the whole length of the canal will be traversed in about ten hours.

Some notion of the capacity of the canal may be arrived at when compared with the Suez and Amsterdam canals. The minimum width of the bottom of the Suez is 72 feet and of the Amsterdam 88 feet 7 inches, while that of the Manchester canal is 120 feet. The minimum depth of the Manchester and Suez waterways is 26 feet and that of the Amsterdam canal 23 feet.

A statement signed by 182 steamship owners, possessing more than 1,000 steamers, of an aggregate net tonnage of about 1,000,000 tons—more than 25 per cent. of the entire steamship tonnage of the united kingdom—declares that the canal will be navigable without difficulty by merchant steamers of the largest class, and that if the charges on the ship canal are not higher than those of the other ports ship owners will at once make use of the waterway.

It is believed that the quantity of grain carried over the canal will be at least one-half of that now landed at Liverpool. It is estimated that at least 105,000 tons per annum of fruit and vegetables will at once be imported to Manchester by this route. The large sugar merchants have stated that not less than 300,000 tons of sugar per annum will pass through the canal. With regard to raw cotton firms in the district owning 18,000,000 spindles declare that nearly all the cotton they use will be brought by the canal.

Of outward cargoes there will be no lack, and textile manufacturers have testified their belief that about 500,000 tons per annum will be dispatched by the new canal.

Ten Thousand Houses Searched.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The police all over France searched the dwelling places of all supposed anarchists Sunday night. They visited 10,000 houses in all and arrested a number of persons, chiefly in St. Etienne, Lyons, Marseilles and Paris.

FOR A TWO-HOUR DAY.

Secretary of State Osborn, of Kansas, Thinks That Ought to Be the Limit.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 3.—Secretary of State Osborn, of Kansas, has prepared a circular in which he avocates laws making two hours a day the limit of work of each man. He holds that labor-saving machinery has made such progress that one man is now able to do as much work as twenty seventy-five years ago, and he believes that over production is responsible for the idleness of millions to-day. This, he holds, would be done away with if two hours should be made the day's work limit.

MORTON LOSES A TOE.

The Ex-Vice President Has the Member Amputated by Paris Surgeons.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—It has become known that ex-Vice President Morton had an operation on his left foot performed in Paris three weeks ago. While in England Mr. Morton was troubled with pain in his left foot. The doctors said it was gout. Mr. Morton went to Paris, and there the doctors said the trouble was not gout, but that it was advisable to amputate one of his toes, which was done. The latest news from Mr. Morton was that he was doing well.

Dropsy Can Be Cured.

I feel it my duty to make known the benefit I have derived from Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood, after having suffered for over a year with DROPSY. I had employed the most skillful physician obtainable, but he was unable to cure me. My limbs were swollen so bad that I could hardly walk about the house, and I felt as if life had almost left me. My family and friends said that I could live but a very short time. However, I got a bottle of Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood. After taking it four days, I could feel that it was helping me, for I could eat lots better, and I felt that I was gaining strength. After I had taken the most of the bottle, I sent for another, and now by the wonderful help of Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood, I can positively say that I am entirely cured. My neighbors and my family are ready to testify with me at any time. I am sixty-three years old, and am again able to do light housework. MRS. J. N. SMITH.

Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood is made only by The J. R. Watkins Medical Co., Winona, Minn. If your druggist don't keep it, they will send it to you upon receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle, 3 bottles for $2.50, delivered free by express to any part of the U. S.)

STRUTHERS' ADVENTURE

Result of His Efforts to Save the Sukia's Daughter.

Struthers was discontented, so was Bones; the causes were different, but the effect the same.

Struthers had knocked about Central America for almost four months on a vain quest for adventures which would make his college vacation a unique one, and fill his room at the "Hall" with trophies and the boys' ears with thrilling stories.

Bones was beginning to rebel at the society of native curs, whose combined forces did not suffice to give him a semblance of the delightful scrimmages he was wont to have in Cambridge.

Struthers' latest vagary—and owing to his father's liberality he was able to indulge in many such—was the chartering of a small native schooner. With a crew of six black Caribs he was now skirting the Mosquito shore of Honduras on his way to Cabo Gracios a Dios, where he expected to catch a homeward bound steamer.

He yearned for the delights of civilization and ice, and felt that, after all, the conventional pleasures of tennis, canoeing and dancing at Bar Harbor were perhaps preferable to the uncertain joys of mule back and hunting in the wilds of Central America.

His classmates would hardly have recognized in this bronzed faced, white clad young man, sprawling on the deck of that little craft in the Carribean sea, the immaculate Struthers, who had left Cambridge such a short time ago, rich in hopes and the possession of a most complete and painfully new hunting and camping outfit.

The outfit, or what remained of it, was rusty and battered, but the hardships which had wrought this change in his "impedimenta" had been vastly beneficial to the owner in hardening his muscles and broadening his shoulders.

With Bones things had not gone so well; an almost steady diet of bananas had made him thin, and between the chigoes and garrapatas very little of his glossy coat was left, save in shreds and patches.

"It's too bad, Bones, old fellow; they haven't left you much hair," said Struthers. "Never mind, your troubles will soon be over. I say, Ossorio," turning wrathfully upon the Carib captain, "what is this beastly, old country of yours good for, anyway? I haven't had a decent adventure or seen anything worth telling, in the whole length and breadth of it!"

"You haven't seen him all, Buckra," replied the Carib, a splendid specimen of that race of semi-civilized black smugglers, who dart along the Caribbean coast in their swift dories.

"Perhaps you're right, Ossorio, about the plenty fun. At any rate, I'll have another try at amusement before I cut the country; so put about and make for some river you think your friends, the Waikas, may live near."

Soon they were sailing along the low sandy coast which lay to the left, and as they rounded a little cape Struthers cried out: "Look, there's the mouth of the river."

"I see him," answered the Carib, "make we put in dere. I tink me, p'raps, see Waika town soon by."

The Carib's supposition was correct, for the schooner was soon near enough for them to perceive the high-peaked thatched roofs and bamboo walls of the native houses nestling among the waving palms and plumy cocoanut trees which lined the river bank.

The schooner was over the bar and abreast of the village before the natives were aware of their presence.

Then they came running and jumping down to the river bank like so many children, in high glee over the arrival of strangers and the possibility of beads, and perhaps a little rum.

"Queer lot," mused Struthers, surveying the dusky crowd which watched with intense interest the preparations for landing. "Don't look so much like darkies, in spite of their assorted degrees of color—Spanish blood, I suppose, mixed in. What costumes! Breech clouts for the men and scanty skirts for the women, but I fancy sealskins and ulsters would be rather out of place in this climate."

The landing was soon made, and the Carib, polyglot that he was, acted as interpreter in presenting Struthers to the old chief, Dama Pisano, who at once bid the strangers welcome and conducted them to his watla, or house.

Installed in a wide hammock within the semi-darkness of the watla, and a large gourd of cool pineapple mishla at his side, Struthers forgot his discontent and asked many questions of Pisano through the Carib.

He learned that the music they had heard was part of the ceremony attendant upon the death of an old sukia or "medicine man," whose funeral was to be held on the following day.

"To-morrow, at first sun up, de fun'ral begins. Dama Pisano asks you if you wan' to see him—better you do—maybe it 'muse you," said the Carib, with unconscious sarcasm.

At sunrise the next morning he was suddenly aroused by the rattle of musketry, followed by doleful howls and lamentations.

Rushing out of the watla, where he had spent the night, he saw a large pitpan (dugout) coming slowly down the river, while on the bank abreast of it marched two columns of Waikas, the men constituting one column, the women the other.

In the pitpan was the dead medicine man, his three widows and a solitary paddler.

The oarsman gave vent to his feelings in wailings, which were astonishingly loud in proportion to his size. The marching crowd on the bank was silent, save for the occasional discharge of musketry, to frighten away, the Carib said, Lassa, the devil, and his attendant evil spirits.

The pitpan made a landing, and the coffin, followed by the crowd of silent Waikas, was carried along a narrow trail into the forest.

Room was made for Struthers, Ossorio and Bones, and at a signal from Pisano the crowd fell back, the new sukia stepped forward and the ceremonies began.

Bending low over the swathed body, the sukia began in a low, rapid murmur to bewail his loss and recount the good deeds of the dead man; one by one the women joined in—the chant increased rapidly in velocity and volume until it formed a grand swelling chorus of distress, then slowly died away into an inarticulate sorrowing.

In a silence broken only by the muffled tones of the tom-toms and the sobs of the crouching women, the new sukia kneeled down and solemnly stuck little wooden images of men with uplifted sword-like machetes in the ground.

This, explained Ossorio, was to frighten away any evil spirits who might attempt to steal the body.

The dead man's entire kit of weapons and a bunch of plantains was placed in the coffin with him, to protect and feed him on his long journey to the land of everlasting felicity.

Again the low-murmured wail began and continued until it reached a frenzied pitch. Faster beat the drum and faster whirled the women about the open grave in a wild ecstatic dance until, weak and dizzy, they sank to the ground, squirming and clutching at the grass about them while the foam flicked from their mouths as from rabid animals.

Once more silence fell upon the assembled crowd. The sukia stepped to the grave and with his machete dispatched three dogs and a cat which were to bear the dead man company on his journey.

"I say, Ossorio, this is horrible—it's voodooism—let's go," muttered Struthers.

"Yes, Buckra, obeah an' voodoo; de Waikas long time come from Africa; dey still keep up er r'ligion ob der faders. But make me wait; he stop now, see, dey do something else," added the Carib, as the natives swayed back.

The crowd parted and two hideous old hags stepped into the open, dragging between them a trembling young native girl, who cast terrified glances before her.

"What do you mean—who is going to whip her, and for what reason?" demanded Struthers.

"De Waika man tell me de dead sukia's her fader," answered the Carib. "Waika always whip de 'lations of de dead man at de fun'ral; maybe she do something when he live he no whip her for—dey whip her now for shuah."

Hardly had the Carib spoken, when a brawny Waika buck stepped forward with a heavy manatee whip, which flashed through the air down upon the girl's shrinking shoulders, and left a long red welt of tortured flesh.

A shriek burst from the girl and she writhed and twisted vainly to escape from the clutches of the hags who held her.

"Look out, Ossorio, I can't stand this," gasped Struthers. "I'm going to stop it!"

But the faithful Bones, who had crouched till then at Struthers' feet, relieved them from all further responsibility, for, as the Waika raised his arm for the second lash, Bones, at a whispered word from Struthers, gave a low growl, and, gathering himself together, made one of his famous jumps and launched his forty odd pounds of bone and muscle straight at the executioner's breast.

It was all so sudden that the Waika was down, with Bones at his throat, before the assembled crowd realized what had happened.

Then, with fierce yells, machetes were drawn and the men made a rush at Bones.

Struthers and Ossorio were before them, however, the former vowing he would shoot the first man who touched the dog.

Bones, obedient to his master's command, released the Waika, who, staggering to his feet, rushed to the grave and, seizing from beside it a loaded musket, raised it to take aim at Struthers.

Before he could fire, a knife thrown by the Carib pierced his right arm, which fell limp at his side.

"Make fo' de boat," roared the Carib, "or we done for, shuah!"

To make a stand against such overwhelming numbers was madness, so the two men dashed into the trail behind them, hot pursued by the shrieking, maddened mob of Waikas.

On and on they dashed, till they were breathless, till their hearts beat against their breasts, as though they would burst through. With every step their pursuers seemed to gain, and Struthers was about to give up in despair when a glimmer in the heavy shade ahead revealed the river.

They crashed out into the open, and in an instant had jumped into the pitpan, which had recently borne the corpse of the sukia, and were well out into the river when the angry Waikas emerged from the forests.

The yells of the disappointed natives spurred them to swifter paddling, and they were on the schooner's deck before the Waikas could launch another dugout.

The Waikas were too cautious to risk an immediate attack, but soon had a dozen pitpans manned and armed.

"O, for a breeze," cried Struthers, "to take us out over the bar and away from these heathens!"

But no breeze came, though the anchor was catted and all sail set ready for the wind.

On came the Waikas, the war drums beating, the gourds rattling, and the men yelling like demons.

Closer and closer crept the pitpans, while the men on the schooner lay close to the deck and awaited the onslaught.

Suddenly, amid the pandemonium raised by the Waikas, came sounds of rasping and creaking overhead. The Carib looked anxiously aloft from his place under the bulwarks and gave a cry of gladness.

Hardly had he spoken when a shout of anger came from the Waikas. Struthers, raising his head above the taffrail, saw the pitpans slowly falling behind, while the freshening breeze carried them faster and faster toward the open sea.

For a long time he watched the receding canoes until they were but specks far stern. Finally the Carib touched his shoulder.

"Bucka," said Ossorio, "we are out at sea now. Which way must I head de dory? You want to make for Cabo Gracios an' de home steamer, or you tink you want to hab some more 'ventures?"

Struthers turned slowly upon the questioner; he looked first at the peaceful Bones, who was slumbering blissfully on a coil of rope, then at the fading shore line, and replied with a little catch in his voice:

"No, Ossorio, I think this adventure will do me for a time—let it be Cabo Gracios and the steamer."—Steven Vail, in Boston Globe.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—In 1851 an iron manufacturer of Pittsburgh sent to the London exhibition a letter written on a sheet of iron rolled to one-thousandth of an inch in thickness, or about as thin as the finest tissue paper ever made. Competition has continued the experiments, until a firm in Swansea has rolled a sheet 10x5½ inches, which weighs only 20 grains, and would require 4,800 to make an inch in thickness.

—The superintendent of transportation on the Brooklyn bridge says that constant inquiry is being made for some system better than that in use, but he doubts whether it can be found. With the cable it is impossible for one train to crawl up on another, and largely for this reason there has been a wonderful freedom from accidents. The passengers carried now number 297,000,000 and not one has been killed.

—An English journal is responsible for the stat ment that an attempt is being made to form a ladies' whistling club in London. All candidates will have to satisfy the committee that they are fairly proficient before being elected. One or two thoroughly accomplished teachers will be engaged to give instruction in the higher branches of the art, and whistling duets, trios and glees will be made a special feature.

—An Oklahoma merchant carelessly allowed a few castor beans to get mixed with his oats. He probably thought nothing of it at the time, and sold the oats to a stable keeper. Several of the horses to which the grain was fed sickened and died. Veterinary surgeons said it was the result of eating the castor beans. The stable keeper sued for damages and the careless grain dealers were compelled, by order of the court, to pay $550.

—There are 244 life-saving stations, 182 being on the Atlantic, forty-nine on the lakes, twelve on the Pacific coast and one at the falls of the Ohio. During the last fiscal year the number of disasters to vessels within the field of the service was 427. There were on board these vessels 3,565 persons, of whom 3,542 were saved and twenty-three lost. Value of property imperiled was $8,098,075, and the amount saved was $6,442,505. The number of vessels totally lost was eighty-eight. The cost of maintenance of the service during the year $1,231,893.

—A tin can filled with a melted mass of silver weighing about eight pounds was found last week by a quarryman near Ronda, Tex., buried about two feet below the surface in the banks of a creek some twelve miles from the Red river. While Texas was yet a Spanish province a road known as the Santa Fe trail ran along beside the Red river, and it is surmised that the silver was buried by some traveler who was hard pressed by Indians, and who either was killed or who could not afterward locate his buried treasure. The trunk of an old saddle, found near the same place a short time ago, was probably part of the same wayfarer's equipment.

—Wynn Molesworth has invented and constructed a very ingenious "celestial clock," which was exhibited at the first winter meeting of the Royal Astronomical society. The entire face of the clock rotates under a wire bar representing the equatorial horizon and is regulated to perform one revolution in twenty-three hours fifty-six minutes four seconds, this being the time in which the earth turns once upon its axis. The apparent annual motion of sun, moon and planets in the opposite direction is effected by movable pins, while the north and south polar stars, that do not rise or set for us, revolve simultaneously with the rest by a separate movement. Thus may be seen the entire heavens, with sun, moon, planets and constellations in their actual places, ever rising and setting as they rise and set in the heavens.

—The officials of the Prussian state railways have for several years been making use of petroleum in order to remove the incrustations in the boilers of locomotives and fixed machinery. These trials have been so satisfactory that petroleum is now used in every case where the incrustations are not too hard and impermeable. Petroleum is used after washing the boiler and after the compartments of the latter are completely dried; the petroleum is applied with the aid of brushes or injected by means of a pump. On some occasions an attempt has been made to make use of petroleum before the water in the boiler has been removed. In this case, the Journal of the Society of Chemical Industries says, the petroleum spreads uniformly over the whole surface of the water, and when the latter is allowed to run out slowly the petroleum fixes itself regularly in the porous incrustations, which absorb it.

TELLING THE TIME.

A Curious Phenomenon Which Seems Almost Incredible.

Actual and repeated experiments have shown that the nearest hour of the day or night may be ascertained in the following very curious way:

Make a small running loop in a piece of sewing thread about a foot in length, place a shilling in this loop, see that the coin is accurately bisected by the thread and then draw the loop tight up, so that the shilling is firmly slung at one end of the thread. Put on a solid table a glass tumbler with a fairly wide mouth. Rest your right elbow on the table in a firm and easy position so as to avoid any shakiness in your hand, hold the other end of the thread between your first finger and the "ball" of your thumb (i. e., the fleshy top joint of the thumb) so that the thumb nail is undermost and a few inches above the middle of the mouth of the glass.

Now, if you keep your hand quite steady the movement of the coin (which is hanging inside the tumbler) will become less and less until the shilling is motionless. Then, in half a minute or so, a very slight and regular vibration will commence, the coin oscillating from side to side like a pendulum, and gradually increasing the length of movement until it gently strikes the side of the glass.

This strike goes on in the most regular and automatic way, first on one side of the glass and then on the other, until, say, eight strokes have been struck; the vibrations of the coin then diminish in length, until the suspended shilling again becomes motionless and hangs in the middle of the tumbler. You look at your watch and find that eight o'clock is the nearest hour.

I have tried this over and over again, deliberately setting about the experiment without bias or any intention of influencing the swing of the coin, and also being ignorant of the time, and when my hand has been steady, the right time has invariably been struck. —London Tid-Bits.

—Harriet Ann Weed died in New York the other night. She was nearly seventy-five years old, and was the oldest daughter of Thurlow Weed, the journalist and politician, and the last but one of his children to die. Her life was devoted entirely to her father until his death. She was his secretary, his confidante and his close friend through all the later years of his life. She lived only for her father, and when he died her work was done.

—The late John Hope, of Edinburgh, was a man of many peculiarities. He had a peculiar horror of boys smoking in the streets. Whenever he met an urchin with a pipe in his mouth he would stop and lecture him on the evils of smoking. Generally he finished his homily by purchasing the pipe and destroying it in the boy's presence. This method of advancing the cause of the Anti-Tobacco league did not meet with much success, as the boys usually invested the money in new pipes and a further supply of tobacco.

—Ex-Judge Jeremiah Smith, an instructor in the Harvard law school, is supposed to be the youngest child of a revolutionary soldier. He is fifty-six years old. His father was Judge Jeremiah Smith, of New Hampshire, who was one of the most prominent figures in the early history of that state, and who entered the revolution army at the age of seventeen. His son was born when he was seventy-eight years old. The present Judge Smith has been a member of the New Hampshire supreme court, but resigned on account of ill-health in 1874.

A ROYAL ROMANCE.

Facts Concerning Emperor William's Marriage.

When the present emperor of Germany was little more than a boy he fell in love with his cousin, the eldest daughter of the grand duke of Hesse. A union with this lady would have seriously interfered with a policy upon which Bismarck had at that time set his heart, so the old emperor told his grandson to turn his thoughts elsewhere. The prince is quoted as answering the kaiser thus: "Choose whom you like. It is the same to me so long as she is not one of the English lot;" for the young man had long before that time conceived a violent dislike for his mother's country and people and seldom lost an opportunity of displaying his feelings in that regard. The Princess Augusta of Augustenburg was then a fine looking blonde girl, with pink and white complexion, splended physique, a cheerful, unaffected manner and trained in the frugal habits of the ducal court of Dolzig. She was chosen as a possible brid in view of healing the breach between the Holsteiners and the Prussians. After a brief courtship the couple were married in February, 1881, in the schloss chapel of Berlin. The emperor being very fond of her, as did all those who were about her during those early years. She possessed a winning, gently dignity, great powers of self control, and an art of healing all quarrels by a word in the right place. She was the mother of five boys when she became empress, and, notwithstanding her royal position, she remains an ideal domestic housewife, who stays at home and looks after the house in true German fashion. She does not lead in the social world, and has no female friends, the emperor being her only confidant.

The latter is said to have developed into an affectionate and devoted husband, having been soon won over by his wife's sweetness to a warmth of feeling which was hardly to be expected considering the indifference with which he at first contemplated his marriage. The empress is a woman of simple tastes, almost her sole extravagance being in baby clothes. All the garments worn by her children are made by German needlewomen under her personal supervision. She does not care for foreign fashions or literature, although she understands English and French. Among her pet treasures is a set of photographs of her husband and she methodically keeps a diary which no one sees, each volume being locked away in her jewel safe at the end of the year. At ten o'clock the empress receives her housekeeper and attends to the luncheon and dinner menus, always including one or two favorite dishes of her husband. A few moments every morning are spent in the linen room, and not a sheet or a duster is given out except under her direction. At eleven she goes riding with the emperor or walking with two of her boys. Luncheon comes at one, and all the children, except the last baby, are present at this meal, which is conducted without much ceremony. After luncheon the emperor and empress play with the children for an hour. The present ruler is the only kaiser to whom six sons have been born in uninterrupted succession. The empress receives from three to five, and the dinner hour is from six to seven, as many as fifty guests being invited sometimes. Beside each plate is a menu in German, no foreign dish being allowed on the table, every detail being closely watched by the imperial hostess. Every night she and her husband visit the children's rooms before retiring, and if there is the slightest illness among them she sits up all night and sees that the doctor's instructions are obeyed. She takes no interest in politics beyond invariably approving her husband's plans.—Pall Mall Gazette.

SOMETHING THAT GROWLED.

A Story Showing Just What Should Be Done with an Escaped Lion.

A circus train had been smashed up at the junction, many of the cages had been broken and their occupants had had a chance to escape to the woods and fields. While we were waiting for the wrecking crew to clear the debris away an old darkey with a business look about him approached the circus manager and asked:

"Boss, do I git anythin' if I cotch de giraffee what got away last night?"

"No giraffe got away," was the reply.

"Wall, I cotched sunthin' ober on my place dat must have got away from somebody. My ole woman dun says it's a giraffee, but mebbe it's a elefant."

"Our elephants are all here, but one of the camels is gone."

"Does it look like a horse or a cow?"

"No, sah. My boy Henry says it's a nosceros, but I'ze a leetle suspishus dat it hain't."

"We have no rhinoceros, but it may be our sacred bull from India."

"No."

"Does he walk around a nigger's cabin an' take a dog by the neck an' shake de life outer him an' roar an' roar?"

"No. It must be one of our lions. You don't mean to say you have captured a lion?"

"Can't say, boss. It's sunthin' dat growls an' roars an' switches his tail. Him didn't wanter cum along, but I jest tied a rope around his neck an' made him. He's tied up to dat tree ober dar, an' I reckon yo' orter gimme 'bout two bits fur my trubble."

About fifty of us went up the road with the old man, and a quarter of a mile away, tied to a persimmon tree and looking mightily disgusted, was the biggest lion of the menagerie.

"Dunno if it's an elefant, or a nosceros, or a giraffee," said the old darky as he went up and began loosening the rope, "but yere he am, an' bein' as he killed my dawg, an' bein' as I had to drag him all de way ober, mebbe yo' will make it fo' bits."

"Great Scott, man," gasped the manager as he gave the darky a silver dollar, "didn't you know this was a lion, and the fiercest one of the whole lot?"

"No. Nebber dun knowed what he was. Jest got a rope an' made him cum along, an' when he growled an' roared I hammered him wid dis stick. Much obleeged, sah. I will now go out an' see if I can't dun cotch sunthin' wid wings on it!"—N. Y. Sun.

SHE WAS A HIGH KICKER.

An Intelligent Cow That Was Trained to Knock Flies Off Anything.

"You can brag about human intelligence in your dog," said the man with the white slouch hat. "I tell you that as between intelligence in dogs and cows, dogs don't hold a candle. Why a cow knows more in a minute than a dog does in all the course of its natural existence."

"I never supposed," said the fellow with the creased trousers, who had been talking about his dog, "that a cow had any great shakes of brains."

"Well, I guess," asserted the man with the white slouch hat, "cows has got brains and to spare. For a fact, if it wasn't for a swelling of the tongue caused by the chewin' of the cud, I know a breed of cows that could be made to talk."

"Pshaw," said the fellow with the creased trousers, "you're talking through that sombrero."

"I am, am I?" asked the first speaker angrily; "well, lemme tell you somethin' that I done with a cow once. I had a partickler fine Holstein, an' she was a great milker. One day she met with an accident and had her tail cut off in a feed-cutter. Now, as perhaps you know, the tail is the cow's great protector against flies. She uses that to get rid of all the insects that bother her, and without a tail this cow of mine was gettin' eat up with the pesky bugs. I watched her suffer, and as I couldn't fix no blanket for her I was just about to kill her and put her out of her agony. I was standin' in the barn one day watchin' this cow sufferin' from fly bites and seein' all the other cows gettin' along first rate by brushin' off the flies with their tails when a sort of movement that cow made brought an idee into my head.

"Thinks I, I'll just train that cow to kick off them flies. So I led her out on the barn floor and stood in front of her and kicked up into the air myself. I did this three or four times, and then I see that the cow understood. I turned her loose in the pastur', an' sure as I'm here she began to practice kickin'. She was kinder clumsy at first, but after awhile she got to be real handy with her legs. Why, she could kick a fly off the back of her neck with her hind hoof and never miss a stroke in her cud chewin'. She began to fatten up a bit, and bimeby she got so clever with her kickin' that she'd go around kickin' flies off the other cows. Oh, she was gay, I tell you. But she came to a bad end. One day the hired man was out in the barn and the cow see a fly on his ear. She kicked it off, but miscalkilated her distance somehow and give him a swipe alongside the ear that knocked him cold. I got afraid that she would be gettin' familiar the same way with the rest of the folks and I had to sell her."

"What became of her?" asked the young fellow with the creased trousers.

"Oh," said the man with the white slouch hat, as he moved away, "I hear she's doin' a serpentine dance out on the Midway playseng. Cows has got brains, I told you."—Buffalo Express.

of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance or from excesses. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a thousand and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps to pay postage.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

DELANO DIARY

—25 pounds of raisons for one dollar at C. H. Geeen & Co's.

—A down town sign says "SWEET SIGER for sale." It looks as if the artist had been sampling the article.

—Several of our citizens had an itinerant painter decorate their windows with signs last week, we have local talent that can beat it all hollow. Patronize home industry when you can.

—Simon Weldelee's residence has been released from quarantine and the homes of Geo P. Schaffer, Chas. M. Conzet, Elmer Babb, and John Swadner, added to that of Mrs. Sieloff, now makes up the list quarantined for diphtheria, in Delano.

—Attorney Culkin, has been in town aiding the village council in their efforts to secure streets to the residences of Wm. Hawker and W. D. Freeman. These people have to pay their share into the village treasury and furnish their own portable steeet lamps while contributing to the comforts of the balance of the citizens. Mr. C. informs us that they are liable in the near future to have a way to town.

—One morning last week on going to the barn Clark Sturman made the discovery that one of his fine roan horses had died during the night. He was lying in a pool of blood and his bowels protruded from an opening in the abdomen. Whether he committed "hari-kari" or was assisted in taking his departure from this world remains to be ascertained. Any one who would reak his vengence on a man by thus cowardly attacking his stock, must be a dangerous person to run at large. We would not be surprised to hear of some one leaving the country, very soon, such people are apt to end up at the gallows.

—The promiscuous burning of sulphur and use of poisonous drugs as disinfectants, while the family is in the house, is wrong, yet some in their anxiety and hope to prevent the dreaded diphtheria from their houses have been resorting to these means. Many of these inflame the mucous membrane of the throat and set up a condition which only the more surely invites the germs to locate. If white patches occur in the throat take half a teaspoonful of table salt in a teacup full of water and gargle the throat thoroughly if they do not wash out call a physician. It it best to follow one line of treatment, and not be mixing up every thing you can hear of. Plenty of good milk, coffee, bread and butter and beef steak, regularly taken are about as good preventatives as there is. Some cases need swaubing, some do not. The best way is to keep away from where it is, and keep people who have had it away until they are thoroughly disenfected.

—A meeting was held on New Years day and resolutions passed asking our citizens to be careful about spreading Diphtheria which has become epidemic in our village. Members of the Council, School Board and Board of Health were present and it was thought best to not open school at present, but recommend that all families keep their children at home, and that public meetings and visiting be suspended until the disease has subsided from among us. The disease has appeared in a very severe form. As is usual a great many are not very sick and are able to go about and are yet capable of infecting others with the worst forms. Don't go near any one who is not feeling in perfect health. As soon as one of the children complains put it in a room upstairs if possible, away from the rest of the family, and keep the others away from it until you are satisfied that it is not diphtheria. After your children have recovered have the house thorougly fumigated.

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Coolen's.

—C. H. Green & Co. are giving 22 pounds of granulated sugar for $1. They cannot be under sold.

—Delanoites have been kept pretty busy most of the week trying to keep the sidewalks cleaned of the beautiful fall of snow. Some of them have not succeeded entirely. Morris Corey has done about as well as any, besides banking up the house with the beautiful.

County Cullings.

The fine new Catholic church at Maple Lake was dedicated on the 27th of Dec.

Diphtheria still continues to claim new cases at Chaska despite the Board of Health's efforts.

The County Commissioners have elected Louis Haeffer chairman for the ensuing year. Steam fitters are measuring the Court House and the Board of Commissioners.

The Eagle has swarmed, and now announces that she is running under the "profit sharing basis which it is hoped and expected will prove satisfactory and successful." Of course this is owing to "the good Democratic times."

Court will be opened again at the county seat on January 8th. There are several important trials yet to be heard, among them that of James H. O'Laughlin for shooting John Maroney. Mr. M. having regained his health will of course make a differance in penalty should any be given.

Some candidates are said to be coming before the conventions for nomination next fall, who everybody knows to be entirely unfit to be placed on a ticket for any office in the gift of the people. Relegate them to the background in your caucus by sending only the best men as delegates to your conventions. This applies to all parties. If only good men are placed on all tickets we can have only good men in office what ever party wins.

The Bible and Money, is the heading to nearly a column editorial in the Buffalo Journal of last week, which starts out by saying: "There seems to be no mention in the old Testament of any other kind of money except metalic money, gold and silver and in the early ages these do not appear to have been coined but to have been weighed for each transaction." Further on he says: "There is not much mention made of 'money' neither is there of silver and gold." Quite a number of instances are given where these are mentioned, but some of the most noteworthy are overlooked, among them that Judas betrayed Jesus for money, for thirty pieces of silver. The Senator also leaves us to infer, as many do, that the reference to "scrip" means paper money. If he and his readers will look the matter up they will find the same word "scrip" used in 1 Sam. 17-40 where we are told "And he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepard's bag which he had, even in a scrip. This is the story of the preparation of Dayid to kill Goliah, and goes to show that 'scrip' has no reference to money but is a sort of a haversack for carrying victuals and other things.

The Wright County Agricultural Society are holding a meeting at Howard Lake today to arrange for a rousing fair next year It is to be hoped that they will offer large enough premiums on young stock, and good breeds, to induce farmers to strive to obtain one, and thereby get a bigger and better display than on former occasions. Also on farm and garden, dairy and other products and articles of manufacture, to bring out good displays. People like to see a good display of what our county can do better than they like to see too much gambling etc. If the community knew that the products of our county were well represented they would not need outside attractions to bring them together at the Fair and if our manufacturers, our farmers and others appreciated what an advertisement it is for them to have their articles viewed by the people from all parts of the county they would bring out displays from every township.

From California.

Hon. B. F. Christlieb, in a letter from Monrovia, Cal., to his old friend John H. McGary, of Independence, among other things says:

I found the weather here after arriving, on the 19th of December, much like our fall weather in Minnesota, not averaging so cold, or rather not running to the extremes of cold. I found that I could dispense with a fur cap and heavy overcoat, which I had already begun to wear in Minnesota. And December came in with very warm weather and continued so until the 19th, which depressed me very much, and on consulting a physician he advised me to come to this place arriving here on the 11th. I find it pleasanter here than in the large city of Los Angles and on a higher elevation and I think that the air is more suitable to such fellows as me. Less fog, also I am at a regular hotel, where we eat and sleep in the same building, furnished together. At Los Angeles rooms were furnished without board, only, and then victuals were furnished by restaurants, which seemed to be the only way that accomodations were to be had, and consequently a man was compelled to take a walk in traveling to his breakfast, and when arriving he could not just find a breakfast to suit him unless he went into a high priced establishment where the breakfast desired would cost him a considerable sum, perhaps more than a whole day's board and lodging at a good boarding house run in the ordinary way. Here I pay a good round price, but my living is in no way stinted as it was in Los Angeles, where even that cost me more than it does here, and then it was not so satisfactory in quality and quantity as at this place. As to benefit from change of climate I can say but little. I think that I notice a change in certain symtoms. I suppose the most that I can say is that I have escaped extreme cold weather in Minnesota under which I would have to remain in doors while here I can go out unless it is rainy or foggy. Although this is the time for the rainy season, I have seen no rain fall. It has rained once or twice in the night since I came here, the morning and day following being foggy and cloudy. At Los Angeles it is foggy almost every morning. I have been here three mornings, two of which were foggy and one was clear. The people however, are expecting or rather hoping for a bounteous rain fall, it is a matter of dollars and cents to them, saving irrigation. This is a wonderful country; they call it winter, most of the trees in sight are covered with foliage. Orange and lemon trees are heavy laden with both foliage and fruit. There are some trees on which the leaves are dead, others as apple trees etc., are bare of leaves. The ground is mostly baren or cyvered with dead grass or weeds, which they say that the rains will enliven when they come. It is an interesting country. Here I during the first twelve days of December, suffered with heat and in Minnesota you nearly froze. But with me it is a great question whether I would not be as well had I remained in Minnesota in my warm rooms there under its cold weather, as under the genial California sun. I find that one must be as much guarded as to taking colds here in this mild climate as in the rigorous weather of Minnesota, if not more so. There is so much difference between shade and sunshine at the same moment during summer or winter. In fact I begin to suspect that the health reputation of this part of the world is made like its real estate booms, gotten up with the idea of getting poor invalids to come here and spend their money, which may be a source of revenue to many. I do not see any more in an orange crop here than a wheat crop in Minnesota when I recall what oranges cost by the 300 box in Minnesota, which on the average is about $4, a large estimate according to last year's prices. Orange trees stand about 90 to the acre, and I cannot see any more than one box of 300 to a tree. Then figure boxing and packing, shipping, decay, profits to commission men, etc., I cannot see any more than 50 or 75 cents to a tree probably $1 to the grower. Then figure picking, keeping the ground cultivated all the time, and irrigation. Probably a large tree may have more than 300 as some here claim. They admit however that oranges do not pay, so recommend grafting on lemons. I may be a doubting Thomas on the merits of this climate as to health and prosperity to some extent. I want to at least not allow myself to become an enthusiast without good reason and look at things as I find them. In a financial view this country is suffering from a reaction following a boom of extraordinary proportions of a few years ago. If a fellow is in pretty good health and wants a recreation, he can get it here as there are many interesting points.

In regard to politics, everything went to the —demnition bow wows in November. I think that it was not an expression of considerate thought on the part of the masses. The laws were executed as they were found and no efforts made to produce certain results under manipulations of government officials to cover up something more rotten. The trouble had commenced under Harrison and Secretary Foster bridged the matter over you might say by subterfuges until they got out of office. Still the masses laid it to a change of the administration. The American people, the most intelligent in the world, have much to learn yet especially in political matters, to distinguish the sayings of the demagogue and sound doctrine. There is one thing about the matter that is encouraging, "The cards are mixed." The bloody shirt cuts no longer a figure and many things are in favor of a calmer view of the situation and people may discover that the Democaats are not the cause of all evil.

The question of a single or a double standard of coin has been up for years and numerous arguments made pro and con, and I think that no better time could have been found to try the experiment of the single standard especially if it should not be the thing for the masses. It is much easier for the masses under a democratic administration to assert themselves than it has been under republican administration with centralizing and corrupting methods. I have often thought that the project of securing the negro vote of the south was not the only object of the force bill It would be an easy matter to construe the provisions of that law to localities north to control the vote and I hope it will be repealed at this session of congress. Also I hope that they will put the tariff bill through and one or two other democratic projects immediately so that the main Democratic idea will be put into operation soon so that the people can judge as to the effects by a fair trial, as to whether democratic liberal tariff ideas or McKinleyism is better for the country and with it the single or gold standard can be judged and I do not believe that anything will emanate from Cleveland's administration to prevent a fair expression of the people. They call our Democrat congress an insubordinate body apparently running without an object or haphazzard, but corruption cannot at least be laid at its doors. Its peculiarities are characteristics of humanity, so the masses should not be influenced by the ridiculous light in which a subsidized press present our Democratic congress and administration. Do you know that since I came here I have not found a Democratic paper in Los Angles. There be may such but they do not appear to be present at hotels or reading places, of course I have not investigated, but it is sufficent to see how the country is honeycombed with republican literature of certain kinds to mould public opinion and the public seem to let themselves be moulded against their interests.

Thomas Jefferson's Ten Rules of Life.

Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day.

Never trouble others for what you can do yourself.

Never spend your money before you have it.

Never buy what you dont want, because it is cheap.

Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst, and cold.

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

Take things always by the smooth handle.

When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, count a hundred.—Sanders Third Reader.

Among Our Exchanges.

W. F. Houlton, superintendent of the Union Sunday school, did a kind and generous deed on Christmas which deserves special mention. Remembering the dull times this year, and the many people out of work, and that consequently their children would not be remembered as on previous Christmas days, he procured a list of all the children in the place who would likely be minus Christmas gifts of any kind, and presented each with a bag of candy, fruits and nuts. It was a thoughtful thing to do, and will be long remembered by the happy recipients.—Elk River items in Wright county Times.

SHALL WOMAN SMOKE?

Shall woman smoke? Why should she not,
If she is minded to?
Why shouldn't women do that the lordly men may do?
He makes her stand on tramway cars, a-clinging to a strap,
E'en though she step upon his feet, or tumble in his lap.
She's entered into politics; she practices at law;
She's taken up the surgeons work with lancet and with saw;
Some play at football, so we're told: and there are also some
Who on their safety bicycles like Boreas do hum.
Man makes her do a thousand things that once were his to do;
If she assumes his duties, pray, why not his pleasures, too?
She wears his collars, and her clothes are cut quite as his are;
If she be mannish in her dress, why not have her cigar?
And furthermore, man has encroached on woman's sphere of late.
He's taking on dressmaking at a truly wondrous rate,
And some men's clubs for gossip beat the Dorcas out of sight:
To thus encroach, and yield no jot, just at first to see Minette,
Like any fellow, puffing at a horrid cigarette:
Nor will the sight be of a strongly pleasurable type
When first we see our daughters lighting up their evening pipe.
But men got used to all things, be it soon or be it late.
And this, like other problems, must fulfil its settled fate.
'Tis very safe to prophesy the time is not so far
When women all will smoke who live beyond their first cigar.

—Tid-Bits.

FROM reports the Farmers Alliance meeting was a "howling" success.

S. M. OWEN prefers a position in the ranks to that of leader of the Alliance forces this fall.

THE Alliance party has spewed up her Fish-but I. D, was a little to heavy a potato to get rid of.

THE Alliance Fish-ball has disintegrated. The Fish has been cast up, but the "potato" is still "swallered,"

WE are in receipt of boom additions of the Jourdan Independent and the Moorhead News both credits to their respective localities. Boom editions seem quite fashionable this year.

THE Alliance Convention at Minneapolis, this week elected Ignatius Donnelly president. "The largest potatoes come to the top of the barrel, when driven over a frozen road."—I. D.

E. Y. CHILTON, M. D., of Howard Lake, has been appointed a member of the State Board of Health. The Governor has made a good selection. And Wright County Republicans have at last been recognized.

C. B. ELLIOTT, of Minneapolis, formerly Municipal Judge has been appointed District Judge for this the 4th Judicial District, in place of Judge Canty, promoted. Andrew O. Holt, formerly a Carver County boy has been appointed Municipal Judge in Minneapolis.

THE Resolutions adopted by the Alliance convention this week are not just what good, honest men can endorse, altogether. In the first place they are not wholy consistent with each other. It is entirely wrong to do wrong that good may come. "Abstain from all appearance of evil." The resolutions give evidence of an evil disposition; of an inclination to reform this political world right or wrong. Now it is impossible to get an honest following of the masses when they have become fully satisfied that the motto is to to be, "any thing to get there right or wrong." They will follow what they believe to be right, in preference. It does not look right for a great reform party to pass resolutions condemning the Supreme Court of the State for having decided that laws supposed to be for the best interests of the farmer were unconstitutional, and then going on to pass a resolution like this:

"RESOLVED—That we condemn the measure known as the state capital bill as well as the alleged means by which its passage was secured, and invite that new legislative body, the supreme court, to apply to it the same rule as applied to the elevator bill."

Here this great Reform party is in the "mud" as deep as they claim the Suprem Court is in the "mire." Just think of it! Reformers, going to correct mistakes and right wrongs by calling upon this condemned Supreme Court to help them out in the same manner that they have themselves condemned! "And invite that new legislative body, the supreme court, to apply to it the same rule as applied to the elevator bill." Is not this an absurd way to go to work to reform the country? Is it not getting down just a little too low to try to prove a man or a bench dishonest, and then invite them to apply the "same rule" in thier behalf, in order that they may get even with the legislature? It matters not wh ther the bill objected to be the "capitol bill," "the state elevator bill" or what bill it is, it is clearly against good morals, to put it mildly, to "invite" the court to use the same rules condemned in one case to effect the designed object in another.

Another trouble with the resolutions is, that, like those passed by most new parties, they try to take in everybody by adopting all the causes of complaint by different individuals they hear of, and instead of enlarging the following of the party they crowd off some of their best and most earnest workers for reform. S. M. Owens, in his able address to the convention clearly points this out when he says "we must not ask them to split hairs about methods and details, but we must invite them to unite with us on some great moral principle; something that will arouse their citizenship and inspire their enthusiasm and patriotism. After reading the resolutions passed and reading of the I. D. and Fish time had it is no wonder that Mr. Owens found occasion when mentioned as a candidate for governor, to say: "I feel a horror of again heading a state ticket which I cannot overcome, and I am inspired by one hope, that as our ranks are enlarging every day, you will find some new man much better qualified for the position than I." Why didn't he add "or I. D."

Take Your Own Papers.

At a meeting of the leading Republicans of the state a motion was made to buy a lot of subscriptions of Republican newspapers and circulate them throughout the state. They propose to furnish all the people in the state with the news, fitted up to suit them! To send out only such papers as advocate their views and support their candidates! You are to be asked to read, at the expense of the "generous" board, such papers as they may choose for you. Of course you will be expected to contribute to your home league "generously" to this fund! Why not buy your own paper? Are republicans unable to select for themselves reading matter? Would it not be more American to spend your money for such papers as you please? Taking a variety. Reading all sides and judging for yourself how you want to vote? The New York Tribune, White Law Reed's own paper, the very man you voted should stay at home instead of wield the gavel in the United States Senate this winter, is to be poked down your throats whole. If you wish to read his papers, to educate yourself to his way of thinking, subscribe yourselves. Don't sit around and wait for the committee to collect from you and furnish you. If you don't like this, or any other paper, get one you do like. Read both sides, don't be afraid to see what they say. If you are supplied from this source of one-sided information with good Strait literature hie yourself to the nearest Democratic office and subscribe for your local Democratic paper, so that you may be held level, and not fly off on a tangent as some seem about to do BUFFALO GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

That Republican Rally.

Already the leading lights of Republicanism in Minnesota have held a meeting at St. Paul and talked over the situation previous to making next years campaign. Several gentlemen seem anxious to try for the nomination of most of the offices, and the state is not going to be completed to the satisfaction of all individuals, nor to all sections of the State. Tams Birby, chairman, thought this early meeting might bring harmony before next fall's election. John Goodnow, president of Republican Leagues announced that it "was the intention to lay aside all party local issues, and go before the people on the issues which won the victories in New York, Ohio, Iowa, and Massachusetts." He said "Republican leagues would be re-organized throughout the state" and advised holding a mid winter Republican mass meeting to be addressed by Gov. McKinley and other distinguished lights of the party. Mr. Bruckhart of St Cloud thought country papers could accomplish more for the Republican cause than any other power, and favored raising a fund to increase the circulations of these papers. Several favored the meeting, others among them, Ex-Congressman Strait thought the newspapers a better medium than oratory for reaching the people. He thought the New York Tribune an excellent paper and favored purchasing a large number and spreading them over the State. At least among the country newspapers. After considerable discussion pro and con on various questions an executive session was held at which it is understood a motion was carried to buy a lot of the leading papers in the different languages and send them out to educate the people to their way of thinking.

Russian Wheat Handling Compared with American.

Mr. Powers, the state labor commissioner, has devoted considerable time to preparing a statement showing the relative cost of local handling and transportation of wheat in Russia as compared with American conditions. In this statement he shows the farmers who are interested in the matter that the Russian charges are about three times higher than the American. —Globe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5, 1894.

Chairman Wilson is not receiving the support he deserves from the democratic members of the House. He had worked himself into a state bordering on physical exhaustion in order that the tariff bill might be called up as soon ai the House met on Wednesday, and his disappointment can only be imagined when he saw that the tariff bill could not be taken up on that day because of the absence of a quorum of democrats, it being the policy of the republicans not to allow the bill to be considered without a quorum of their own members present this absenteeism is inexcusable. The whole country is demanding prompt action on the tariff, and at the very opening of the session a day is thrown away.

The tariff program as mapped out by Chairman Wilson was five days for general debate, eight days with evening sessions for discussion under the five minute rule, during which the internal revenue amendments decided upon this week—the two per cent tax upon all incomes of $4,000 and over; the increase in the tax on cigarettes to one dollar and fifty centi per 1000; the increase in the tax on whisky to $4.00 per gallon, and the tax of two cents per pack on playing cards—are to be adopted, and the final vote to be taken on the 17th of January; but it will not be possible to carry out this or any other program, if a democratic quorum cannot be kept here all the time; already the day of the final vote has been changed to January 22. This absenteeism it more the result of the big democratic majority than indifference. Each member who stays away probably thinks there will be a democratic quorum without him, but so many stay away that there isn't.

The investigation of the relations of this government with Hawaii is being pushed by the subcommittee of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations. All of the witnesses heard up to this time have been gentlemen who took an active part in the annexation movement and the formation of the provisional government of Hawaii; consequently the testimony has been all of one kind. Although the proceedings are supposed to be secrete, the nature of the testimony taken becomes known almost as soon as it would if the hearings were public. Considerable comment not favorable to ex-Minister Steavens has been indulged in this week. Senator Frye has reported the health of Mr. Steavens to be so precarious that it might prevent his coming to Wasington to testify before the committee, yet the newspapers all contained accounts of his having traveled from his home in Maine to Rhode Island in order to deliver a speech on Hawaii at a club banquet Now the question is being asked, why, if his health permits him to attend club banquets and sit up two-thirds of a night to make a set speech, it should prevent his coming to the mild climate of Washington and giving the committee a few hours of his time during the day? Perhaps the oath which the committee administers to its witnesses may have something to do with the reluctance of Mr. Steavens. A man doesn't have to swear to statements made in a banquet speech.

The democratic House caucus which meets tonight will settle for good and all whether the Democrats of the Ways and Means committee have made a tariff bill worthy of the support of the party, or whether the work of the committee shall be revised before the bill is passed. Every democrat who has, or thinks he has, a grievance will be given an opportunity to state it and to ascertain whether the majority sides with him or against him. When the caucus decides that settles it and the bill as financially approved will be loyally supported by every democrat who attends the caucus. It is thought probable that it may be necessary to continue the caucus for several nights in order to hear that those opposed to several of the tariff schedules and to the income tax amendment may desire to say, and confidently expected that it will ratify the work of the committee as a whole; although there may be some minor amendments made in portions of the bill. The opposition to the individual income tax will probably develop the most strength, owing to the vote in the committee having been so close—six to five—and to President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle being in doubt as to expediency.

Representative Bland has introduced a bill in the House, providing for the immediate issue of $55,000,000 of silver certificates to supply the treasuary with money to meet the growing deficiency, the same to be based upon the seignorage of the silver bullion in the treasury as rapidly as possible. Mr. Bland thinks the adoption of this bill preferable to an issue of bonds to meet current expenses of the government.

Boutelle, of Maine, seems determined to play the monkey on the Hawaiian question. He started off on the first day of the session in his usual style.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Hon. B. F. C. is Getting Acclimated.

Your correspondent as yet having seen but a small portion of California can not say much from observation as to its advantages and prosperity; his travels having been confined to the Santa Fe Route to Los Angeles and to some of the country surrounding the latter place. The large tracts or valleys lying between the mountain ranges of Southern California, have unbroken surfaces, free of hills and knolls, sloping with a quiet descent toward the streams or toward other slopes coming from opposite directions, the latter meeting in a narrow belt of sand and gravel and possessing most of the attributes of a stream excepting a flow of water supplied from living springs. these gravel beds usually connect with the canyons in the mountains and serve to carry off the excess of water falling during the rainy season not absorbed by the mountains and valleys or retained in the reservoirs constructed for irrigation purposes. In fact the true river channels are not much more than gravel beds during the rainless period of the year; the water being either evaporated or absorbed to a depth of several feet by the river bed. In the city of Los Angeles the channel of the river of the same name as the city is an exposed gravel bed of about 400 feet in width with a winding bed no larger than Pioneer Creek creeping snake like over the river bed. The Los Angeles River however possesses a vast flow above and beneath its bed.

The soils of Southern California vary in kinds as well as in quality; There being good, medium, indifferent and worthless. The general apperance of the soil does not impress the wanderer from the Northern Mississippi Valley as being very fertile. The different kinds of soil are; clay, loam, gumbo, alkali and other varieties alternating each other irregularly. As a rule irrigation as well as fertilizing must be taken into account in locating either on improved or unimproved lands, although there are lands, it is claimed, will grow crops without irrigation. They are exceptional however. Tracts of land are not always uniformally made up of the same kind of soil and, in fact uniformity seems to be the exception. Patches of good soil breaks up suddenly into gravel or alaki spots. The gravel frequently is a covering washed from the smaller canyons or crevasses of the mountains. It can be made productive by fertilization and diverting and controlling the flowage. Soils containing a limited amount of alkali are utilized in the cultivation of Alfalfa clover thereby making a good pasturage. Many spots however are to strongly impregnated for even the vigorous alfalfa to live and grow. They remain barren wastes with scattering sage bush on their whitened surface. While uninviting places they constitute a small percentage of the surface of the country being found generally near, and on lands whose elevation is only a few feet above the river beds. Between Los Angeles and the ocean both alkali and the most fertil lands are to be found. Considerable of the latter is in a good state of cultivation and also productive, and is mostly cultivated by the Chinese. John with his many occupations is a good farmer. In this locality he irrigates with the sewarage of the city Indian corn and other cereals are amongst his products.

Orange and lemon orchards are to be found every where. Lemons are regarded lately as being more profitable than oranges and in consequence many orange groves are being changed into lemon producing enterprises by the grafting process. Lands in settlements are subdivided into small tracts with different owners to each, there are however large tracts under single ownerships and known as ranches. The country between San Bernardo and Los Angeles on the Sante Fe Route is pretty well settled. The distance by rail between those points is 57 miles on which there are about 25 R. R. Stations at villages or nuclei of settlements. This region is an extensive valley, flanked on the north by the Sierre Madre Mountains and on the south by another range of mountains. The mountains retaining moisture falling during the rainy season in the form of snow at their crests and by absorption furnish the water supply used in irrigating the valleys during the dry season following. At present the Sierre Madre Range including Wilson Peak are embellished with the beautiful, at their crest, the presence of which is perceptable in the temperature of the climate at present. Your correspondent does not find it so warm as during the first days of December but overcoat and wraps being necessary mornings and evenings. The thermometer ranging at 45 and 65 during the middle part of the day, being lower at times during the night and early morn. Beginning with Dec 22 it has rained about one third of the time since, one of the rains being accompanied by hail and thunder and lightning which the oldest settler says is an unusual thing for this climate.

Besides oranges and lemons there are other varieties of fruits raised in Southern California; figs, grapes, apples, pears, and other varieties of which your correspondent is not fully informed. There are bananas to be seen in door yards with huge stocks from 10 to 15 feet in hight, with immense leaves projecting from the top and sides of stalks of similiar shape to corn stalk leaves but much larger and instead of the grain of the leaf running parelel with its center stem, it begins at the stem and runs almost at a right angle to the sides of the leaf, having a small incline upward. Banana cultivation as a fruit is not a success in Southern California. It is cultivated as an ornament in connection with other tropical growths, as the palm, and a non fruit bearing banana and other varieties of trees and plants too numerous for the memory of the average individual to retain their names and descriptions of theis peculiarties.

Your correspondent is becoming more favorably impressed as to the beneficial effects of the climate of Southern California on throat and pulminary affections believing however that there are better places further from the ocean than Los Angeles for the average Minnesotan similarly affected. The region between San Bernardina, Riverside and Pasadena being at a higher altitude and further from the ocean than Los Angeles has less of the fog and dampness pervading that city at times. The climate of Southern California is peculiar and it is necessary for the patient to learn its peculiarities and adapt himself to them to receive the benefits of the climate.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—Happy New Year to you my old time friend! May this year, '94 be the most prosperous and happy one during your mortal existence. May prosperity and not adversity ever be at the threshold of your home. May the present political administration act as a stimulant to arouse and excite your mind and energy, to double diligence in the cause of truth, and right, for the deserving and industrious poor of this country.

May the prophets "See Eye to Eye," as the fulfillment of Scripture is coming to pass. It is time that the rot and filth of all political parties should be cast to the dogs, and we as free American citizens live for a higher and more noble life. May no servile insurrection ever again pollute this fair land of ours, but may Heaven's choicests blessings in peaceful sunshine ever reign over us. May all political demagogues and tricksters, who have masqueraded themselves in the garb of righeousness be brought to justice, and stripped of every vestage of authority,

May peace reign instead of confusion and disquistude. May the laws be enforced and righeousness prevail throughout the land. Money is the blood of the body politic. If defeated or corrupted, the vital organism is impared, the arm of labor is paralyzed, business is deranged and trade languishes. In Heaven's name we hope our Legislators and men in authority will do something, depend upon their own judgment some, and not listen so much to designing men and fools.

But, Mr. Editor, where am I, I have forgotten the news of the week. Well we haven't got any thing down here but hard times and snow. Its about time for some one to produce that poem, Beautiful Snow.

Gorden Granger Post 120, G. A. R., Maple Plain, will have installation of officers next Saturday afternoon.

The Hugh McLean school district, 102, will give an entertainment in two or three weeks.

B. R. Hosington is making a good quality of lumber out of our native timber.

The interior department of this country seems to be in an unrest, too much money went to the Chicago fair, on the coast of Lake Michigan. The sight of wooden gods and those masqueraded in Icelander garb will not clothe the body or fill the belly now, but then there is an old saying: "He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who steals my good name steals all that I have."

The many who have been on the sick list are all improving. We have no use for doctors or lawyers now.

"For I say unto you, that except your righeousness shall exceed the righeousness of the Scribes and Pharisees ye shall in no way enter the kinggom of heaven.

The Beauty of the Famous Court of Honor Marred.

Flames Destroy the Casino, the Peristyle, Music Hall and Part of the Manufactures Building—Loss About $1,000,000.

A FIREMAN KILLED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Fire which started in the Casino at the world's fair grounds at 5:30 p. m. Monday swept away that building, the flames surging through the handsome Peristyle, leaving a trail of blackened columns and crumbled statues including the handsome quadriga which surmounted the arched entrance to the lake, and leaving in ruins the magnificent Music hall, leaped across the broad avenue and wrapped in their embrace the huge Manufactures' building, with its mountainous roof, destroying handsome pavilions therein and valuable exhibits packed and awaiting shipment. One fireman was killed and several others injured. The fire, which it is thought was started by tramps, was not extinguished until 2 o'clock this morning, after burning fiercely for eight and one-half hours, and destroying property roughly estimated at $1,000,000.

The interior of the Casino, with its open center court and balconies, all made of oil-finished wool, fed the greedy flames, which seemed to reach every corner of the building at once.

When it was seen that the fire could not be checked in the Casino, the force was concentrated on the Agricultural building and Peristyle. Extension ladders were raised to the top of the classic bridge, which formed one of the most beautiful architectural features of the court of honor. It was while mounting this ladder that Fireman Mewers of engine company 61 fell. The ambulance was called and he was carried to St. Luke's hospital, where he died soon after.

Marshal Green sent a score of men to the Peristyle. He knew that if the fire once reached it it would go to the Music hall. A dozen streams of water were directed against it, but the Casino wall fell in and the exposed timbers of the Peristyle blazed up at once.

The fire did not move rapidly. It ate its way to the north deliberately and with an obstinacy which nothing could stop. It drove the firemen before it, and gradually neared the Music hall. The fight was made where the Peristyle and Music hall come together.

The flames crept along unchecked, attacking the handsome Music hall at the north end of the now ruined Peristyle. The fire was burning over the platform of the auditorium before the firemen knew it. All efforts, however, were unavailing. Soon the building was a mass of ruins.

The flames leaped across the broad avenue between Music hall and the Manufactures and Liberal Arts edifice, and at 8:45—three and a quarter hours after the start of the fire—the enormous building blazed up.

Some sparks had escaped the vigilance of the patrols on the promenade. They had crept beneath the boards, and, fanned by the wind, had developed into flame. They burst out almost simultaneously at four different points—three on the east and one on the west side.

At 1:30 o'clock this morning the firemen on the roof had succeeded in cutting a hole over the Tiffany exhibit. A rope was lowered and a lead of hose was hauled to the promenade. Then a triple-siamese was made and three engines were coupled on and sent a column of water to the waiting men on the roof. With this stream where it was needed the fire was soon placed under control. At 2 o'clock the fire was out, after burning eight and one-half hours.

William Mackey, 845 Forty-eighth street, pipeman engine company No. 61. Fell from ladder on Peristyle; internally injured and died at Mercy hospital.

The injured:

Capt. Charles Tobey, engine company No. 61; fell from east gallery to floor; burned about body and legs; removed to emergency hospital.

The exposition company did not lose a cent on the Casino, Peristyle and Music hall. The Casino was built by the Columbian Casino company, which had secured a restaurant-concession, and the Peristyle and Music hall had been transferred to the South park commissioners.

The French exhibit, which was located just south of the center of Manufactures building, was the first to succumb to the flames. This exhibit was originally valued at $1,500,000, but the larger portion of it is said to have been moved out. Among the losses enumerated are the bronze statue of war, the imitation jewelry display, Gobelin tapestries, Beurdelois' exhibit of mosaic and inlaid furniture, the Dore bronze vase, Bon Marche dress exhibit and library of French books.

Among other losses in the Manufactures building there were 1,000 cases destined for the midwinter fair at San Francisco. These cases had been collected from all parts of the grounds, from every foreign exhibit at the fair, and had been stored in the Manufactures building to be rewarehoused by customs officials and be shipped in customs custody to California.

New State Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 10.—The democrats of Indiana elected a new state committee Monday by congressional districts. It is the first time the democrats have elected their committee in this way. Heretofore they have chosen the members of the committee at district conventions held on the evening before the day on which the state nominating convention was held.

TO PREPARE TOUGH MEAT.

Remove the Sinews and the Worst Pieces Will Be Perceptibly Improved.

There are a great many unpromising-looking pieces of meat that make excellent braises and other dishes. But if anyone imagines that it is as easy to prepare a tough piece of meat that has abundance of fat and sinews in its make-up as a prime roast, she is mistaken. It requires time and patience to deal with a sinewy piece of beef. If the meat is to be a success as a braise the greater part of the fat and all the sinews must be removed. It is not at all difficult to do this, but it requires patience and a keen-edged knife about the size of a boning knife. Keep the knife near the sinew and scrape it away from the meat on both sides. Continue until all the sinews are removed. A tough piece of round is very much improved by this process.

There are so many sinews in the leg that it had best be used for soup, though the patient French cooks very often take the trouble to prepare this cheap meat for stews. These stews they serve with piquant sauces flavored with tomatoes or mushrooms, so that the whole dish takes on a grand air and is really delightful to eat, while the meat is deliciously tender. A breast of veal with its surplus fat and gristle is not a very promising subject in the hands of an inexperienced cook. But remove the soft bones very carefully, so as not to waste a particle of the meat, and remove a large portion of the fat. Make a well-flavored stuffing. If you wish, use about a pound of clear, lean veal, chopped fine and pounded to a paste to the loaf of bread used for the stuffing, or make the old-fashioned dressing of bread crumbs alone. In either case use a small onion and a liberal teaspoonful of parsley for flavoring and bind the dressing together with two or three raw eggs, according to their size.

Economic cooking of a superior order can not be done in slapdish manner. A fine roast of beef can be cooked more quickly than a breast of veal, but it costs about three times as much. The veal takes twice as much time to prepare. Either dish is equally delicious. An epicure might prefer the breast of veal, if it was prepared in perfection. Even a roast must be attended to while it is cooking, but probably bears neglect better than almost any other service of meat, always providing the fire was right when it was put in the oven.

It is because of her dainty care and skill in flavoring that the French housekeeper excels in her ragouts and other rechauffes. She seasons a hash with as great care as if it were a piece of choice game. The result tells in the excellence of the dish. The careless cook who chops up the debris of meat from the last meals without stopping to separate the lean from the fat and remove all the bones and any sinews is sure to make a failure of her work. In all hashes, except corned beef, where a little fat is allowable, all fat should be removed and clear lean used. Look over the meat very carefully. If potatoes are used allow about half the quantity there is of meat. The care taken in this matter will pay in the superior excellence of your dish.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE GOVERNOR'S SECRET.

A Testimony to the Value of Boys' Debating Clubs.

At the commencement dinner of one of the New England colleges the governor of the state usually makes the first speech.

One year this function was awaited with much curiosity. The governor, who was a successful business man, had been in office only a few weeks. He had made his way in the world without the advantages of early education. A poor office-boy, starting with two or three years in a district school, he had become a wealthy manufacturer. Political distinction had finally crowned his business career. Some of his predecessors in office had been college men, accustomed to these academic occasions. His own reputation as an orator had yet to be made.

There was an undertone of comment at the tables respecting the chances of his first appearance as a commencement speaker. Even those who knew him well forecast a humiliating failure. How great was their astonishment when the governor arose without a trace of embarrassment and made a most excellent speech.

His sentences were clear, crisp and not without polish. His manner was natural, self-possessed and graceful. Instead of being a hasty and feeble bit of improvisation, it was a vigorous and well digested argument for popular education, presented with dignity and power.

One of the governor's candid friends subsequently said to him, "Nobody thought that you could make so good a speech. When and where have you learned the art of oratory?"

The governor's explanation was very simple. When he was an office-boy fresh from the country, he had joined a debating club. Although he was outmatched in education by all the members, he forced himself to speak, and soon found that he could hold his ground. That early practice in debate stood him good stead when he was called upon to speak at the commencement dinner.

Nearly all public men have to serve a rough apprenticeship in oratory. Public speaking was profoundly distasteful and even painful to Mr. Parnell when he entered parliament.

Probably he would never have learned to speak at all if he had not joined obstructionists like Mr. Bigger in talk against time when the house was in an uproar, and a mob was howling about him so that it did not matter what he said or how he said it.

That was better discipline for him than the critical attention of an orderly assembly, since it enabled him to overcome constitutional infirmities.

Such rough schooling as that is seldom required. Every intelligent youth can learn in a debating club to feel at ease when on his feet, and to express his thoughts clearly and forcibly. When the lesson is well learned, as it was in the governor's case, it is never forgotten.—Youth's Companion.

DOLE'S DECISION.

He Will Not Comply with Mr. Willis' Proposition.

HIS ADDRESS.

HONOLULU, Jan. 1, (via Victoria, B. C., Jan. 8.)—Since the sailing of the United States revenue cutter Corwin at 3 a. m. on the morning of December 24 no advices have left here for the coast.

The Corwin took an official copy of the demand of Minister Willis upon the provisional government to step down and out, which was couched in the following words:

"FOREIGN OFFICE HONOLULU, Dec. 19, 1893. —Present, President Sanford B. Dole, Hon. M. Damon, minister of finance; Hon. J. A. King, minister of the interior; Hon. W. O. Smith, attorney general; Hon. Albert S. Willis, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, United States of America.

"Mr. Willis said: Mr. President and gentlemen: The president of the United States has very much regretted the delay in the consideration of the Hawaiian question, but it is unavoidable. So much of it as has occurred since my arrival has been due to certain conditions precedent, compliance with which was required before I was authorized to confer with you. The president also regrets, as most assuredly do I, that any secrecy should have surrounded the interchange of views between our two governments. I may say this, however, that the secrecy thus far observed has been in the interest and for the safety of all your people. I need hardly promise that the president's action upon the Hawaiian question has been under the dictates of honor and of duty; it is now and has been from the beginning absolutely free from prejudice and resentment and entirely consistent with long-established friendship and treaty ties, which have so closely bound together our respective governments.

"The president deemed it his duty to withdraw from the senate the treaty of annexation, which had been signed by the secretary of state and agents of your government, and to dispatch a trusty representative to Hawaii to impartially investigate the causes of your revolution and to ascertain and report the true situation in these islands. This information was needed the better to enable the president to discharge a delicate and important duty. Upon the facts embodied in Mr. Blount's report the president has arrived at certain conclusions and determined upon a certain course of action which it becomes my duty to acquaint you herewith.

"The provisional government was not established by the Hawaiian people, nor with their consent or acquiescence, nor has it since existed with their consent.

"The queen refused to surrender her powers to the provisional government until convinced that the minister of the United States had recognized it as the de facto authority and would support and defend it with the military force of the United States, and that resistance would precipitate a bloody conflict with that force.

"She was advised and assured by her ministers and the leaders of the movement for the overthrow of her government that if she surrendered protest her case would afterward be fairly considered by the president of the United States.

"The queen finally yielded to the armed forces of the United States, then quartered in Honolulu, relying on the good faith and honor of the president, when informed of what had occurred, to undo the action of the minister and reinstate her in the authority which she claims as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian islands.

"After a patient examination of Mr. Blount's reports, the president is satisfied that the movement against the queen, if not instigated, was encouraged and supported by the representatives of this government at Honolulu. That they promised in advance to aid her enemies in an effort to overthrow the Hawaiian government and set up by force a new government in its place, and that they kept this promise by causing a detachment of troops to be landed from the Boston on January 16, 1893, and by recognizing the provisional government the next day when it was too feeble to defend itself and the constitutional government was about to be successfully maintained against any threatening force other than that of the United States, already landed.

"The president has, therefore, determined that he will not send back to the senate for its action thereon the treaty which he withdrew from that body for further consideration on the 9th day of March last. In view of these conclusions I was instructed by the president of the United States to take advantage of an early opportunity to inform the queen of this determination and of his views as to the responsibility of our government.

"The president, however, felt that we, by our original interference, had incurred a responsibility to the whole Hawaiian community and that it would not be just to put one party at the mercy of the other. I was, therefore, instructed at the same time to inform her that the president expected that she would pursue a magnanimous course by granting full amnesty to all who participated in the movement against her, including persons who are, or who have been, officially or otherwise connected with the provisional government, depriving them of no right or privilege which they enjoyed before the revolution of last January, and that all obligations created by the provisional government in the course of administration should be assumed.

"In obedience to the command of the president I have secured the queen's agreement to this course, and I now deliver a writing signed by her and duly attested, a copy of which I will leave with you.

"I will now read that writing. I will read from the original, leaving you a certified copy.

" 'I, Liliuokalani, in recognition of the high sense of justice which has actuated the president of the United States, and desiring to put aside all feelings of personal hatred or revenge, and to do what is best for all the people of these islands, both native and foreign born, do hereby and herein solemnly declare and pledge myself that, if reinstated as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian islands, I will immediately proclaim and declare unconditionally and without reservation to every person who directly or indirectly participated in the revolution of January 17, 1893, a full pardon and amnesty for their offenses with restoration of all rights, privileges and immunities, under the constitution and the law, which have been made in pursuance thereof, and that I will forbid and prevent the adoption of any measure of proscription or punishment for what has been done in the past by those setting up or supporting the provisional government.

"I furthermore solemnly agree to accept the restoration under the constitution existing at the time of said revolution and that I will abide by and fully execute that constitution with all the gnarantees as to persons and property therein contained. I furthermore solemnly pledge myself and my government if restored to assume all the obligations created by the provisional government in the proper course of administration, including all expenditures for military or police service, it being my purpose, if restored, to assume the government precisely as it existed on the day when it was unlawfully overthrown.

" 'Attest: J. O. Carter.'

"It becomes my further duty to advise you, sir, the executive of the provisional government and your ministers, of the president's determination of the question, which your action and that of the queen devolved upon him, and you are expected to relinquish to her her constitutional authority.

"And now, Mr. President and gentlemen of the provisional government, with a deep and solemn sense of the gravity of the situation, and with the earnest hope that your answer will be inspired by that high patriotism which forgets all self interest, in the name and by the authority of the United States of America, I submit to you the question: Are you willing to abide by the decision of the president?

"President Dole—The government will take the matter under consideration and answer you as soon as they are ready."

Up to date President Dole has not complied with the demands of Minister Willis to restore the queen, nor will he do so. Minister Willis has taken no steps to enforce compliance.

THE manuscripts of Tasso, which are still preserved, are illegible from the immense number of erasures, changes and emendations.

THE only instance of perfectly successful collaboration in English literature is found in the dramatic works of Beaumont and Fletcher.

THE letters of Leonardo da Vinci were allowed by his family to perish in a garret. Only such were preserved as were in the hands of others.

THE works of Aristotle comprised more than four hundred treatises on various subjects. The manuscripts which survive of his writings were accidentally discovered in an advanced stage of decay in an old chest.

KEEPING a diary was a confirmed fashion among the literary Romans. Most of them carried little tablets tied at their belts, in which they kept memoranda of their doings so as to forget nothing when they came to write up the record at night.

COMMON NAMES.

HURST meant wood, hence residents in or near a wood bore the names of Hurseley, Hawkhurst, Ashurst, Elmhurst and the like.

COP meant any prominence of land, and hence came the Cops, Copes, Copleys, Copelands, Copps, Cophams, Copwills, Cobdens and Cobleys.

STARCH and stark were synonymous, which accounts for the abundance of the Starks, formerly manufacturers of or dealers in this article.

HEIFER herds were yeat herds, hence the Yeamans and Yeaters. Cowherds, Coherds and Cowarts were the men who tended the herds of cows.

SWAIN was formerly a man who kept hogs, and his descendants are the Swaines, Swaynes, and perhaps also Swaims, Swinnerts and Hoggarts.

HILL comes from an old English verb meaning to cover, or put a roof on; hence the Hills, Hillyers, Helliers, Heelers, and even Helman and Heelman

TO BABY DOROTHY.

Dear, dainty, darling Dorothy,
So winsome, wee and fair,
To what in all this wondrous world
Shall I thy charms compare?

No lily-bud upon its stalk,
No snow-drop in the spring,
No violet in thy vernal wood
Is half so fair a thing.

No blue that marks the skies of June
Can match the wond'ring eyes,
Within whose lucid depths, as yet,
No earthly shadow lies.

The rose of dawn is on thy cheek,
So soft, and round, and fair;
The sunbeams pausing in their flight
Are prisoned in thy hair.

Thy little hand has pow'r to lead
Thine elders where it will;
At music of thy baby voice,
All ruder sounds grow still.

God grant thy sheltered life forecasts
The golden days to be,
When thou shall lead in larger things
Than yet our eyes may see!

Perhaps a pow'r in song or verse,
A holy voice, or pen,
With gift to calm the ruder forms
Of thought and speech in men.

Spangles.

By Mort. Alex. Douglas-Lithgow, M.D., LL.D

[Copyright, 1893, by the Author.]

Footsore and weary, one autumn evening, an old man, a lad, and a dog arrived in Wokingham, where they put up at a common lodging-house. They constituted a traveling show, and, after performing all day in the streets of Reading, they had walked over here—a distance of ten or twelve miles.

The old man seemed broken in health, and suffered from a severe cough; but on this particular evening he was worse than usual, for he had got a chill, and was glad to lay down his weary bones in bed, soon after his arrival. He complained of feeling very cold and thirsty, and the lad procured him some tea, which they both enjoyed. "Grimmy"—or to give him his full name, Grimwald, the dog, was not forgotten, for the trio were inseparable, and soon afterwards they all retired to rest.

During the night the old man became very feverish, coughed incessantly, and complained of a pain in his chest, but Jimmy, the lad, did all he could for him, and sat up most of the night with him.

In the morning, poor old "Spangles"—a name dear to many children throughout England—was no better, and when the doctor was summoned, and had examined him, he told the landlady that he was very ill, suffering from an attack of inflammation of the lungs, and that he feared it would go hard with him.

"Spangles" recognized his own danger, and calling the lad to him, said: "Jimmy, my boy, you've been a good lad to me, and I fear the show will soon be closed forever! Sit thee down beside me, lad, as I have something to tell thee." When the lad had sat down, "Spangles" proceeded:

"The great Mr. Shakespeare says: 'A man, during his life, plays many parts,' and that's the truth; for in my time I have played many parts, and under many and divers names; but I will begin at the beginning.

"My father died when I was only a boy, and my mother married again some time afterwards, my stepfather being an ill-natured, cruel man, who hated and ill-treated me; and, unable to bear his cruelty any longer, I ran away from home and joined a traveling circus.

"But I soon found I had gone 'from the frying-pan into the fire,' for the new task-master to whom I had been bound had no compassion, and during the earlier part of my apprenticeship used to treat me shamefully if I was clumsy or made mistakes when learning the acrobatic business.

"In a few years, however, I became 'Alva, the Flying Wonder;' then a member of 'The Illustrious Schmidt Family,' then an acrobatic clown, and finally a ring-master, during which latter period I became devotedly attached to 'Mlle. Annette, the Daring Equestrienne,' and we ultimately got married and left the circus business altogether.

"My happiness, however, was short-lived, for my poor young wife—who had wavered in her affections between me and 'Sig. Lupino, the Matchless Bareback Rider,' although she finally consented to become mine-deserted me one morning and left a note behind, saying: 'Dear Jim—you are too good to me. I have gone to him! God bless you.' And I only saw her once since.

"I didn't blame the poor wench, for she was little better than a child, but I felt her absence cruelly, and I don't think I have ever been the same since, although I have tried to do my duty.

"The greater part of my life was afterwards spent in traveling shows, of one sort or another, all over England, and for some years I was with a strolling company of actors who did the reg'lar drama; but it was just about twelve or thirteen years ago, when I was about fifty, and my poor wife was about thirty-five, that she sent me a letter, begging me to come to her, as she was ill; and I, thinking of nothing but of seeing her again, went at once, but only to find that he had been killed by a horse three months ago, and that she was dying after giving birth to a baby boy."

Here the old man seemed exhausted from a fit of coughing, but he rallied somewhat after a dose of his medicine, and he resumed his story.

"Jimmy, my lad," said he, "that baby was you! I promised my darling Annette that I would be both father and mother to you, and I have tried hard to do the best I could for you."

"Oh, dear, dear master," sobbed the poor lad, "you are not going to leave me and Grimmy? Whatever shall we do? You have always been so good and kind to us both, and a dear, kind, good father to me."

Grimmy, hearing his name mentioned, came to the bedside, and sat up begging, with his shaggy head on one side, as if trying to say: "I know there's something wrong. Can't I do anything?"

"Poor Grimmy!" said "Spangles." "You'll be good to him when I'm gone, Jimmy, and never part with him while he lives??"

Grimmy jumped on the bed, and licked the old man's hands and face, and it was as much as Jimmy could do to remove him.

"I will, indeed, be good to him, and never part with him, dear master," said Jimmy, "but, oh! what are we to do when you are gone?" And the poor lad sobbed piteously.

"Be a brave lad, Jimmy, and He who cares for the sparrows will not forget either you or Grimmy. Be always truthful and honest, however you may be tempted to do otherwise, and whatever you find to do, do it with all your might. Bear in mind that your mother is an angel, Jimmy, and I am going to join her at last. In God's good time you, too, will join us; think how happy we shall all be there; and when tempted to do wrong, just think that if you do it you may be prevented from ever coming to us, and God will help you to do right. You and I and poor Grimmy have played through many towns, and tramped for many miles together; yet we never had an angry word, whilst we sought to earn an honest living. Poor old 'Spangles' is going to leave you, but life is before you yet, my lad; and although I have not been able to save much, yet you will find enough in my bag to bury me and to give you a start."

He then sank back exhausted, and while the lad sobbed as if his heart would break Grimmy howled piteously, and sat up begging in all directions.

GRIMMY SAT UP BEGGING.

During the succeeding night the old man rested more quietly, but had several severe paroxysms of coughing, which thoroughly exhausted him; he was also, at times, delirious, when his mind seemed to be dwelling among earlier memories and bygone scenes in which the name of Annette was frequently and fondly mingled.

On the following morning, when the doctor called again, he was deeply moved by the intense and unrestrained grief of the poor lad, who held his dying master's hand in his own, whilst the lips of the poor old man were feebly moved in blessing.

Even the faithful dog seemed to feel that he was losing a dear friend, for he was restless and uneasy, sat up begging all over the room, and had refused to eat since his master's illness.

The doctor, however, spoke kindly to the lad, and when the weeping youth said: "My dear master was the only friend I had in the world," he cheered him up by saying that he must not give way, as the future was before him, and as he had been a good boy God would not forsake him. "In fact," he added, "a friend of my own is seeking such a youth as you, and I shall not fail to recommend you to him."

"Oh! thank you, sir," said Jimmy, "you are very kind, but I dare not be parted from dear Grimmy, as I have promised master he shall never leave me, and I have known and loved him all my life."

"Never mind, my lad," said the doctor, "we must find some place for you where the doggie can go too; so don't grieve."

Poor old "Spangles" was fast passing away, and could now scarcely be said to be conscious; but it was affecting to hear him, as in his delirium he imagined he was going through his performance with Jimmy and his dog.

"Houp-la! Houp-la!" he muttered. "Over! over!! over!!! Well done, sir! Good lad! Now Mr. Grimaldi! steady, old boy! Show the ladies and gentlemen what you can do! Good dog!"

And even as the doctor, the lad and Grimmy stood round him, he stretched himself out and appeared to have fallen asleep; but the soul of poor "Spangles" had vaulted into Heaven!

THE MARRIED FLIRT.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Divides Her in Three Classes.

The Born Flirt, the Flirt Made by Circumstances and the Seemingly Unconscious Flirt—Large Cities Is Where They All Thrive.

[Special Letter.]

THE married flirt is a planet which thrives only in the shadow of city walls. In country places we see little of her, and hear less. She exists, to be sure, but in another form—a much scandalized and tabooed person; for with us the environment of a gay, and more or less fashionable society circle, the married flirt has no field save in adventure.

Once let the married woman in a small town get herself "talked about" and her fate is settled at once. The tide of public opinion runs high and strong in these places where people have but little experience and consequently little charity, and she must either reinstate herself slowly by an excess of prudence and reserve, or drift on and out into defiance and disgrace.

In the large cities, however, all is different. The conduct which in the village wife would cause severe gossip and censure, from observers, passes without comment in town, or even excites admiration.

The country matron who drives out with her neighbor is liable to meet cold glances of her women acquaintances when next they meet; while the woman of fashion speeds by in her cart, with her gallant beside her, whispering compliments in her ear, and society applauds.

While custom has much to do with our ideas of morals, there are certain principles which no custom or country can change—principles which form the dividing line between night and morning—between pleasure and license.

I believe a conception of these principles is born in the soul of every human being. There is an instinct which prompts every woman to preserve her virtue, whether she obeys it or not; and there is an instinct called conscience, which whispers to every wife when she is overstepping the boundary line of discretion in conduct, no matter whether she dwells in country or city.

The married flirt can be classified in three divisions: The born flirt, the flirt made by circumstances or books, and the seemingly unconscious flirt.

The born flirt is a combination of selfishness, sensuousness and the love of applause. She feels that the world owes her a "good time," though the heavens are pulled down to produce it. She lives wholly in her senses, and an hour of solitude and self-communion drives her distracted. Books bore her, and music she cares for only as a cover for conversation. To be looked at, admired, courted, to drive, dance and feast, this is her idea of happiness.

She finds little to divert her in the companionship of women. Men are the stepping stones to the good of her desires. She marries young, and soon finds that one man cannot satisfactorily cater to her various tastes for amusement and pleasure and at the same time earn the money necessary to her comfort. The latter consideration is first to be considered, so she allows the husband to keep at his money getting while she looks to other men for amusement and diversion. The fact that women dislike her and gossip about her only contributes to her diversion. She construes it as a testimony to her powers. She is pleased with her husband's jealousy; and if she brings up in the divorce court at last she is not abashed or disconcerted, because she is still observed as an object of interest by the public.

The made flirt is a more sensitive, sentimental and vain being. She has read books—Ouida in particular—wherein the married siren figured as heroine. She talks a great deal about the "subtle power" which some women exercise over men, and is indignant and disgusted if you intimate that she has other than spiritual and mental attraction for the admirers who flock about her.

She feels that her husband does not fully understand her, and her vanity and idealism lead her to believe and construe as sympathy all the flattering speeches whispered in her ear, and to treasure all the notes and roses sent her by other men. If, through these indiscretions, she is led into newspaper notoriety or the courts, she is crushed to the earth, and believes herself the most abused and misconstrued woman on earth. If she escapes this experience, she continues into middle life, her lovers growing younger as she grows older—and ridicule taking the place of criticism on the public lip.

The seemingly unconscious married flirt is perhaps the most dangerous and certainly the most aggravating of all. She looks straight in the eyes of men with childlike trust, and seems not to understand their bold suggestive glances, or their meaning compliments, but she does.

Perfect mistress of herself, absolutely free from making any misstep, secure in her husband's love and respect, and in public esteem, she yet teases and tempts the admiration of men to leap dangerously near the flame of love, by those nameless arts of coquetry which are as indescribable as alluring. If any man forgets himself and speaks words to her which no honest wife should hear, she assumes the air of wounded dignity so familiar to us through theatrical representation, and cries: "Sir, how dare you," or she breaks into tears of surprise and pain, and straitmay makes the man feel like a brute and an assassin.

He leaves her, convinced of her stainless purity and absolute innocence, and she tells her husband all about it, after extracting a promise from him that he will do nothing rash, but let the matter drop right where it is. The husband is indignant at the man, and full of sympathy for his wife, whose seeming humiliation and grief touch him with renewed admiration and pride.

This type of married flirt seldom gets herself gossiped about, though she goes on with her innocent allurements to the end of life. She causes heartache and disappointment, but not absolute disaster and scandal. She takes the perfume from the rose of danger, she avoids the thorn; and, whatever result comes of her actions, she always receives the sympathy of the public and leaves the blame and censure for others to bear.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Old Hundred.

The name of the author or composer of the tune which we know as "Old Hundred" is unknown. The tune, it seems, first appeared in the Genevan psalter. It was the melody adapted to Beza's version of Psalm 134, included in the first installment of psalms, thirty-four in number, added by him to the Genevan psalter in 1551. No copy of that psalter, containing the tunes to these psalms, is known of earlier date than 1554, but there is little doubt that they were added to the psalms either at the time of the publication of the latter or in 1552, when Bourgeois was musical editor of the Genevan psalter. To Bourgeois therefore, if to anyone, the tune in its present form may be ascribed, but how far it is original is uncertain. The greater part of the melodies in the Genevan psalter are known to be adaptations of secular tunes of the time, and the "Old Hundredth" is, no doubt, one of the number. The name "Old Hundredth" is peculiar to England. The psalm was originally known as the "Hundredth," but after the appearance of the new version by Brady and Tate in 1696 the word "Old" was added to the titles of the tunes continued in use from the preceding psalter of Sternhold and Hopkins, to which no special names are given.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Syringe and the Pipe.

From a western point of view there is one great drawback to opium-smoking—it takes too much time. Western hurry seems, however, to be gradually permeating even the vices of the east, and now the morphine syringe rivals the opium-pipe, if we may believe a report which reaches us from Hong Kong. The practice has been known for some time in Shanghai, and some six months ago it was brought to Hong Kong, where there are now some twenty houses in which a regular trade in it is openly carried on. Each house has, on an average, fifty clients, who call in the morning and the evening and take their dose. An injection is much cheaper than a smoke, and, primarily, no doubt, that is the reason of its rapid popularity. Curiously enough, the pretense is that it is used as a cure for the vice of opium-smoking, to which, however, it would seem to have about the same relation as a whisky-bar has to a beer-saloon. The immediate happiness of an injection, which can be had without the loss of time, the public exposure or the loathsome associations of the opium-den, is a far more dangerous temptation than the more slowly-acting and more expensive pipe. Truly in this matter John Chinaman is jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire.—British Medical Journal.

"I Don't Care a Rap."

Sometimes these words come from the lips of some defiant boy or girl, who, by the way, may care a great deal in spite of this off-hand assertion to the contrary. I never quite knew what the expression meant, but I suspected it alluded to a rap on the hand or head, until I one day heard the dear little schoolma'am explaining to the deacon that a rap was a counterfeit coin, formerly used in Ireland as small change. It was the smallest coin, and of the very least worth, and so folks came to express their utter indifference to a thing or a circumstance by exclaiming: "I don't care a rap."—St Nicholas.

A little fellow of three years was asked by a gentleman how old he was. "I'm not old!" he exclaimed, quite indignantly. "I'm almost new."—Harper's Young People.

A DEADLY COMBAT.

Hank Welsh, who has followed whaling for many years, was lucky enough to be one of a crew beyond the Gulf of the Holy Cross last spring that came upon a large whale in distress, surrounded by three monster orcas, or billers, which had him winded and badly wounded. The story is best told by Welsh:

"We saw a big broadhead half a mile away to windward, and he kept a-jumping so hard that we knew he was in trouble. When we got close we saw some thrashers or billers afoul of him, and the water for an acre or two around was bloody. The orcas were pretty big ones and very vicious, especially one which was fully twenty feet long, and when the whale went down a few fathoms this old boy rushed down after him and gave it to him hard. You see a whale can stay under about half an hour, and he can go down four hundred or five hundred fathoms without minding the pressure, but he can't do a single submarine trick ahead of an orca. These orcas sometimes chase a whale so hard that when he hits the bottom he breaks his jawbone. Well, this old orca followed the whale so savagely that he did not stay down over five minutes at a time, and when he came up he was jumped by the other two, which kept watch on him like two hungry wolves. When he saw the ferocious gang he seemed to lose heart, for they were too quick for him. I think he was just about worn out or down-hearted, or something, for he anchored for a second. This gave the big orca a chance to slide up and catch him by the under lip and bite a piece out. The old fellow lashed and dived, but down went another orca after him.

"When the whale came up the orca had him by the lip, and the third one caught him by the tongue. Now a whale's tongue is six feet long and weighs as much as a man. The way the orcas jerked it all out of him piece by piece and then ate off his lower lip in spite of all he could do, beat all the fights under the sun. How that whale did suffer till we got up and let a dynamite boom into him. When Bill Peters lanced him he seemed to enjoy it, for he turned over and died easily."

It seems to be agreed among all whalers that no fight ever seen equals the awful combats which these sea monsters wage against one another with unflagging ferocity. The orca is the only grampus or warm-blooded animal of the ocean that constantly preys upon warm-blooded creatures of his own kind, preferably the whale, the largest of his species. The orca's habits are predatory, and his strength and ferocity are remarkable.

"The orcas often travel with sword fish," said Capt. Thompson, an old whaler, "and I have sometimes seen a whole school in combat with four or five orcas and a few sword fish. When the sword fish gets under a whale and the orcas commence to tear his under lip and tongue, which are choice morsels for them, he seems to know his days are numbered. I don't know how long a whale can live after these savage creatures attack him, but our crews have found several carcases of whales which had bled to death from wounds thus inflicted by their enemies. I have also seen broken-backed orcas which had been struck by a whale's flukes.—San Francisco Chronicle.

ARIZONA KICKER

Editor Expresses Himself Regarding an Esteemed Cotemporary.

A Disgrace to Journalism.—On several occasions during the past year we have made mention of the critter down the street whom journalistic decency compels us to refer to as our esteemed cotemporary. He can neither write, shoot, play poker nor ride a bucking bronco. On Wednesday afternoon last we met the critter at the post office, and had some words with him. He at once challenged us to fight a duel, and the affair came off in the rear of the engine-house at 3 o'clock. We arrived on the ground without weapons, while he had a navy revolver and twenty spare cartridges. We allowed him to name the distance, ten paces, and we then took our station thirty feet away, back to him, and requested him to blaze away until he got tired. He promptly reponded. We stood with our hands under our coat tails and our face to a billboard with circus pictures on it. The critter shot and yelled and whooped and shot, and nobody interfered with him till his last bullet was gone. Then some of the boys who objected to the noise hauled him off and steered him in the direction of his carpet rag foundry, and the duel was declared over. The best shot he made didn't come within a foot of us, and most of them were five or six feet wide of the target.

In the name of western journalism we protest against this man continuing to call himself an editor, and ride about the country on free passes. The idea of a reptile who can't do better shooting than that coming into this territory to publish a paper and seeking to mold public opinion is a positive insult even to the coyotes and jackass rabbits. His case should be brought before the next meeting of the Press association for action, and unless we are greatly mistaken in the make-up of that body, there will be a resolution adopted outlawing this man from the society of all journalists in their own limits. When we reflect that Arizona is crying for admission to the household of states, and that if she is admitted that lop-eared critter will have to be taken in too, we feel like laying aside our pen and declaring that we will never take it up again to argue for enlightenment and civilization.—N. Y. Sun.

Rheumatism, a Blood Disease.

AFTON, UNION CO., Iowa, Nov. 16th, 1893.—I have been troubled with the rheumatism for the last ten years. About five years ago I had the typhoid fever, and since then I have been worse. Last spring I was so affected from my head to my feet on the left side, that I could not straighten. Then I got a bottle of Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood, and took it according to directions, until I had taken about half the bottle, when I began to feel much better, and now I feel like a new man.

Two ways of washing.

One is the same way your grandmother washed—but there wasn't anything better, in her day. You rub soap into the clothes—then you rub them up and down on a washboard till you get the dirt worn off. This is hard work—and while you're wearing off the dirt, you're wearing out your clothes, too. The other way is Pearline's.

You put the clothes into Pearline and water—then you wait. Pearline gets the dirt all out. A little rinsing makes them perfectly clean.

Pearline does the work. There can't be anything so easy, so economical, or that keeps your clothes so absolutely safe from harm and wear and tear.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 426 JAMES PYLE, New York.

DELANO DIARY

—25 pounds of raisons for one dollar at C. H. Green & Co's.

—The Fair on Saturday was not so largely attended as some have been.

—On Wednesday night the wind blew a gale drifting the snow into roads and impeding travel very much —A sleigh load of Delanoites attended the literary entertainment in school district 48 Wednesday evening.

—The Great Northern have laid a new floor in each of the depot waiting rooms, at this place, a much needed improvement.

—Peter Younek, leader of the Farmers' Brass Band gave a dance at his house Monday evening the whole band furnished music.

—The case Ignatz Kowohl vs Mrs. Otillia Pogrzeba tried last Saturday before Justice Walters was decided in favor of the defendant.

—Attorneys O'Hair and Billings of Delano and Cochran, of Waverly, entertained Justice Walters and jury at Cramer's Hall on Monday evening, with their eloquence and legal lore until about three o'clock Tuesday morning in the case of Adickes vs Kowohl, verdict for plaintiff $40.50.

—Several people have been wondering how it is that our wise men have shut up churches, schools, dances, and other public gatherings, while law suits, and saloon crowds have been allowed to go on as usual, even until early in the morning, unmolested. O, consistency, thou art a jewel!

—Dad Gast has been exchanging engines, at his pump house to have his old one repared, and now has one that needs frequent rests. He is said to have alarmed the family a few nights ago and brought them to his sleeping couch, by a terrible puffing noise, on being aroused he said he was "dreaming that his old engine was blowing up, plugs and all."

--The Wrought Iron Range Company, making headquarters at Young's Hotel, have some of the finest mule teams seen in this country since the wah; and one of the employees is said to have held his own against the local editor of the "Bird," "Squire" Billings and "Soup House Billy," in a political argument a few evenings ago.

--An old veteran of the 3d Minnesota Vol. Inf. who lives near Montrose read our correspondent from California's letter and called in, the other day to see who "B. F. C." was; he said "those were the initials of our old Chaplain, B. F. Crarey, and he went to California." Hon. B. F. Christlieb, of Long Lake, who is the correspondent, and who is now in that sunny clime, will doubtless be flattered to know that he has been taken for a dominie.

—The school house is to undergo a thorough renovation, at the hands of the Board of Health, we understand, and on Monday school is to be opened up again. If people are careful and send no children that are apt to carry diphtheria, and the teachers promptly send home any that may complain, or that have sickness at home, there should be no trouble about keeping the school running. Children at school are less apt to get it than if running at large over town.

—A piece of road a few yards long through John Coolen's farm on the Watertown road, is in very bad condition. Anyone breaking his sleds or meeting with other mishaps attributable to the condition, or rather lack of condition, of that thoroughfare would doubtless be entitled to damages. The road boss should come forth from his slumbers and wake up a few of his assistants and mend his ways, at once. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Coolen's.

—The last of the diphtheria quarantine in Delano is to be raised to-morrow, Saturday.

—C. H. Green & Co. are giving 22 pounds of granulated sugar for $1. They cannot be under sold.

—August McEchren was brought before Justice Walters last Wednesday and fined $5 and costs for assault and battery.

--The Literary Society in school district No. 48, has been started up again this winter. The question for discussion next Wednesday evening, "Resolved, That the protection afforded to the American industry by duties on imports is beneficial to American people" is likely to attract a house full of folks and prove an interesting occasion. The way to learn about such questions is to read up, listen to those who have read, and then discuss the matter fairly in your own minds. Success to the Literary efforts of our neighbors, who will, doubtless soon be challenging our "city folks" to wordy combat and vanquishing them in a fair encounter.

County Cullings.

County Treasurer McKnight has sent postal cards to each individual having personal taxes to pay, politely inviting them to pay before March 1, or a penalty of 10 per cent will be added. Send in your money on or before February 28, or the penalty will be to pay the next morning.

District Court, at Buffalo is Russelling along much as before the adjournment for holidays. "Every dog has his day" is an old saying which appears to be applicable to "blind pigs" in these times. The Jimmy O'Loughlin trial for assault with intent to kill was next on the docket on Wednesday, and the arduous task of finding a jury was being gone through with.

Our hydra-headed neighbor up street with her imported editors tries to twit us for sticking up for home, and our own workmen. Since she finds occasion to do so we had as well "let the cat out of the bag" by reminding her that not many moons since, her chief, notwithstanding his love for 'protection to home industries" called a man from the County Seat to examine into the constitutionality of some of his needs! The old bird tries hard to make her readers believe that Grover Cleveland ought to be impeached for "open violation of the Constitution!" Why don't the naughty old thing point out where the Constitution is violated by the President? The old buzzard even tries to make fun of our President and Secretary of State! She even goes so far as to charge those who voted for Cleveland in '92 with being "suckers!" People have a right in this country to vote for who they please; the Force bill didn't pass. If the bird is so disgusted with this Country, its President and People perhaps she would find things more congenial in the Alpine hills, or amid London's fog, or if she has any compunctions of conscience when she thinks of returning, she might take her flight to the Hiawaiian Islands where under the Provisional Government, she might get a phat take and aid in robbing Queen Lil of her throne. She also goes for the County Commissioners for purchasing a modern steam heating aparatus for the Court House. Probably she would prefer giving them some pointers on how to procure a heating and ventilating plant at a big price, and then nail up the ventilation registers to keep people's feet from freezing like the Delano School House. The Board might have learned considerable by consulting her. They might, also have got advised to leave the $37,000. and over in the poor banks these hard times. And she gives another growl at the county papers for cutting down the prices of county printing to nearly nothing. Growling and snarling seem to be constitutional with our up street neighbor. She growls if the county expends a few cents and again when it saves something on printing, but gets her slice of the cheap work with the rest. Consequently growls at herself the same as the dog that chases his own tail around Let her growl! Let her growl! It's her nature.

A Word With Our Famers.

It is an assumption that American farmers are either ignorant or credulous, when high tariff politicians would have them believe that the imposition of duties on farm products secured to them better prices for their surplus. The honest truth is that the duties upon wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, potatoes, apples, etc., are of no practical benefit, either as sources of revenue or as a protection to the home producers against competition with the outside world. If the tariff taxes on farm products were levied for any other purpose than to fool, mislead and deceive farmers, we are at a loss to know the object. If an inquiring farmer is disposed to complain of the increased cost of the supplies which he has to purchase for the use of himself and family, occasioned by the tariff taxes, the McKinleyite calles his attention to the fact that he shares in the benefit equally with the manufacturer. His products are protected from ruinous competition, as well as the products of the loom and factory.

If we have a farmer patron who is misled by the specious and false reasoning of the advocates for protection, we would call his attention to a few indisputable facts. The price of his cereals even in the home market is fixed in Liverpool. There is not any addition to the amount received by the farmer in consequence of the tariff tax, whether that is one cent or one dollar a bushel. If it was possible for all the wheat-growers in the U. S. to organize a trust limiting productions and fixing the price of wheat, then a high tariff on incorporations would enable the trust to raise the price to the home consumer up to the top of the tariff wall. An attempt to advance beyond that would inyite importations from abroad, It is perfectly plain that a combination of farmers is impossible. Again, if he will examine the Treasury statistics he will find that if all the money received in a year from duties on wheat and corn was turned over to one individual he would have a very meager income. The duties collected on rye would not keep a tobacco smoker in Wheeling stogies for a week.

It will be claimed that if no duty was imposed upon wheat Canada would send millions of bushels into the U. S. Supposing that it be true, it would have no effect on the price of home-grown wheat, for the price in Canada and the United States would be the same, for that is fixed in a foreign country. If the wheat crop in the U. S was insufficient to supply the demand for bread and Canada had a surplus, then the duty on wheat would advance the price to the American consumer, for the amount of the duty would be added to the price, and our farmer would have to pay it as well as our fellow citizens in other pursuits. The argument that Canada would have to pay the duty for the privilege of selling in our market, and that there would be no increase cost to the American consumer, is supremely absurd. Are the American fruit growers giving seventy five cents a barrel for the privilege of supplying us with apples, or are we paying seventy-five cents a barrel more for apples in consequence of the imposition of that duty?

Canada is too far north to grow oranges. If the Dominion Government imposed a duty of $1 a box on oranges would the Florida philanthropists cheerfully supply the Bluenoses with that delicious fruit at $1 less per box than the current price at Buffalo or any other place on the border? Would not the consumers of oranges in Canada be compelled to pay the extra dollar? If that was a just and equitable way to obtain revenue for the support of the Dominion Government, the imposition of the duty is defensible. The McKinley argument is that the orange producer pays the duty for the privilege of the Canadian market, and then he boasts that he would never levy a tax upon his own people while he can find any body else to tax. Our theory is that it would benefit both sides of the line if there could be an equitable exchange of apples and oranges without the interference of a tax gatherer. Reciprocity in trade is profitable to all, and in harmony with the laws of nations.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Among Our Exchanges.

Governor Nelson is to be commended in appointing a republican to succeed Judge Thomas Canty as district judge in this, the 4th, district. Judge C. B. Elliot, of Minneapolis is his name.—Wright County Times.

Judge Canty, of Minneapolis, was sworn in as a justice of the supreme court on New Year's day and took his seat yesterday. He, is the youngest justice on the supreme bench, and the youngest man who has ever occupied a seat there.—Globe.

The difference between the duty upon foreign horses imported under the McKinley tariff and the duty fixed under the new free trade measure is $11 the difference in the duties on sheep is 12 cents per head, and on hogs 25 cents per head, so that farmers who raise stock for market must look for lower prices.—Wright County Times.

The Age was the recipient of a pleasant social call on Monday from Rev. John Doran, the new pastor of the M. E. church. He informs us that services are to be held regularly every Sabbath at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., with weekly prayer meetings on Thursday evenings at 7:30. The Sunday school is particularly being fostered and improved under the superintendency of D. L. Young and a corps of six teachers. A fine library has recently been purchastd in Chicago and is expected to arrive within a week.—Aitkin Age.

The Fergus Falls banks have been exhonorated from the charges of the Henning Advocate, the libel suit aginst the editor, Frank Hoskins, having been abandoned, and Hoskins committed to the insane asylum. If Dunn and Burk could be thus disposed of, it would prove with equal conclusiveness that C. A. Smith and John S. Pillsbury never had a finger in the socalled pine land swindles, and that Louis F. Menage and the Northwestern Guaranty Loan company never defrauded anyone. It is a proverbial chestnut that two negatives don't make a positive; but properly handled one negative may stand in place of a positive with wonderful effect.—Midway News.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

MANY leading Republicans even, denounce the A. P. A. as a political move, and a poor one at that.

THE committee in charge of the Wilson bill did a wise thing when they decided to put it on its own merits, and allow the income tax bill to look out for itself.

EDITOR C. F. MCDONALD. of the St. Cloud times has received the appointment of receiver of the St. Cloud land office. He believes "to the victors belong the spoils."

IT is rather amusing to hear leading Republicans, like ex-post masters, mayors of villages, presidents of school boards, etc. etc., arguing on the tariff question; trying to make people believe that "wool is on the free list." By the looks of things now it will be soon.

IT looks more than ever as if something might be wrong in the case of Frank Hoskins incarceration in the asylum for insane, at Fergus Falls, now that Judge Baxter refuses to hear his Habeas Corpus case and Judge Searle has gone away from the state.

WHEN it becomes necessary for an A. P. A. editor and speaker to draw a revolver and place it on the table beside him while he talks, it looks awful bad to the average citizen of this country. But then "Bleeding Kansas" must do something to keep up her reputation.

THE Willson bill is not up to the ideal with most Democrats, but it seems that a decision has been reached to cut the dogs tail off an inch at the time, so that it will not hurt so bad," and Republicans are induced to aid in the opreation on this plan. If it works well something else can be done in the same line. It leaves the protection question a political issue instead of settling it at once and forever.

Democrats Day.

The brightest spot in Democracy for years was the meeting at the Ryan on Tuesday evening. The banquet was good, and the replies by the able speakers to the toasts rose to the dignity of the occasion. Sentiments of the highest order were freely given out. The crowded house listened in wrapped attention to the speech of Judge Wilson which was Democracy pure and undefiled. Judge Rea spoke as if his heart was in his work, even if he is a new convert. J. C. Haynes, F. W. M. Cutcheon, W. M. Campbell, J. Adam Bede, and W. S. Hammond, of Medelia, who spoke in place of John A. Johnson, unavoidably absent, and Judge Willis, of St. Paul, who was called on, each in turn, added to the interest of the meeting. Those present will look back to this occasion with pride, they will point to it as a time when peace and harmony reigned supreme, and will be cultivating the seeds sown there, and advocating the ideas of true Statesmanship and Democracy in our land.

"Devil's Dust."

The adulteration of American clothing with shoddy has been lustily denied by the organs of tariff spoliation. When the census reported and the result of the latter careful investigations revealed the startling fact that over 86,000,000 pounds are now used annually in making woolen goods, the organs took refuge in a discrete silence or resorted to the prevaricating plea and much of this "Devil's Dust" entered into the manufacture of carpets. But the census returns show that while nearly $60,000,000 pounds of this stuff were used in 1890, only 653,154 pounds were used in carpet making. The remainder of the enormous quality of "Devil's Dust" manufactured yearly in the United States, is employed as a constituent material in the manufacture of "woolen clothing" for American men and women.

But this is only one side of the story of fraud in making woolens in this country under the fostering influence of the tariff. Besides the 80,000 pounds of shoddy, the census shows that no less than 70,638,865 pounds of cotton were consumed in 1890 in the manufacture of "woolen" goods in the United States. This material was at least pure and clean, bt it was not wool. According to the census the total wool, domestic and foreign, used in manufacture in 1890 amounted to 372,837,713 pounds "in the condition purchased," that is, in the "grease." this wool in the "grease," must be reduced 66⅔ per cent, "the legal rate of loss." Thus it is seen that in the manufacture of woolen goods in the U. S. in 1890, 124,000,000 pounds of pure wool (using only round numbers), and 147,000,000 pounds of cotton were used, to say nothing of several million pounds of cows' hair and other cheap adulterants. Using "shody" as a generic term the statictics prove that, pound for pound, more adulterants than pure wool are used in the American manufacture of woolen goods.

These startling revelations of the fraudulent adulterations of woolen goods in this country have a simple explanation in a barbarous and stupid tariff which imposes a duty of 80 per cent on blankets; on cloths, of 84 per cent on dress goods for woomen and children, and like rates upon nearly all other manufactures of wool. This tariff system with its temptations and encouragements to fraud, is the prime producer of "Devil's Dust." In no other land has such brutal taxation been imposed in the name of protection upon an article that is absolutely necessary for the well-being, comfort and health of the people. Yet the advocates of tariff robbery have the hardihood to write editorials or stand up in Congress and make speeches, protesting till red in the face, that a policy of taxation which makes clothing dear as well as vile with fraudulant adulterations is in the interest of American consumers.—Minneapolis Times.

Reform.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—Your criticism on some of the resolutions adopted at the annual session of the Farmers Alliance are timely. The resolutions are not above criticism. Although I am much in sympathy with the Alliance I do not consider it a perfect party. The fact that more honesty and justice is expected from the new party than any one would think of looking for in either of the old parties is a compliment worth considering. But it is a difficult task to break away from old customs. The new party is not radical enough. It patterns itself much after the old. But we must evolve slowly. When the patching up has been tried for a while they will see the force of the advice. "Do not put new wine in old bottles." This and other reform parties are but the forerunners of a great movement we trust. The idea of Edward Belamy that our economic system is like a pyramid standing on its apex and held up with props and ropes in the form of laws and rules. When the structure leans too much to one side another prop is needed and that may turn it too much to the other way so there must be another prop. Now, if as he suggests, there was enough talent given our people to devise a means of turning this structure over, so it would stand on its base, it would be right side up and could dispense with these awkward props. I read in one of the newspapers something like this: "Would it not be a blessing if some great thinker would come to the rescue and tell us just how to settle this trouble, to better or do away with hard times like the present. Now fifteen years ago that thinker foretold this state of affairs and suggested a remedy that would do away with such trouble but he was and is in advance of his age.

Mammon is the ruler in our age so all successful politicians must bow before his throne. And as they cannot serve God and Mammon, the American people must dethrone this idol before true reform is possible.

"Ring out the narrowing lust of gold, Ring in the Christ that is to be."

BUSHWHACKER.

Labor and Capital.

Figuratively speaking, capital is the fruits of labor, or, labor is the tree on which all capital is raised and while the tree bears its fruit for the palate of others so labor toils for the benefit of capital.

Every city, every railroad and every cottage, stand as a monument to labor and industry. Labor must look upon these, her handiwork, with a friendly feeling and regard.

For labor to lay violent hands upon capital is but to take the part of the assassin and dig its own grave.

It is the soulless individuals and corporations, that are the active mainsprings, which move and operate capital that would grind and enslave labor.

The arming of 300 Pinkertons at Homestead to coerce and enslave labor, the manipulation of capital to starve labor into submission, and the frequent use of money and the courts to overawe labor and its rights, points backward to the days of its slavery, rather than a blissful future of brain and muscle.

The fertility of the American soil, the richness of her minds and her extensive forests have furnished a rich field for labor and manufacture, not surpassed by anyother country.

But her soil has been robbed of its fertility, the pioneers life has driven him to seek for immediate profit, and immediate gain and profit is all that he has sought for.

Her mines have been plundered and the millionare mushroom has grown out of every shaft. They have only been worked for immediate profit.

Her extensive forests have been blown down, lumbering has been carried on merely for immediate profit, and labor and manufacture must face the sturn reality that the red man's shoes are wearing out and natures graneries being robbed of their fullness.

The time when a man with a few teams and men could plunder government land and start down the stream of fortune is passed, and such a start now means only to be brought down the stream by the United States marshal. In the face of this we must confess that the United States is as rich as one year ago. Uncle Sam has many broad acres, he is ribbed by more railroads and has as much food in store. But the withdrawal of capital from the chambers of trade and manufactures just because the immediate profits are not large enough is a criminal blow at labor and must be keenly felt by all the brain and muscle in the land.

H. E. CRANDALL.

Conditions.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—With your permission I wish to say a few words to the readers of your much valued paper. The conditions under which we at this time exist calls for deep and earnest thought. Every person who has the welfare of himself and country at heart ought to give a close scrutiny to the cause of what has brought this our once glorious republic to its present fearful condition. Do the people generally know that we as a nation are on the verge of dissolution? I fear not. We have so many panics that in this country the people look at them as a matter of course, and never take much heed to them so long as they can plod along and live. I think indifferance is wrong. It gives designing persons a chance to take advantage of their leathargy to the people's great detriment. When we look at our condition in a political point of view we are confronted with a spectacle, deep, dark and portentous never witnessed before by any nation on earth. Just look at us as a people. Here we are in this land of plenty with all the resources any people can have piled up mountain high over procudtion in what we eat and what we wear with all other things thrown in and at the same time hundreds and thousands of our fellows are hungry, starving and freezing and to be fed out of charities soup kettle. And what has grown out of this condition of things in this free America? Lying, defrauding, theft, robbery, stealing, murder, insanity and debauchery of every character and description. Now I wish to ask your readers why is all this taking place? But says a great many its all a lie I will say to them then that your newspaper editors are all liars of the deepest die for all the papers are full of this calamity howl. Dear readers if you would stop and do a little calm thinking you would see very soon there is something rotten in Denmark and perhaps in America too. Now all you people who are trying to make an honest living by labor do you think you are getting what you ought for that labor? Do you have plenty of good food, comfortable clothes; are your children being educated up to the requirements of our civilization, (I should say uncivilization). If you have all these things you are a plutrocrat and living off the hard earnings of some other persons for no person can live decently on his or her labor daily without having a pull at others purse strings. Now kind readers are you willing to live in such a way that corporate greed can take all or nearly all your hard earnings and thereby live on the top shelf on the fat of the land that you have produced by your hard labor and you live in want squalor and rags and your children grow up in ignorance fit subjects for the poor house or the penitentiary. Now readers if you will stop these conditions stop and think. Don't you know you are the ones who have been instrumental in bringing these conditions about. You have been running along in the old rut for lo these many years, doing and voting as some willy politician has told you to do so he could turn around and skin you out of your honest living, and you then get down on your knees and ask the ones you have made sick by your folly, the priviledge to live. All business now must bow to the nod of corporate greed. The conditions are such now that the money power can gobble up all the valuable property of the country at one half its worth then raise a boom and sell it again. Now vote the old party ticket if you wish. INDEPENDENT THINKER.

The Swelling Tide of Destruction.

The people should be reminded, also, that the consumption of beer (according to the last government report) increased from two millions of barrels, in 1862, to thirty-five millions of barrels, in 1893—this being an increase of over 17 times during the past 30 years, while the population has only doubled—and now average three barrels of beer annually to every voter or family in the United States, while the consumption of othir intoxicating liquors has also largely increased. It is significant that while this increase has been going on the arrests for crime have also increased five fold during the same period.—From "Our Nation's Peril," in Demorest's Family Magazine for February.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12, 1894.

President Cleveland has just given a practical demonstration of his earnestness in turning the settlement of the Hawaiian complication over to congress, by putting the official dispatches just received from Minister Willis at its disposal. No one in Washington seriously believes that any danger is to be apprehended from the reported probability of British marines being landed at Honolulu. It is well known to the British government that the United States will not tolerate any interferance by any foreign government with Hawaii.

The democrats of the House have much more than held their own in the tariff debate this week, although some of their best posted men have purposely made no speeches in favor of the Wilson bill. With the exception of Representative Tom Johnson, of Ohio, who opposes the bill because it retains too much protection and who favors free trade without any if's, and's or but's, no democrat has spoken against the underlying principle of the bill, even Representative Haines, of New York, who represents the Troy district, and who has been quoted as being strongly opposed to the bill admitted in his speech that he would vote for it if the schedule affecting the industries of Troy were amended to meet his wishes. Next week he and others will have an opportunity to offer any amendment they may desire and the House will decide whether they shall be abopted or rejected. It is not thought probable by any member with whom I have conversed that any material amendment will be adopted before the bill is passed by the House on the 29th of January. It is in the Senate that the friends of the measurer fear it will be amended almost beyond recognition. Washington is now full of parties interested in having the bill amended and they are all basing their hopes of success on the Senate and not on the House. The Senate Finance committee will begin to give hearings to those intesested as soon as the bill passes the House.

The republican leaders of the House were very cleverly taught a little lesson by the democrats this week which would convince men with less conceit that Reed, Burrows & Co., have not secured a corner in parlimentary knowledge. It was the intention of the aforesaid republican leaders to get at least two days debate out the questions of the power of the House to have members arrested, and of the right of members to vote while under arrest, when the motion for the discharge of the arrested members came up. This waste of time that properly belonged to the consideration of the tariff bill was not countenanced by the democrats who easily defeated it by having the Sergeant-at-Arms make his report at a time when the republican leaders were off their guard. It did not take a moment for Representative Catchings to ask unanimous consent for the discharge from custody of the arrested members and for Speaker Crisp to declare them discharged, there being no objection. By that time the know-it-all republicans had discovered what was going on, but it was too late.

Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, who has been widely advertised by republican papers as a tariff "kicker," has been compelled by a troublesome throat affection to take a trip to Florida in search of relief, but before going he addressed a letter to Senator Voorhees which effectually disposes of any doubt as to his position towards tariff reform. He says in that letter: "In order that you and my other democratic colleagues on the committee may know what to expect from me I here state that the democratic side of the committee on Finance must make the tariff bill and then every member of said committee must stand by the work done. To do otherwise is to confess that we are not fit to govern. I write thus plainly, as I see the newspapers have placed me on the list of those called obstructionists. I have not denied the report, as I never deny anything the newspapers say of me, but I will always try to speak for myself when the time comes."

Secretary Carlisle explained this week to the members of the Senate Finance committee and those of the House Ways and Means committee the immediate necessity for legislation to provide the money to meet the $50,000,000 deficit now staring the Treasury in the face. His objects was not to argue in favor of the recommendations made in his annual report, but to impress upon the minds of his hearers the necessity for action, leaving them entirely free as to the nature of the legislation and asking only that it provide the money necessary to meet payments and preserve the credit of the government. It is the object of the members of both committees to agree upon a bill that will not arouse sufficient opposition to cause the extended financial debate in either the House or the Senate. They recognize that such a debate at this time would be dangerous if not actually hurtful to the country.

Representative McMillin, says it has not been definitely decided whether the income tax shall be offered as an amendment to the tariff bill or as a separate measure.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

There were quite a good many people in Delano from Independence last Monday buying sugar at Epple's old stand, 25 pounds for $1.

How sweet to reflect
On the joys that await us.

We think the weather prophets have lost their reckoning; think they have got off to the Sandwich Islands.

We hope all the stock holders of Lewis' Cemetary will remember the annual meeting on the 27th inst, at the town hall, Armstrong, at 7:30. There is considerable business to be done.

S. W. Yokley has sold his property on the south shore of Lake Independence to some Minneapolis parties.

Lo Plant, of Long Lake, was seen in our town last Sunday.

We have been having our January thaw.

Ennis Brandon, of Royalton, Minn., has sold his 40 acre farm in Sec. 4, town of Independence, to J. W. Potter of Armstrong. It seems farm land is coming in demand again.

Some of our farmers have been hauling hay to Minneapolis.

B. R. Hoisington is furnishing saw dust for the ice packers at 25 cents a load.

Some think times are easing up a little. Wheat does not seem to advance in price any and the prospect for a rise is not very flattering.

Watch Your Kerosene Stoves and Lamps.

MANY of the labor saving sources of artifical heat are death-dealing in their effect upon the air of a room. Both gas and kerosene stoves are enormous consumers of oxygen, and neither should be tolerated except under the condition of constant supply of fresh air. These strictures do not apply to gas-logs placed in a grate, which furnish most grateful and healtful warmth, as the chimney secures perfect ventilation. There is an added danger in a kerosene stove when in unskilled hands, as in addition to consuming the oxygen it also, if there is the slightest thing out of order, gives forth a deadly gas. The imperfect closing of a burner cap, leaving the least crack will cause this or the accumulation of dirt above the burner.

Another frequent source of evil is a lighted kerosene lamp turned down. The vile oder resulting—very unpleasant to some people, though there are noses that do not perceive it—is a very poisonous gas, most dangerous to human life, and pronounced by high authority capable of causing diphtheria and some contagious fevers. The would-be economist who turns the lamp down to save oil is instructed that she saves scarce a farthing; while the gas which feeds the flame is generated but unconsumed, and, polluting the atmosphere, endangers the health and even lives of the occupants.—From "Sanitarian," in Demorests Family Magazine for February.

List of Patents.

Granted to Minnesota inventors this week. Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C:

M. O. Barke, Fergus Falls, churn; T. Foretner, New Ulm, car coupling; B. F. Fowler, Minneapolis, device for carrying off odors from cooking vessels; D. A. Robinson, Minneapolis, swivel sepport for grain spouts.

The Game Laws.

The state game and fish commissioners at a meeting last Wednesday prepared a synopsis of the game law of the state, and have sent copies of the same to all sheriffs and game wardens in the state. The synopsis gives the times when the various kinds of game and fish may be lawfully captured, and the manner of taking same:

Woodcock and plover, July 4 to Oct. 31.

Wild duck, or any variety of wild goose, brant, or other aquatic fowl or snipe, April 25 to Sept. 1.

Deer, Nov. 1 to 20.

Trout, April 1 to Dec. 1.

Any other kind of fish, April 15 to Dec. 1.

No fawn to be killed or had in possession at any time.

No moose, elk, or caribou to be killed until Jan. 1, 1899.

Use of dogs or hounds in hunting deer strictly prohibited.

Fishing allowed only with the hook and line, all other contrivances prohibited.

No fishing allowed within 400 feet of any fishway.

Arrests may be made without a warrant when the parties are caught in violation of of this act. Resistance of wardens or officers or obstruction by threat or otherwise when in discharge of their duty are punishable by a fine of from $100 to $200 or imprisonment. It shall be the duty of all members of the board of game and fish commissioners, all game wardens, sheriffs and their deputies, constables and police officers of this state to enforce the law and arrest all persons violating any of the provisions thereof.

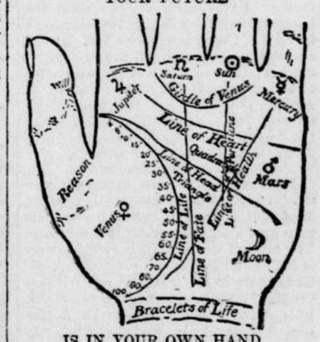
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well-marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

AFTER being dumb for twenty-three years, an Indiana woman has recovered the faculty of speech. She will have lots to tell her husband now, and he will receive the universal commiseration of his sex.

THE snow is seven feet deep a few hundred miles south of Tacoma. It must keep the roses and cabbages hustling to grow stalk long enough to get out into the sunshine, as the coast people say they do.

BY the transposition of a space the Chicago Tribune conveyed to its readers the impression that "A Fight with Outlaws" was "A Fight Without Laws." There is both a distinction and a difference here, although the letters of the sentence are all there, and correctly placed for the expression of either idea.

SOME fellow, ambitious to shine as a practical joker, inserted an advertisement in a Chicago newspaper offering employment to a number of laborers. Eight hundred applied on the morning of the day on which the advertisement appeared, only to find that they had been cruelly hoaxed. Such jokes are the reverse of funny.

THE remains of the late Lucy Stone have been cremated at Boston in compliance with her own request made shortly before her death. The incident, which would have created a wide-spread sensation a few years ago, has excited little comment, so easily have our people become accustomed to this mode of disposing of the dead.

IT is generally supposed that the Brooklyn bridge has the longest single span (1,595 feet) in the world, but there are several much longer; two in the bridge in the Frith of Forth are each 1,700 feet in length, and that over Oxus has a span of 2,004 feet. The proposed Hoboken bridge will have a single span of 2,850 feet.

NAVIGATION of the great lakes during the season of 1893 resulted in the loss of 123 lives. The number of vessels lost was fifty-three, with an aggregate tonnage of 24,258, and valued at $1,040,400. Partial losses by strandings, collisions and fires bring the total up to $2,112,588. The shallow waters of Lake Erie claimed nearly half the lives lost, Lake Huron being second.

CHOLUTECA has been captured. This will be news to a great many who are ignorant of the fact that anybody wanted Choluteca. The capture was made by Gen. Policarpo Bonilla, at the time Vasquez was held at bay near Guscaran by Gen. Herradora. A march on Tegucigalpa will be made soon, and if this, too, is captured, Policarpo Bonilla will declare the Nicaraguan revolution off and proof readers on American newspapers will exult.

IN December last 11,262 immigrants were landed in New York, and Italy took the lead with 3,784, Germany followed with 1,821, and Russia came next with 1,492, and Hungary next with 755. Of the whole crowd 5,259 brought more than $30 each and the aggregate money brought was $166,778, Italians bringing the most, $45,981; Germans, $34,026; Russians, $15,191; French, $13,084; Swedes, $9,341; Austrians, $8,539; Hungarians, $8,224; Danes, $6,155; Irish, $5,064.

GRIP seems to be responsible for many cases of insanity. Almost every day the newspapers contain reports of crimes committed by both men and women while laboring under mental aberration caused by the disease, which this year appears to have taken a stronger hold upon the mental faculties than heretofore. The physician who shall discover a specific for this disorder may be assured of a lasting monument in the hearts of the people of the whole world.

THE National Mary Washington Monument association has made an appeal for funds to complete the monument begun fifty years ago to the memory of the mother of Washington. The shaft has been erected near Mary Washington's home at Fredericksburg, Va., but it and the plot of ground are in a ruinous condition, and $15,000 is asked for to be contributed by the women of America, to carry out the original intention. The association desires that this work shall be done exclusively through the liberality of women.

MASSACHUSETTS has nine ex-governors living. The oldest is George S. Boutwell, elected in 1850. He was the youngest man ever elected to the office. The next of the surviving ex-governors is Nathaniel P. Banks, elected in 1857. The others in their order are William Claflin, William Gaston, Alexander H. Rice, John D. Long, George D. Robinson, Oliver Ames and John Q. A. Brackett. William E. Russell will soon be added to the list. Since Mr. Boutwell's election eight ex-governors have died. New York has only three surviving ex-governors—Cornell, Cleveland and Hill.

A CHICAGO man secured a divorce on the ground that he was led to the altar blindfolded and wedded to a woman he had never seen. He parted from her on the day after the marriage, and it appears that she was as anxious for the separation as he. Under the circumstances the court thought it proper to sever the ties that bound a reluctant groom to an equally reluctant bride. Their friends propose to introduce them to each other, in the hope that an affection may spring up between them. If they had thought of this expedient before the marriage, the divorce proceedings might have been avoided.

THE highest court in Holland has handed down a decision directly contrary to the law as interpreted in this country. Criminal action was brought against a man for kissing a young woman against her will. The final decision is that "to kiss a person is not an offense, as it is in the nature of a mark of sympathy." Doubtless many will agree with this opinion, but the majority will cling to the good old-fashioned belief that kissing should go only by favor. This is the view of courts in the United States, and fines ranging from one dollar up to the thousands have been imposed for infractions of the rule.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

TUESDAY, Jan. 9.—In the senate the house bill for the repeal of the federal elections law was brought up, but action was postponed till Monday next. In the house Mr. Wilson (Va.) finished his speech in favor of the tariff bill and Mr. Burrows (Mich.) spoke against the measure. In the house a favorable report was made on the resolution offered by Mr. Boutelle (Me.) calling upon the secretary of the navy to inform the house by what authority instructions were issued placing the naval forces under the orders of Minister Blount, and to furnish copies of all orders or suggestions issued by himself or any officer of the navy since March 4, 1893, concerning the naval forces at the Hawaiian islands.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 10.—In the senate the resolution declaring against any moral or physical interference in Hawaii pending the conclusion of the senatorial investigation was discussed, but no action was taken. In the house the tariff bill was further discussed and Mr. Johnson (dem., O.) attacked the democrats for the timid manner in which they had handled the tariff question and charged them with cowardice all along the line. Mr. Dalzell (dem., Pa.) made a speech in defense of the tariff.

THURSDAY, Jan. 11.—In the senate the Hawaiian matter was further discussed and the minority report of the committee on privileges and elections on the bill to repeal the federal election laws was presented. In the house the time was occupied in discussing the tariff bill. Speeches were limited to one hour and many members took part in the debate.

FRIDAY, Jan. 12.—In the senate the greater part of the session was devoted to executive business. The nomination of Mr. Preston to be director of the mint was confirmed. Adjourned to the 15th. In the house a resolution calling upon the president for all information in his possession touching recent reported events in the Hawaiian islands was reported favorably and temporarily laid on the table. The tariff bill was further discussed.

SATURDAY, Jan. 13.—There was no session in the senate In the house a message from the president on Hawaiian affairs was read and referred to the foreign affairs committee. The tariff bill was further discussed.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A. F. & A. M.

The grand lodge of Masons, in session at St. Paul, chose the following officers: Grand master, C. L. Brown, of Morris; deputy grand master, C. L. West of Austin; senior grand warden, J. F. Lawless, of St. Paul; junior grand warden, A. T. Stebbins, of Rochester; grand treasurer, J. H. Thompson, of Minneapolis; grand secretary, Thomas Montgomery, of St. Paul.

The following were appointed: Grand orator, A. S. Crossfield, Browns Valley; grand chaplain, Samuel Ellery, Blue Earth City; senior grand deacon, O. C. Hanson, Morris; junior grand deacon, H. M. Myers, Minneapolis; grand marshal, E. A. D. Salter, Atwater; grand sword bearer, O. L. Donburg, Redwood Falls; grand standard bearer, D. T. Calhoun, St. Cloud; senior grand steward, S. W. Frasier, Wheaton; junior grand steward, H. D. Jenkes, Jasper, grand pursuivant, Henry Nupson, Preston; grand tyler, J. C. Fisher, St. Paul.

Charters were granted to four new lodges: At Heron Lake, Hallock, Graceville and Winthrop.

State Board of Health.

The new state board of health met at the governor's office to organize under the new law. The members were all present, as follows: Drs. Perry H. Millard, St. Paul; Charles M. Hewitt, Red Wing; Franklin Staples, Winona; C. F. McComb, Duluth; K. Hoegh, Minneapolis; W. J. Mayo, Rochester; W. H. Leonard, Minneapolis; Edward Boeckman, St. Paul; W. L. Beebe, St. Cloud.

The report of the secretary, Dr. Chas. M. Hewitt, as being the report of a board now passing out of existence, was made very comprehensive, and covered practically the history of the health service during the 22 years of existence. Dr. Staples, as president, and Dr. Hewitt, as secretary, were re-elected for the present year.

State Agricultural Society.

The State Agricultural society met at St. Paul, with about 75 delegates present. The report of Secretary Cross showed the total receipts to be $5,411.55, and disbursements, $5,189.55, leaving a balance in the treasury of $222. Col. John H. Stevens, of Minneapolis, was elected president and Ed Weaver, of Mankato, first vice president. A. P. Hendrickson, of St. Paul, was elected second vice president. Clark Chambers was re-elected as a director for three years, and the same honor was conferred upon C. N. Cosgrove, of Le Sueur.

Loss of Two Mills.

The railroad and warehouse commission has furnished a statement showing the market value of No. 1 hard wheat at Duluth on Dec. 22, 1893, as compared with actual sales of 8,000 bushels "Manitoba" No. 1 hard in London on the same day, being the only sale of No. 1 hard wheat in London or Liverpool from Dec. 19 to 26 inclusive. Assuming that this wheat was transported to New York via lake and canal before the close of navigation, the result, it is shown, would have been a loss of 2 mills per bushel to the exporter.

The Coal Combine Case.

Judge Otis, of St. Paul, has filed an order denying the motion of defendants to set aside the judgment and grant leave to answer in the case of John J. Rhodes vs. Richards A. Walsh and others of the alleged coal combine investigating committee. Judge Otis' order is made without prejudice to defendants to renew the motion on further showing, and grants a stay of proceedings.

THE ALLIANCE.

The Annual Convention is Held in Minneapolis.

Ignatius Donnelly is Re-Elected President by Acclamation—A Conference is Held with the State Prison Officials Regarding Binding Twine.

At the annual convention of the Minnesota State Farmers' Alliance, Ignatius Donnelly was re-elected president without opposition. There were three ballots for secretary, the place going finally to A. H. Hendrickson, who got 105 votes to 54 for C. H. Johnson. H. V. Poor dropped out after the first ballot. State Senator R. M. Probstfield was unanimously elected treasurer. These are the vice-presidents by congressional districts:

First—J. I. Vermilya.
Second—C. H. Johnson.
Third—C. N. Perkins.
Fourth—C. F. Stark.
Fifth—George W. Day.
Sixth—C. F. Bohall.
Seventh—R. J. Hall.

L. C. Long was elected state lecturer by acclamation.

A conference was held with Warden Wolfer, of the penitentiary, Messrs. Norrish, Dunn and Temple, of the board, regarding binding twine. They explained they were desirous of doing all in their power to aid the farmers, and the proposition submitted by the alliance to sell twine to the members on the same basis as to dealers was considered favorably. This will result in giving a combination of consumers who may purchase in carload lots or lesser wholesale quantities the 90-day credit system, the same as granted to dealers. After a lengthy discussion the matter was left with the alliance executive committee, who will confer with the state prison board. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The people of our state and nation have recently had presented to them in a forcible manner the means used by the ruling powers to defeat the will of the people in more than one instance; and

Whereas, The various corporate and so-called financial leaders have for years ruled the masses—rich and poor alike—with a rod of iron and effectually prevented a fair expression of the sentiment prevailing among all classes; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we demand the immediate and unconditional taxation of all railroad lands for current as well as back taxes.

That we demand that the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad company, and all other railroad companies maintaining a corporate existence, be requested to pay to the state all taxes upon gross earnings received by them, and remaining due and unpaid, even when any such companies fail to operate their lines of road, but have gross earnings, and we call on the attorney general to wind up all such corporations as fail to themselves operate their roads.

That we call upon the governor of this state and president of the United States to remove the present incompetent bank examiners to the end that competent examiners may be appointed and the public and private funds be deposited in solvent and safe concerns.

That the course pursued by a part, if not all, of the so-called daily press of the Twin Cities in shielding the criminal acts of the official, political and financial leaders of this state is a disgrace to them, the said cities and the state of Minnesota, and calculated to endanger the lives, liberty and property of her citizens, and foster and encourage the commission of crime.

That in the recent decision of the supreme court of this state, destroying the elevator law, we feel that said court has usurped the legislative function and set aside the will of the people, thus destroying their sovereignty.

That we demand that all persons who have amassed their fortunes out of school, university or state lands be made to disgorge any and all sums they may have illegally or fraudulently acquired, and we invite all regents of the University and other officials, past and present, who have so acquired, or aided others in unlawfully acquiring lands, to vacate their offices and disgorge their holdings.

That we condemn the measure known as the state capitol bill, as well as the alleged means by which its passage was secured, and invite that new legislative body—the supreme court—to apply to it the same rule as was applied to the elevator bill.

That we condemn the fraudulent management of many so-called financial concerns and invite the grand and petit juries and all county officials to do their duty to the end that the new state capitol, if completed, may be built by the labor of those who desired its erection.

That we heartily endorse the twine plant established at Stillwater, and we ask the farmers of the state to give the same their support by using the twine there manufactured, and we also ask that suitable agencies for the sale of the product thereof may be established in each county.

That we heartily endorse the nationalization of the liquor traffic.

That we favor universal suffrage without regard to sex.

That we favor the passage of such laws as will enable the payment of taxes by installment, by such as desire, thus leaving the money in the hands of the people instead of broken banks.

That we favor the election of president, vice president and United States senators by a direct vote of the people.

That we favor regulation by law of railroad and express charges, to make them conform to the present impoverished conditions of the people, and declare that the government ownership of railroads, express and telegraph companies is the only just and final solution of the problem.

That we favor the adoption of the system of initiative and referendum, since all laws should emanate from and be approved by the people.

That we condemn the act demonetizing silver and the methods and means used to secure the same, believing it impolitic and unjust to so contract the circulating medium.

That we believe the selection of J. Sterling Morton as secretary of agriculture to be a deliberate and direct insult to the farmers and producing classes of this country.

That we condemn the issuing of any more United States bonds, but we demand that there be an increase of the money of the country by the issuance of full legal tender notes, direct, without the intervention of banks of issue.

That we call upon the coming state and national conventions of the reform movement by whatever name known to place in their platforms a demand that all salaries of state and federal officers shall be reduced to correspond with those paid for like services rendered in other callings.

Whereas, Indiana has adopted a system of loaning out public funds on real estate security at a low rate of interest, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we favor the adoption of a similar course in this state.

FIXING THE HEATER.

Costly Experiment of a Philadelphia Man Who Tried to Be Economical.

"Henry," said Mrs. Rattles to her husband, as they got up from the dinner table, "I wish you would run around and ask the man to come and fix our heater."

"What's the matter with it?" inquired Henry.

"I don't know," replied Mrs. Rattles, "but it won't work."

"Well, I'll just tinker it myself," responded Henry, who was full of confidence in his ability, although he knew as much about the construction of a heater as he did of a locomotive.

"There is no use paying out all our money to the heater and range man. The plumber got all last week's salary, but we will try to keep a few dollars for family use."

Then he got a candle and went down cellar, prepared to have a collar and elbow wrestling match with as innocent a looking heater as ever downed an unsuspecting household. He stuck the candle in the open door and peered in. The candle dropped into the heater and left him in the darkness. Henry groped around for a while in the interior, which suddenly had assumed vast proportions. He found the candle and ruined his shirt sleeves at the same time.

After lighting it he peered up from the bottom, inwardly cursing the hard cement floor, which hurt his knees. Then he got on his back, and sticking his head under the grate as far as possible, saw that a bolt had rusted off the grate. With his left hand he agitated the dumping apparatus to see what the effect would be. About half a bushel of last season's ashes came down and filled his eyes, hair and neck full.

Mrs. Rattles hurriedly sent the children up to the third floor so that they should not hear their father's remarks.

Then he got the hatchet and poker and in a few minutes had the grate out. With it he came upstairs and rested, while Mrs. Rattles figured that his new suit to replace the one ruined would cost at least twenty-six dollars.

Then he sent for the heater man, who examined the job and explained that three dollars would about repair the damage. "A two-cent bolt was all it needed," he said, "but I suppose the hired girl broke the grate trying to shake it."

"Yes, that's it, she did," lied Mr. Rattles, glibly, and then he went upstairs and took a bath and put on his best clothes. At the club that night he explained to the boys that he got his injuries trying to capture a burglar.—Philadelphia Call.

THE SCIENCE OF COOKING.

A Little Chat on the Subject of Food—Some Gentle Hints.

While many housekeepers take great pride in the knowledge of the science of cooking, and their skill in concocting fine dishes, there are few who understand the true science—the sanitary part of food preparation.

All nutriments consist of two leading elements, carbonates and nitrates. The former answers to charcoal, which when burned throws out heat. Oil, butter, fat meat and sugar belong to the carbonates or heating foods. In a hundred parts of oil there are nearly a hundred parts of carbon or warmth. It is the same with sugar. Hence in cold weather our system demands more fats and sweets than in summer.

The nitrogeneous food make muscles and imparts strength. Rice, beans, potatoes, wheat, corn, oats, beef, etc., belong to this class. Some of these have also a large proportion of the carbonaceous elements.

Wheaten grits, crushed wheat and graham bread have all the elements needed to give warmth and strength to the body, and would keep it in strength and vigor even if nothing else were eaten for months together. In Scotland, we are told, whole families make their entire breakfast throughout the year, on oatmeal porridge.

White beans have sixty-seven per cent of nutriment and should be eaten more than they are. In selecting from the meats beef will be found to be the cheapest and most wholesome. Good steak contains thirty-five per cent of nutriment, nineteen of nitrogen and fourteen of carbon, two per cent. is brain-feeding material, called phosphates. We might continue the list indefinitely but it will be well for every housewife to search out the facts and give the subject careful study.—N. Y. World.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

GRIN AND BEAR IT.

'Tis not a motto fine as some,
  Perhaps, in terms high sounding;
But as from coal rare colors come,
  Truth richly worth expounding
Lies in this adage—truth sublime—
  And I would here declare it;
And if a bore you deem my rhyme,
  Why, simply "grin and bear it."

When cherished projects come to naught,
  Or pain embitters pleasure;
When banks and bonds you firmest thought
  Bring loss to hoarded treasure;
When friends forsake, and foes increase,
  Put on, though hard to wear it,
A sunny smile of perfect peace—
  'Twill help—just "grin and bear it."

When woes come thick and still more thick,
  Disasters gathering daily;
When hope deferred the heart makes sick,
  While round you, jesting gayly,
The world knows not how sad your soul,
  Dreams not what griefs do tear it,
Keep over self a calm control,
  And bravely "grin and bear it."

Ah, 'neath these homely words there lie
  Vast mines of deepest meaning;
Whole tomes of sound philosophy
  Well worth most careful gleaning;
Yet not mere stoic's lore I urge—
  Forever I forswear it—
Let earth's and heaven's best wisdom merge—
  Trust God, then "grin and bear it."

—Philip B. Strong, in Detroit Free Press.

FORGIVENESS.

By François Coppée.

In the house, a big hive of work people, situated in the Rue Delambre, where for six months Tony Robec had occupied a room, everyone thought that he was a widower. He could not have been a widower very long, for his little boy Adrien, who lived with him and who was always well cared for, was not more than six years old. Yet neither of them wore mourning!

Early every day Tony Robec, who was employed as a compositor in a printing house in the Quartier Latin, left his room with the child still half asleep on his shoulder. He left the little one at school and called for him again at night when returning from work. Then they went shopping together, after which they shut themselves up in their garret, and nothing more was seen of them until the following morning.

The kind-hearted gossips were full of pity for the poor fellow. He couldn't be more than forty and was still good looking, although sad and pale, and with silver streaks in his black beard. Behind his back they said: "That man ought to marry again."

They wished to make his acquaintance. Generally this is not difficult in such a house, where the tenants live with open doors. But Tony had a very reserved manner, and bowed so distantly and coldly—although politely—to his neighbors when he met them on the stairs that they were afraid to approach him.

"No, ladies," said the doorkeeper, who was inclined to be sentimental, "that widower will never marry again, mark my words. The other Sunday I passed him in the cemetery at Montparnasse. His wife is doubtless buried there. It cut me to the heart to see the poor man with the motherless little chap at his side. He must have doted on his wife."

Certainly Tony had been very devoted to his wife and would not be consoled now that he had lost her—but he was not a widower.

His life had been simple, but not by any means happy. Although a conscientious workman he was not particularly good at his trade, and therefore until he was thirty he had not succeeded in making a tolerably good living, and could not think of marrying. When he did resolve to marry he ought to have chosen a sensible, economical wife, who had known want as he had. But love does not occupy itself with such trifles. Tony lost his head over a pretty, light-minded, light-hearted flower girl of nineteen, honest doubtless, but frivolous, and thinking more of her toilet than of anything else under the sun. It must be admitted, however, that she could make a dress out of a few scraps of stuff.

He had saved a little money with which to start housekeeping. Among other things he bought a big cupboard with a glass door, in which his wife could admire herself the whole day.

They were married and at first lived very happily. They had two modest rooms on the fifth floor of a house on the boulevard de Port Royal, with a little balcony from which they had a bird's-eye view of Paris. Every night on leaving work Tony Robec disguised his workman's clothes under a smart overcoat and waited for his wife, who presently appeared from her little booth in the Rue Saint-Honore, and arm in arm they returned to their humble home.

At last a son was born and was put out to nurse. The parents went to see him once a fortnight. But at the end of a year the child died of convulsions. The parents were, however, soon afterward consoled by the birth of little Adrien. Having had such a sad experience, Clementine resolved to bring up the child herself, and gave up her little shop in order to be able to attend to her baby. She took in work, but did not make more than half of what she had previously earned. Nevertheless, she continued to dress well. In vain did Tony work desperately; the household became embarrassed and steeped in debt. When the child was weaned he was sent out during the day to a children's asylum, and the mother, often unoccupied, became tired of her inactivity. Just think of her poor husband, old before his time, worn out with working for and worrying about his giddy, pretty wife of twenty-three.

One evening when Tony entered the house with the child, whom he had picked up at the asylum as he had passed, he found an envelope on the mantelpiece, from which, when he opened it, fell Clementine's wedding ring. In the letter she bade good-by to her husband and child, and begged their forgiveness.

The unfaithful wife fled in the beginning of May. At the end of July Tony sold the greater part of his furniture in order to pay his debts, and moved into the Rue Delambre.

Toward the end of September he received a letter from his wife—four incoherent and desperate pages, plentifully washed with tears—in which she announced that she had repented and implored pardon. This was all very painful for Tony, but he was proud, and the letter remained unanswered.

He heard no more from Clementine. Christmas eve he went, as was his custom, to the cemetery at Montparnasse, there to place on the grave of his dead child a few frozen violets and roses. For the first time Tony went alone with the child, and, strange as it may seem, on entering the cemetery he suffered more poignantly than ever before the absence of that wife who had so cruelly deceived him. "Where is she now, and what is she doing?" thought he.

On arriving at the grave he started, for at the foot of it were strewn several little playthings such as the poor give to their children—trumpet, a jack-in-the-box and a whistle. They had evidently just been placed there, for they were quite new.

"Oh, what pretty playthings!" cried little Adrien, excitedly. But his father, having detected a scrap of paper pinned to one of the toys, opened it and read: "For Adrien, from his brother Felix, who is now with the child Christ."

Suddenly he found the boy pressing against him and murmuring: "Mamma." There, only a few paces away, under a clump of cypress trees, knelt the mother. She was clad in a wretched dress and a thin shawl. Her eyes were sunken and her cheeks hollow and pale. She was looking at her husband, and her clasped hands were stretched toward him in supplication. Tony pushed the boy gently toward her, saying: "Adrien, go and kiss your mother."

The poor creature strained the child convulsively to her breast and covered him with kisses. Then rising and turning toward her husband, but always with the air of a suppliant, she said: "How good of you!"

But he, already at her side, said huskily, almost harshly: "Don't talk. Take my arm."

It is not far from the cemetery to the Rue Delambre, and they walked quickly and without uttering a word. The child, engrossed in his newly-found treasure, trotted along at their side, thinking only of his toys.

When they reached the house the door-keeper was standing on the steps.

"Madam," said Tony to her, "this is my wife. She has been six months in the country with her mother who was ill, and now she has come back to live with me."

When they reached the room Tony made his wife sit down in the only arm chair, placed the boy in her lap, and opened a drawer from which he took an old cardboard box. Out of this he took the wedding ring, which he pressed on his wife's finger. Then, without a word of reproach or bitterness about the sorrowful past, silently, gravely, with the overflowing generosity of a simple, childlike heart, he gently pressed his lips to her forehead as the seal of his forgiveness.—Translated for Romance.

English Weather.

I never saw a whole day in London that could honestly be described as "fine," let alone the hyperboles. One may speak of a "fine" five minutes, a fine half hour, or an hour. Nothing beyond that, so far as I could see. It is a settled point among scientists that with his naked eyes no man can gaze at the noonday sun. I am prepared to confound these learned theorists. On the 1st of August, 1890, about one p. m., I gazed at the London sun from the top of an omnibus standing near Hyde Park corner. I take my oath on it that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, I did gaze at the sun, did stare at him boldly, did, in fact, outstare him and make him retire behind the gathering clouds. This is a historical fact, and I record it, therefore, with all the pomp and circumstance befitting it. I give date, place and hour, which is more than most of our modern scientists do in announcing their discoveries of mares' nests.—The Indian Eye on English Life—Malabari.

She Knows a Lot.

The really popular girl always knows a lot. She knows enough not to gossip about a people who have done her favors and who are in a way of doing her favors. She knows enough to dress appropriately at all times and never to be overdressed. She knows enough not to wear diamonds, discuss religion or politics, boast about her ancient lineage or tell long-winded tales. She knows enough to keep silence and she knows enough to talk well. She knows how to dance, swim, row, sail a boat, play the piano and banjo, sing negro melodies and college songs. She knows enough not to "give away" all the funny confidences that the boys give her when in the blues or feeling particularly good, and she knows how much to cook when they are stranded on an island, becalmed and without oars or a stick with which to pole home. She knows just how to catch a fish and then to cook it, and she knows enough not to growl and whine and complain until they are safely home.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

A Reason.

Watts—I never buy from peddlers because most of them are foreigners.

Potts—I don't see any reason in that.

Watts—I do; because I know if I was selling to a foreigner myself what sort of truck I would stick him with if I could. See?—Indianapolis Journal.

A DEADLY CONTEST.

Big Battle Between Three Bulls and an Alligator.

I was witness once, said an old hunter from Kissimmee, Fla., of a very exciting and sanguinary contest between a huge bull alligator and several head of cattle, in which the alligator was killed and two bulls so badly injured that they had to be shot, and another was rendered almost hors de combat.

A party of hunters, several of them visitors from the Tropical hotel here, were camping out on the lower shell mound, which overlooks a lake, though several hundred rods from the shore, which is marshy and grassy. Cattle gather there by the hundreds, as the grass is always fresh and black flies, their bane on most lakesides, generally absent.

While eating their dinner that day the hunters were startled by loud bellowings that came from the lake, accompanied by the well-known "cry" or grunt of alligators. On hastily getting to the bluff a most exciting scene was witnessed. From the appearance of the field it would seem that one of the old bulls went to the shore for water, and as he was drinking a big 'gator swam up and seized his nose.

The bull, a big black, with a pair of magnificent sharp horns, was taken at terrible disadvantage, and began bellowing loudly and endeavoring to shake off his antagonist. The 'gator had secured a firm hold, however, and he clung tenaciously, churning the water into foam with his immense tail, the blood streaming from the bull's lacerated nose already dyeing the waters red.

With a mighty effort the bull plunged backward, hauling his "attachment" partially on dry land, and then the fun waxed furious. The bull, rendered frantic from the pain, endeavored to gore the 'gator, and, failing in that, stamped at him and plunged around madly to get rid of his foe. Attracted by his bellowings, two other bulls came furiously down the side, and seeing the 'gator plunged at him. Observing his new enemies the latter tried to escape, but too late.

One of them caught his horn near the gator's fore leg, and with an upward toss tore a big hole in his side, the saurian responding with a deep roar of anger and pain. As the other bull came on the 'gator thrashed around with his tail and gave the animal a terrible blow, knocking him over on his side with a dull thump.

His first victim was now free, and the three thoroughly infuriated animals surrounded their foe, bellowing and with lowered heads presenting a picket of sharp horns which the saurian didn't like, as he attempted to crawl into the water. His three opponents now began a systematic war'are.

First one would dash at him, escaping the flying tail of the big reptile, and give him a dig with his horns and endeavor to toss him. The 'gator was getting weaker all the while, and though still game he seemed anxious to cry quits.

One of the bulls allowed his anger to blind him finally, and as he came on without his usual caution, the reptile whirled and delivered a sweeping blow with his tail that caught the animal's legs, breaking them like pipestems, the old fellow falling with a roar of madness that could have been heard a mile, while the saurian's eyes seemed to gleam with triumph as they glowered at his enemies.

Then ensued a rough-and-tumble contest which no description could do justice to. The bulls plunged viciously at him, oftentimes hitting one another in their mad rushes, while the alligator swept his big tail around in endless circles and inflicted terrible whacks on their sides and legs.

Finally the 'gator again seized his first victim by the nose, and with a death grip. The other animal plunged on, and catching both horns under the gator's side gave him a toss, ripping him up so that his entrails protruded.

The effect was seen at once, as his terrible flail played more feebly, but his hold on the bull's nose could not be broken. Several more ugly wounds were made, and the reptile's roars of anger changed to those of pain and fear. His antagonist charged at him time and time again, lacerating him terribly.

Finally no resistance was made, the victor trampling on the bloody carcass, though the terrible grip of those iron jaws still maintained their hold on the nose of the first bull, who had been forced to his knees and was fast dying from the terrible blows he had received and the great loss of blood. Several of the watchers then went down and mercifully shot the two wounded bulls.

The alligator, which measured, as well as they could ascertain, over seventeen feet, the head and jaws being six feet, was literally torn to pieces and disemboweled. The blow delivered by the 'gator's tail broke several ribs of the bull, whose legs were also broken, while even the victor was badly injured. The one which had been seized by the nose presented a horrible appearance, the flesh having been stripped to the bone by the iron hold of the saurian's jaws.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

An Unfeeling Husband.

At the recent banquet of the Commercial exchange, Mayor Cowherd told a story which no one seemed to have heard before. "During the recent financial panic," he said, "a certain man, like many others, found one night that his real estate was unsalable, his firm bankrupt and his money locked up in a suspended bank. In deepest despondency he walked slowly home and greeted the companion of his joys and sorrow. 'Mary,' he said, 'I'm flat busted. So's the bank. So's the firm. I've lost my money, and my house and everything — everything.' 'No, no, John,' cried the loving wife as she cast herself upon his breast—'not everything. You haven't lost me.' 'That's so, Mary,' said the unfeeling brute—'that's so. I never reckoned that any of the liabilities would get away.'"—Kansas City Times.

Waste Inexcusable.

An Old Lawyer (pointing out to one of his younger brethren a barrister in the act of gesticulating and talking to himself)—Why, the man must be mad!

"What makes you think so?"

"Faith, a barrister who talks to himself is like a pastry cook devouring his own stock in trade!"—La Gazette des Tribunaux.

Too Expensive.

"I fear, sir," said the physician, "your malady is appendicitis."

"I can't afford it, doctor," replied the patient, decidedly. "You may just treat me for plain, common, every-day liver complaint."—Chicago Tribune.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Borax for Washing.—Flannels washed in cold water with a little borax will not only be well cleaned but there will be no shrinking. Use a large handful to ten gallons of soft water.

—Walnut Maccaroons.—One cup of walnut meats chopped fine, one cup of sugar, a little salt, one egg, three tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook on a buttered tin sheet in a slack oven. These make delicious little cakes for an afternoon tea.—Boston Budget.

—Chestnut Soup.—Shell and blanch a pint of Italian chestnuts, and cook in boiling milk until tender. Rub the nuts through a colander, add salt and sufficient milk and cream to make a soup of the proper consistency, reheat and serve.—Good Health.

—Mulligatawny Soup.—Cut three small onions, a carrot, a turnip and a head of celery into two quarts of cold stock; bring to boiling, then let it simmer half an hour. Beat smoothly two tablespoonfuls of flour with a little cooled liquor, stir it into the soup and boil three minutes. Strain through a coarse sieve and serve with boiled rice in separate dish.—Ohio Farmer.

—Chocolate Glace Cake.—Beat to a cream a generous half-cupful of butter and gradually work into this one cupful of sugar. Add one ounce of chocolate, melted; also two unbeaten eggs. Beat vigorously for five minutes, then stir in half a cupful of milk and lastly one cup and a half of flour with which have been mixed two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with vanilla. Pour into a buttered, shallow cake pan and bake for half an hour in a moderate oven. When cool spread with glace frosting.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Chicken Pie.—Cut the chicken small, put it in a kettle with a few pieces of salt pork, cover with cold water, and boil until tender. Turn it out into a well greased pan, putting in alternate layers of sliced raw potatoes with the chicken, using plenty of butter, salt and pepper. Make a soda biscuit crust and cover the top with it, cutting a hole in the middle. Pour the broth over, with enough boiling water to cover it. Boil ten minutes, then put in the oven and thicken the gravy with flour.—Ohio Farmer.

—Tea Cakes.—Put upon a pie-board one pound of flour which you have previously sifted; make a hole in the center, in which place one-half pound of butter, six ounces of powdered sugar and four eggs. Mix all well together and roll out your paste extremely thin; cut it out in rounds or squares; put in a pan which has been buttered slightly; brush your cakes with beaten egg, sprinkle on top one-half pound of currants; put in the oven, and when colored a bright yellow remove them and serve as needed.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

—Drop Cakes.—One cup sugar, one cup molasses, one cup shortening, one cup water, one teaspoon soda, cinnamon, ginger and nutmeg to flavor. Stir with flour very stiff and drop in small balls on greased tins. English currants improve it, and also shredded orange or lemon. These may be prepared at home. The skins of either are required with the pulp removed. They are best cut in halves. Boil in clear water until tender, and then drain and place in rich sirup. Boil until clear and transparent, remove and place on plates to dry in a slow oven. If any sirup remains it will make fine filling for cake. Add one cup of water, a lump of butter, and when hot thicken with corn starch.—Country Gentleman.

EMBALMED IN AMBER.

Nature's Process of Preserving the Remains of Plants, Insects and Animals.

In many museums may be seen, in the most perfect state of preservation in amber, fossilized remains of plants and animals. The science of Egypt in its highest development did not succeed in discovering a method of embalming so perfect as the simple process taking place in nature. A tree exudes a gummy, resinous matter in a liquid state. An insect accidentally alights in it and is caught.

The exudation continues and envelops it completely, preserving the most minute details of its structure. In the course of time the resin becomes a fossil and is known as amber. The history of fossil insects is largely indebted to the fly in amber. And to the preserving properties of amber we owe, likewise, our knowledge of some of the more minute details of ancient plant structure.

The coasts of the Baltic are, and have been from the days of the Phœnician traders, the great source of the amber of commerce. It occurs in rolled fragments of strata known to geologists as oligocene. These are tertiary rocks of a date a little more recent than those of the London basin, and equivalent to the younger tertiary series of the Isle of Wight. The fragments of fossil resin were washed down by the rivers from the pine forests of the district, along with sediment and vegetable debris.

In them are found most perfectly preserved remains of the most delicate tissues of the vegetation of the period, as well as of insect life. Fragments of twigs, leaves, buds and flowers, with sepals, petals, stamen and pistil still in place, occur. Pollen grains have likewise been found. A recent genus, deutzia, has been recognized by its characteristic stamens; the valves of the anthers of cinnamomum are seen in others. In one specimen the pendent catkin of a species of oak is seen as distinctly through the clear amber as if it were a fresh flower.

And besides the insect and plant remains thus sealed up in amber, stray relics of the higher fauna of the forest have also been met with. Fragments of hair and feathers have been caught in the sticky resin and preserved. Among others, a woodpecker and squirrel have been recognized in the Baltic amber.—Gentlemen's Magazine.

A Dandy.

The Smythes were giving a little dinner party soon after the arrival of Johanna Noonan, an awkward, but willing and thoroughly good-natured servant girl.

Johanna had been coached by her mistress and had been promised a present if she got through with her duties as waitress without making blunders of any kind, and the girl started in, prepared to do her best.

But in the very beginning of the dinner she upset a plate of soup all over the tablecloth while several of the guests had to rise hastily to keep their garments from being ruined.

But Johanna, turning toward her mistress with both hands uplifted, said with a chuckle:

"Now, ain't Oi a dandy, ma'am?"—Detroit Free Press.

LESSONS IN KITCHEN WORK.

How Science Teaches One to Keep Pots and Pans Bright.

Scullery work is taught abroad in the schools of domestic economy. Generally a full course comprises four lessons of two hours each:

First, cleaning of iron pots and pans; second, cleaning of range; third, cleaning of copper enameled pans, brass, china, glass and steel; fourth, cleaning silver.

In the school I visited—the Edinburgh—the scullery pupils were of all sorts and conditions of womanhood. A young woman who was to fill a place as "companion" was learning to oversee the kitchen department. Next her stood a scullery maid sent in by her mistress to be taught. Some mornings one may see mistresses themselves learning in order to intelligently oversee their maids.

Just as it should be in any kitchen, before each pupil was a square board, to cover the table, and a large bowl of warm water. Bath brick, whiting, plates of grated and squeezed lemon skins (the refuse from cookery), soda, boxes of polishing paste, rolls of emery paper, cubes of plain soap, egg shells, chamois skins, bits of soft woolen rags—all these are arranged in orderly fashion down the length of the table where the pupils work. One of the first rules is that all ingredients and implements be brought together before work begins.

To clean an iron pot or pan, the instruction is to first wash it thoroughly outside and inside with plenty of hot water and soda.

Next scrub it vigorously with what is called in Scotland a "pot range," i. e., a tightly bound bundle of stiff broom twigs or heather roots. This is dipped in sand and soap is used with the addition of a little hot water. A bundle of any kind of small stiff twigs could be substituted. Of course there are manufactured scrubbers of steel. After being scrubbed clean the pot is rinsed in plenty of water and well dried. And there it is, smooth to the touch outside and in; sweet to the smell, pleasing to the eye. If onions have been cooked in it, their odor is removed by using ashes in place of sand.

Like the iron pot, the enameled or porcelain-lined saucepans are first brushed inside and out with hot water and soda. To clean the inside and smooth all roughnesses, crushed eggshells are used in the scrubbing with soap and a little hot water. The pans are then thoroughly rinsed and dried, after which they are rubbed till they shine.

The outside of copper pans are first rubbed with a grated and squeezed lemon peel, which has been rubbed with hard soap and then dipped in bath brick. The rind removes all stains and with it the copper must be rubbed until bright. The inside of the pan is treated in the same way, unless it be of white metal. Then acid must not be used. It must be scrubbed with simply soap and sand, and then with soap and hot water. "Elbow grease" is not spared.—N. Y. Press.

FLOATING STYLES.

Fashions and Fancies Now Prevalent in Woman's Apparel.

Great care is necessary in fitting the tops of skirts that are to be worn under the new short basques. It is frequently desirable to try on a dress at least half a dozen times in order to get the adjustment down to a fine point. Nothing more clearly shows the hand of the expert than the arrangement of the fullness at the top of a skirt.

Shirt-waists of silk, cheviot or other fabrics are worn with the blazers of serge or suiting. With a made-over skirt, these are among the most comfortable, practical and useful of every day dresses.

One of the peculiarities of the present-day dress is the decadence of the wrapper among young women. Many of them do not even own such a thing, others merely keep one on hand for use in case of illness. The average young woman would not think of appearing at the breakfast-table in such a garment.

Under no circumstances should any woman attempt to do housework in wool dresses. Cotton, and that of a strictly washable sort, is the only goods suitable for such work.

Bayadere stripes are among the fashionable fabrics, and are either untrimmed or made up with velvet of the darkest color in the material.

The fancy for blouses has by no means abated, and soft belts and loose fronts are quite as much in favor as heretofore.

Satin brocades with small figures will be worn by women of all ages, and also by many young girls.

A Test of Bravery.

A custom like this has spread, of course, among neighboring tribes under various forms. That of the Abyssinian braves is described by Mr. Mansfield Parkyns. The girls themselves play an active part there. When young people are gathered for amusement, after a church festival for instance, one of them will begin peeling a straw of green millet, which is full of pith. Her lover's blood runs cold probably, but he must smile or own himself a craven. When she has cut the pith into bits an inch long, he stretches out his bare arm. The example set, every girl who respects herself and has a lover follows it. The young men form a circle, with their arms extended. Blithely then, with many a jest doubtless, the maidens arrange their bits of pith, upright, in some fanciful design on the bare flesh, and set them alight. They are nearly an inch thick, and they burn very slowly, but the hapless youth must stand and smile as well as he can till the blood and juices of the seared flesh extinguish them.—London Standard.

GLEANINGS FROM "TRUTH."

Got There First.—Cobble—"I called at Miss Redbud's the other night and she asked to be excused." Stone—"Yes, I saw you from her parlor window."

Criticism.—"A pretty face," whispered the fire-eater, apropos of the new Circassian girl. "Not strong enough," muttered the contortionist, who was notoriously enamored of the iron-jawed woman.

A National Characteristic.—Lord Forgivuz—"I can always tell an American by what he drinks." William Ann—"But he drinks anything he can get." Lord Forgivuz—"That's the way I tell."

Hard—The shark and his family were gathered about their lowly board, partaking of the summer-girl who had ventured too far from the beach. "Here!" suddenly exclaimed the mother to the youngest, "don't take the heart. You must think dentists' services are cheap." Above their heads the ocean rolled, and ten thousand fleets swept over it in vain.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

The American Inter-Seminary Missionary alliance held at New Haven, Conn., was attended by one hundred and seventy delegates, representing thirty-one seminaries and a dozen denominations.

At one of the monthly union meetings of the five Cumberland Presbyterian Endeavor societies of Nashville, Tenn., four young people volunteered to go as foreign missionaries.

The Salvation Army has secured a strong foothold in Buenos Ayres. During the financial troubles it was able to help thousands of men thrown out of work to food and shelter.

DELANO DIARY

—Hicks is not making Minnesota weather. Its fine.

--Read Reform, Conditions, Capital and Labor and our other communications in this issue.

—Delano's mills are now in full blast. You can get flour, feed or lumber which you please.

—The merry sound of the school bell called the children to their studies after a month's vacation, on Monday morning at the usual hour. The St. Peter school is also again in sessson.

—The K. of P. brethren assembled on Monday evening for installation of officers; but George Rogers who was fooled once before disappointed them this time by not putting in an appearance.

—It looks to us like a decidedly foolish piece of business to sell sugar 25 pounds for a dollar and loose money on it, just because the other fellow does. Let him sell it if he wants to.

--The Montrose Dramatic Club billed the town for their play the "Confederate Spy." L. K. Flanders informs us that the club plays well; and he was down among the Johnnies and knows whereof he speaks.

—The Wrought Iron Range Company force are changing their base of operation from Delano to Sacramento, California. They say the snow is too deep to visit places except on main roads here. They expect to return to this place in the spring or summer, when they can get about to better advantage.

—A couple of Delano's enterprizing citizens thinking to beat Jim Hill's time to the cities on Tuesday concluded to try the "Soo Line" about which the Eagle blows so much. They left Delano at 1:30 p. m. taking passage with Uncle Sam's servant to the Rockford station, where they waited about an hour. Then at 3:07 left Rockford, via. "Soo" on a mixed freight, cattle and passenger train arrived at Minneapolis "Soo" depot at 5 p. m. The account is then:

Rockford to Minneapolis.....84 cts.

Time from 1:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. So far as getting the worth of their money in time they were satisfied.

—On Wednesday morning as the 5:18 a. m. train from the west drew up at the station a couple of badly scared looking individuals alighted and found John Hanna, the livery man,and asked for a team to go toward Waverly. John says he didn't know but they would arrest him before he got it hitched up. But when ready they struck out as rapidly as possible. After going about four miles, near Mrs. Schwiren's they met a team and in the darkness came in stentorian tones "Who the hell are you?" The sheriff at once recognized the voice of Sam Copeland, of Johnstown, Ohio, the man he was looking for, and who had quietly stolen a march on his attendants. While they slept at their posts, he had passed out the car door, intending to climb on top of the car but as he could not accomplish this feat concluded to jump from the train, which he did, but being hand cuffed, his alighting was not very graceful and he broke his collar bone and bruised his head. He had walked to Montrose and hired a team to bring him to Delano to see a doctor, and was on his way when met by his pursuers. The trio remained at the Danforth House during the day and took the evening train for Stillwater where Mr. Copeland is to serve a term of seven years for robbing the Moorehead bank of $2,140 last fall. He claims to have been back to Moorhead and dug up $600 a week or so before he was arrested, in Sioux City.

—Brick $8 per 1000 at John Coolen's.

—Odd Fellows' dance next Tuesday.

—Mrs. C. F. Peters has our thanks for a fine dish of pop corn.

--Casper Janekula is having a new well made near his house.

--The M. E. church will be opened next Sunday at 10:30 for service and Sunday School. There will be no service at night.

—One of our merchants is said to have kept his sugar barrels full, during the run, by purchasing by proxy from his neighbors.

—Now that the Eagle has seen fit to mention the Bruggiman corner nuisance we presume our Republican council will have evespouts up this week.

—Last February 22d, Delano observed Washington's Birthday in good style. An association was formed to hold meetings on the next anniversary; it is only about a month till the time and the officers should best fit themselves to get up as good an entertainment as that of a year ago.

—There seems to have been some misunderstanding in regard to fumigating some of the houses where diphtheria and sore throat had prevailed. One family lost their canary bird. Another family and the disinfectants battled for supremacy for a brief period when the folks took flight to the neighbors. As we said a couple of weeks ago folks and fumigants can't occupy the same room at the same time.

Personals.

Dr. Catlin and son Alva, visited the county seat on Saturday.

Henry C. Parslow, Jr., came home from Enderlin, N. D. for a short vacation this week.

John McGary, of Independence, was up on Monday hunting after the latest political news.

Miss Anna Parslow and father, visited Hanover Saturday. Miss A. was looking for a position as teacher.

Warren Merriman returned Monday evening from a trip to the cities. He says things are quiet down there.

Prof. Beek, of Minneapolis, was in town on Monday evening teaching the sharps and flats to the Delano Band.

Mrs. C. J. Buckley returned from Hamline last week to attend her sick husband, who made a rapid recovery.

Earl Hoslington, of Independence, is still hurrahing for Donnelly. He says Republicans don't read up but one side.

Dr. Fassett, of Rockford, was in town several times lately. He reports John Jacobs as convalescing from Pneumonia.

Prof. Zahler, intructor in Physics, in the State University, made his friend, Prof. Dewey of this place a friendly call last week.

Drs. Shrader, of Delano and Cassel, of Cokato, were summoned as expert witnesses in the J. A. O'Laughlin case, at Buffalo, on Monday.

Miss Rosa Eppel, has accepted a situation with Postmaster Jackson. We can assure our Howard Lake friends that they will have no cause for complaint in that office.

County Cullings.

Court has adjourned after completing one of the longest terms the county has ever had.

Sheriff Carpenter took a couple of prisoners to Minneapolis on Tuesday. One for selling liquor without a license and one for bastardy.

We are not informed as to whether or not "Soup House Bill" is interested in the boarder busines in Buffalo. But it looks a little suspicious to have him invite his friends into the County Seat in such numbers.

Wright county was represented at the Democratic banquet by Capt. H. C. Bull and Dr. Catlin, who fully sustained the reputation of the county for good healthy appetites. For reference call on Hon. Joseph Roach, of Northfield.

J. A. O'Loughlin who was tried for shooting John Maroony, was found guilty of assault in the second degree and sentenced for three years at Stillwater. His attorneys are taking an appeal to the Supreme Court, on points of law.

It is said that the Dual Davids, at Dublin, are each seeking stones for their scrip to be used next fall against some Goliah. One is to champion the Populist's faith, the other to try for his old seat among the Democrats on the County Commissioners Board.

Bill Ziebarth, alias "Koenig Willhelm" is industriously at work canvassing the county in the interest of several insurance companies. But when it comes time to choose a new county auditor we are of the opinion that the present incumbent will learn that Mr. Ziebarth is not yet dead.

It is being noted all over the county that the present term of court is one of the longest ever held in the county, and comments are numerous that if the county attorney, sheriff and a few others were Democrats that the Eagle's quills would brustle like those of a porcupine, and that we would have French on the subject, and the Howard Lake Herald and Buffalo Journal would have lengthy comments on the drawn out term and great expense to the county in these hard times.

Auditor Lamson makes very plausible excuses for not sending the commissioners proceedings to the Tribune for publication last week. But when you put this and that together and figure out how they have been gone over by some of the Republican papers, and the Board charged with having expended county funds for heating the court house when they had not, it does not look right that they were not sent on time. Be more prompt in the future Mr. Auditor. A type-writer would do away with the excuse about copying them. A manifolding machine would furnish a copy for each newspaper as soon as signed by the chairman.

We are not in to the ring and can't speak by the card, but now when the democrats are tinkering the tariff is a good time for the republicans to try to pull the wool over the eyes of the "unsophisticated" by selling 25 pounds of sugar for $1 even if they loose in the neighborhood of one cent per pound, so when the Wilson bill puts a tariff of 1 cent per pound in the place of 2 cents bounty they will let the price go up so high that they can exlutingly cry out "see what the democrats have done." Who knows but the big men of the party are furnishing the sugar to their friends among the merchants to sweeten the people as they do the New York Tribune to their editors to educate them?

County Commissioners have a fashion in this county of cutting down all bills appertaining to the health of the community or "doctor bills" in general. Sometimes they divide them by two and offer the poor son of Aesculapius half his fees. Fees that he has earned; that he has made a bill for; that he, on his oath has stated is to his best knowledge and belief, worth what he charged. By what authority, we inquire, do the board arrive at their conclusion that the M. D. individually and collectively must be a robber and a perjurer? We noticed at a late meeting a Dr. O'Brien of Minneapolis was served in the usual manner. We know nothing of his bill further than that reported by the board, but if it was a just bill it should have been paid, our county is as able to pay her bills as any man in it and should do so.

Among Our Exchanges.

The Congressman who would vote for protection to his own district while denying it to other districts is not worthy to be called an American. Protection is either good or bad for all —Buffalo Journal.

The Waverly Tribune goes for the County Auditor in unmeasured terms for not supplying the copy of the Commissioners procedings for which it is to receive one cent per folio for printing. It will be rather humiliating to the Tribune to have the copy so late. But then it will have the satisfaction of knowing that it is official.

The many friends of Editor McDonald, of St. Cloud, will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed receiver of the St. Cloud Land Office. We believe this will be perfectly satisfactory to the people of Mille Lacs county who will have occasion to do business with the office. The appointment is also a fitting recognition of valuable party services.--Mille Lacs County Times.

Representation for convention purposes will be on different basis in this county this year than ever before. There are now 29 election districts in this county, 20 towns and 9 villages and these 9 villages can no longer participate with the towns in which they are situated in electing delegates. The towns will elect their own delegates and the villages their own. When all the towns and villages are represented there will be an incaeased number of delegates in the conventions. This change in program will be beneficial to the people. The following villages are election districts and will send their own delegates:—Buffalo, Maple Lake, Annandale, Cokato, Howard Lake, Waverly, Montrose, Delano and Monticello. This will be a good year to let the old stock delegates stay at home and take a rest and send some new men.—Buffalo Journal.

It Comes High.

Under the above head the Buffalo Journal attacks the County Commissioners proceedings accusing the Commissioners of having expended $100.70 for travel investigating steam heating apparatus. The facts are two bills are added together in the instance of my own. My bill was allowed as follows:

Dec. 13, 14, 15 and 16, 1893, 4 days committee work @ $3. per day 86 miles travel @ 10 cents per mile ..... $20.60.
Dec. 27, 60 miles travel 1 day committee work, on Road and Bridge Committee, 9.00
January. 2, 1894. 3 days 20 miles regular meeting, 11.00
Total, $40.60

instead of as the the Journal has it $29.60, the actual bill is $20.60, a differance of $9. I favor heating by steam before next fall, as it will save about $350 worth of wood, and the buying of new stoves and stove pipe for the whole house, and will save considerable on insurance besides being cleaner and more pleasant. I also deny that the Board has let any contract, as yet, to heat the court house by steam; hereby exploding the "rake-off" that Bro. Eaton alludes to. Before the Journal serves up any more roasts we would advise them to find some ground to work on.

C. BUGBEE.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of the Alliance in the town hall, Woodland, Jan. 27, 1894, for the purpose of organization. All members and all who are interested in reform are requested to be present.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?
But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?
And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?
And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?
Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.
At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.
This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.
The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.
That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.
The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.
Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

KISS HER AND TELL HER SO.

You've a neat little wife at home, John,
As sweet as you wish to see;
As faithful and gentle-hearted.
As fond as wife can be;
A genuine home-loving woman,
Not caring for fuss or show;
She's dearer to you than life, John.
Then kiss her and tell her so.

Your dinners are promptly served, John,
As, likewise, your breakast and tea;
Your wardrobe is always in order,
With buttons where buttons should be.
Her house is cozy home nest, John.
A heaven of rest below;
You think she's a rare little treasure;
Then kiss her and tell her so.

She's a good wife and true to you, John.
Let fortune be foul or fair.
Of whatever comes to you, John,
She cheerfully bears her share.
You believe she's a brave, true helper,
And perhaps far more than you know,
It will lighten her end of her load, John,
Just kiss her and tell her so.

There's a crossroad somewhere in life, John,
Where a hand on a guiding-stone
Will signal one "over the river,"
And the other must go on alone.
Should she reach the last milestone first, John,
'Twill be comfort amid your woe
To know that while loving her here, John,
You kissed her and told her so.

PLACING sugar on the free list is the easiest and most effectual solution of the Hawaiian annexation question.

THE Hawiian "tempest in a teapot" affair will, doubtless, sink quietly into oblivion as soon as the Wilson bill becomes a law.

THE Democrates are getteng down to buisness in Congress. It is about time, though we must remember that "large bodies move slowly."

PRESIDENT CLEVLAND, has appointed Wheeler H. Peckham, of New York, formerly of St. Paul Minn. to be associate Justice of the Supreme Court, instead of Mr. Hornblower.

THE twenty-eighth Annual convention of the Minnesota Editors and Publishers Association will meet in Century Hall Minneapolis, Fourth St. and First Ave. S. on Thursday and Friday Feb. 15 and 16.

YESTERDAY, at Jacksonville, Florida, Charles Mitchell and James Corbet settled the dispute as to which country England or the United States, has the biggest bruiser, in three rouds, in favor of U. S.

THE St. Paul Globe in dsscussing the appointment of a member of the Supreme Court bench says: "It is about time the quarrels of N. Y. politicians should cease to interfere with the business interests of the people of the entire country." That has the right ring to it.

CHAIRMAN CUTCHEON of the Democratic State Central Committee, tendered his resignation a short time since, but after the banquet he concluded to serve as the committee would not accept his resignation, and he seemed to be so strongly endorsed by the rank and file.

FROM the announcement made by a Nebraska paper we would judge that the Republican committee of that state had undertaken to supply eastern papers to the citizens of that state, the same as our own state Republican committee. Nothing like "protection to home industry" and "educating the masses."

THE St. Paul Daily News has got through with its cheap rates. It is no longer a penny paper, but has declared itself worth two cents, or ten cents per week. H. R. W. Hall, formely with the Minneapolis Times takes charge of the paper as managing editor and proposes to manage it as a paying buisness.

EUGENE HAY seems about to be retired from a good fat office in time to take the stump again next fall and tell the people that "there is enough in the political history of every democrat to damn him for ever" It would be good politics to allow such fellows their liberty a little sooner. Just why they should be hung on to is past our finding out.

EDITOR HOSKINS, has been released from the Fergas Falls Asylum for insane on a writ of habeas corpus, and is now out on bail, awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Maria Blaisdell which is of a similar nature

LATER.—The Supreme Court has decided that the New Lunacy law is unconitituna.

CONSIDERABLE fault is being found by various newspapers, and others about the workings of the new lunacy law. Most of the fault-finders give evidence of knowing very little about the subject. A good many laws are abused in the administering.

OUR garrulous neighbor up street complains that the Wilson bill "is anything but fair; it is a sectional measure, discriminating against certain parts of the country in favor of others. Iron ore, coal, raw wool and other northern products are to go on the free list, while sugar, rice, tobacco, etc., southern products will be protected." What man in this section of country will be hurt by having iron ore free? Do not all of us use more or less iron, and the cheaper we can buy it the better we like it? Coal, is a commodity that people here are not anxious to have to pay more for. And in a few more years at the rate our wood is being used up the farmers will have to buy coal. Many would now use it if it were cheaper. As for raw wool, the McKinley bill raised that and the 1st and 2d grades pay 11 and 12 cents per pound while that costing not over 13 cents per pound is taxed 50 per cent, and yet wool has been going down until 10 cents and even 8 cts per pound has been the home price this summer. Isn't that about cheap enough? As a matter of fact do not manufacturers substitute other articles as cotton, hair, etc., for wool in manufacturing? Are not the proud American people dressed in cheap John and shoddy goods? And if wool is placed on the free list insuring an abundance of the article at reasonable prices, what it is actually worth, will not manufacturers use it, buying the home product first, thereby furnishing a better home market for wool, paying the farmer more than he can now get for it, and at the same time supplying him with warm woolen clothes? Will it not be a wise plan under existing circumstances to try it at any rate? It can't be worse on the free list then where it is. Besides as for its being a sectional bill. Aint Texas one of the largest sheep growing states in the union, and don't Georgia, Missouri and other Southern states produce iron ore? While coal is also found in the South. The editors surely have neglected to read their dailies lately or they would know that sugar has been placed on the free list, the two cents a pound bounty the g. o. p. voted to pay the "Southernor" even being removed. Tobacco also grows north of Mason and Dixon's line. Connecticut growing some of the finer grades. Try again Eagle. "If at first you don't succeed try, try again."

Beware of Fusion.

There seems to be a tendency with a few individuals in our county to so mainipulate things as to bring about a fusion between Democrats and Populists. They loudly proclaim their entire act of unselfishness; their self sacrificing spirit: their honesty of purpose in advocating this union of forces for the purpose of dowing the other fellow; of disrupting the Republican party. Beware of them! If they have no higher aim than injuring a party who rightfully owns a majority of the votes there object in life is not to be commended. If they are working for the money there is in it. For the salaries of petty offices they may fill, or aid in filling, or the cash in hand for successfully defeating both the democrats and populists by disheartening the members of both parties, it is time the democrats and the populists had found it out, and set their mark of disapproval on it in terms not to be misunderstood. All true citizens of their county should take an active part, a lively interest in political affairs. Not every man can attend the National conventions to aid in nominating a President and Vice President; or a State Convention to assist in choosing a candidate for Governor and other state officers; a congressional convention to select our national law makers; a legistative or county convention; but every voter can attend primary meetings, every man over 21 years of age who is a citizen of the U. S. or who has decleared his intention of becoming such, can be present at his village or township caucus, and vote for who he pleases to go as delegates to the conventions, to aid in making the tickets for which we are to vote. If you do not wish to vote for a fusion ticket; a ticket made up of Democrats, pupulists, prohibs, and perhaps a few leading republicans, put on to catch votes, be out at your caucus and see that the best men are sent as delegates, even if you have to go yourself, and spend a days time for your country. Have your own principles. and stand by them. If you are a democrat don't be afraid to say so. It is no disgrace; even though some of those who are not do try to make you believe it is. Our President is a democrat, elected on a good straight ticket, our Minnesota fusion didnt aid him much. Our Congressman is elected because he dare le told us he was raised enlisted in the war as one, d to major as one, was in ons as one, came home as running for Congress as And he is now in Con ocrat. It we wish our principles to prevail; if we wish our goverment run on the plan of equal rights to all and special privileges to none" we must attend our coucuses, we must take an interest in seeing that good, earnest, honest men represent us at the county conventions. Not only once, but upon every occasion: and then we are bound to have tickets made up of such men. The stream will be no better than its sources: if it raises in quogmires, and mud holes it will be contaminated to its mouth. If its fountain heads consist of springs of pure water it will be known far and near for its purity. If the caucuses consist of all the voters the conventions will represent them, and their influence will be felt at Washington, and react on the whole county. Don't stay at home and allow three or four smarties to congregate and appoint themselves delegates to the county convention to be wheeled into making a mongrel ticket the laughingstock of the whole state, but turn out and vote every time an opportunity is presented.

Banquet Crumbs.

For the benefit of those who were not present at the banquet given by the Democratic Association in St. Paul last week, we give a few crumbs from the feast of oratory, that they may, seeing the feeling of confidence in Democracy, still manifested by our leaders, as well as some lately leaders of the g. o. p. so fast disintegrating, take heart and buckle up their armor a little more closely and strike still harder blows for "Equal rights to all, and special privileges to none." It seemed to be the conviction of those present that the Democracy now has a winning chance in this state if they but hoist their banner to the breezes and stand by it like men. Keep the principles of Democracy continually before the people, educate those who need it, to know what Democracy is, and then there will be no trouble about it winning in its purity:

HON. C. D. O'BRIEN, toast master. "I hope and believe the Democratic Association of this state, will go one step further. I hope it will give some attention in the near future to the needs and development of our own state. Minnesota is a great state. We have made it such, and the condition of the state and the times require that we should give some attention to current legislation."

J. C. HAYNES, "Cleveland is not President of the Democratic party, but of the people. He seems to understand the wants of the people. Although he may have been censured at times for the course he pursued, yet in time it was always conceded that he acted right." The bright particular star of Democracy is "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

JUDGE THOMAS WILSON, "It is the duty of every man to take an interest in government." "The demagogues attribute to the party in power the hard times and do not seem to think that we may inherit hard times from our predecessors." The poor have been paying more of the taxes than the rich men." "When the tariff became a burden, I rebelled against that slavery with every nerve of my body. The time is ripe for our triumph against class legislation." "Let us have our convictions and stand up for them. Then we will feel like men. We have on one side the monopolists on the other side we have the populists." "My experience is that the bulk of men are honest. When I hear the populists asking for one law for the farmer and another for the laboring man, I feel that they cannot give relief. If I were the law making power I would make no class laws, but laws for the good of all. "Equal rights to all and special privilege to none" is what we are to write on the doorposts and lintels of Democracy. The day for shams has passed. Democracy, if it be true to itself, should denounce every theory that is against good government, and cry aloud against the iniquities we find in our own state.

JUDGE J. P. REA said he voted for his convictions in voting for Grover Cleveland, and would have voted for him before but he was bashful. When the soldier in the late war was fighting for his country for liberty, he was on a plane far above politics. Because a man stood in the ranks in defense of his country 30 years ago is no reason why he shall not vote for his convictions to-day. I know from his own lips that Cleveland is in favor of pensioning the wounded soldiers. "The men who drag pensions into the arena of politics are the men who would drag the church into it." Our country pays one hundred and sixty millions, more than any other country ever paid annually for pensions. 'Every man on that roll who is not entitled to be there shames his record as a citizen. I am not in favor of erecting the American flag to protrct a half dozen men in looting the government out of $1,000,000 bounty on sugar.

F. W. M. CUTCHEON, Chairman of State Central Committee, "Believe in Democracy, am opposed to the theories of class legislation. The people have declared against the Republican protection fraud. We are also opposed to so-called Democratic protection. Believe in a civil service reform, but not in allowing spoilsmen to remain in office. There are Democrats in Minnesota who will never consent to the flag of Anarchism finding a place in the Democratic party. We see smoke over the battlefield of the past, but if we press forward we will be victorious again. The order should be. Fix bayonets, present arms, forward—charge.

J. ADAM BEDE made considerable sport of the Duluth Democrats who want a deep water way to the sea and a tariff so high that they cannot use it. The ore mines were discovered in the woods where a tree had fell over; the tree didn't even have to be chopped down, and the ore was so easily dug and got to market that without a tariff they could undersell everybody else. "We had better buy out the mines and throw them into the lake than forget the memories of Bunker Hill and Plymouth Rock."

W. M. CAMPBELL, Felt that success was morally certain if we could hold the Democrats of the state together, when in chairmanship of central committee, but it was found that we could address personally, but 1500 democrats. Work should be continuous. If voters can be got to think right they will vote right. We should be in a position to select candidates for their fitness and not because of their financial ability to conduct a campaign.

W. S. HAMMOND. Was glad that it had been brought to the attention of the association that the leaven of reform had been kneaded within the party, and here is the place and now is the time to begin the work. This association has given voice to sentiments which, if followed by the rank and file of the Democracy, will as surly lead to victory as that truth crushed to earth will rise again.

JUDGE JOHN W. WILLIS, The Democracy is still the party of the unterrified. With me it has ever been a matter of patriotic principles which must be the ultimate hope of this country. I hope to see the day when industry will be absolutely free, when American enterprise shall seek the uttermost limits of the world for its field of effort. Democracy speaks tonight as it has always, for the home, for all the people, and for equal rights for all and special privileges for none. The Democratic party is gathering to itself the best material from all parties and from every walk of life, and it will go on triumphant to the end until the dawn of a better day for all the people of the land.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19, 1894.

Secretary Carlisle has announced an issue of bonds, under authority of the act of 1875, to meet the present necessities of the Treasury. While neither he, President Cleveland, nor any member of the cabinet has any doubts about his authority to issue bonds, he and they would have preferred that Congress should have provided for the financial deficit, but Senator Voorhees and other leading democrats in Congress, after consultation and mature consideration, arrived at the conclusion that it would be impossible to secure Congressional action in time to render the aid needed, owing to differences of opinion among democrats as to what should be done; and advised that advantage be taken of the authority conferred by the old law. The issue of bonds is to be limited to the immediate needs of the government. thus leaving Congress free to act as soon as it may be so disposed, by providing other means of raising money that must be had from some source. The Idea of a bond issue is not a palatable one to the average democrat, but in this case there was no choice; it was bonds or a default in meeting obligations of the Government.

The consideration of the Wilson tariff bill is proceeding satisfactory to the democrats, although the clauses about which there is the greatest democratic controversy have not yet been reached. A number of minor amendments have been adopted, and one very important one—providing that the free wool clause should take effect upon the passage of the bill.

Senator Berry, speaking on Senator Call's resolutson for an investigation of the civil service, said: "I think there is a great deal of humbug about this civil service business, and I am not in favor of extending it one iota further." This statement was greeted with such uproarous applause from the galleries that the chairman had to threaten to have them cleared before quiet was restored. Mr. Berry voiced the popular idea

The depleted condition of the Treasury would prevent any considerable appropriation for the enlargement of our navy at the present session of Congress, even if a majority of the democrats were in favor of such appropriation, which is doubtful. Representative Holman is one of the democrats who believes that our navy is already dangerously large and that it should not be added to, unless the traditional policy of our government, to avoid entangling alliances, is to be shelved and an aggressive foreign policy substituted therefor, "we need," says Mr. Holman, a navy sufficiently strong to protect our interests at home and abroad, but we have alre gone beyond that point and ought to stop. I do not favor a large army in time of peace, but an army cannot inaugurate a foreign policy. The navy can, as witness the Valparaiso incident. The foreign relations of our country are more or less in the hands of the commander of any American vessel, and we must sustain him, as a rule, in whatever course he takes. For that reason, it is not advisable to have too much of a navy. The smaller the navy, the better; provided it is sufficient for our purposes."

Strange to say no democrat has applied, so far as known, for the position of United States Minister to Russia, one of the few positiogs in the diplomatic service that carries a salary as high as $17,000. Whether this is because no democrat hankers after a residence in the land of the Czar because of disgust at his American would be imitators, or that the opinion is general that the warm personal friendship which President Cleveland is known to feel towards the present minister, Hon. Andrew D. White, ex-president of Cornell University, will prevent his removal, is a question. It will be remembered that Mr. White was not appointed until Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Philapelphia Press, who was given the place in 1889, was wanted at home to help Mr. Harrison get renominated.

Senator Danial made it plain to Senator Hoar this week that it was not altogether prudent to attempt to make a speach on the Hawaiian question with no better prepartion than a feeling of malignant hatred of President Cleveland and the democratic party. After practically compelling Senator Hoar to admit his ignorance of the official documents bearing on the subject upon which he was speaking. Senator Daniel considerably dropped the matter. Senator Morgan had earlier in the week tripped up Senator Davis, of Minnesota, in a similar way, but instead of acknowledging his ignorance Davis got mad and tried to bluff through on a refusal to be further interrupted.

So many misleading statements have been made about the reasons that caused the southern demoratic Senator to vote against Mr. Hornblower confirmation. which was rejected this week, that I have ascertained what was the principal reason for their voting against him. It was simply that they had doubts about Mr. Hornblowers status as a constitutional Justice, and did not propose to take any chances. Senator Gray, of Deleware, can have the vacancy if he wants it, and he would be unanimously confirmed.

List of Patents.

Granted to Minnesota inventors this week. Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C:

J. Grime. Minneapolis, valve-gear; L. W. Harmsen, Minneapolis, voting mahcine; J. E. Liebe and G. Merritt, Moorhead, envelope; W. V. S. Thorne, St. Paul, car-coupling; I. Wood, Minneapolis, Oil-gas burner.

IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness: a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many articles to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked: keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to bring teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who after instruction, will work industriously for me unless successful as above. Easily learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a number, who are making over $3000 a year each. I can teach you and SOLID. ### TWO VIEWS.

An old farmhouse with meadows wide,
And sweet with clover on each side;
A bright eyed boy who looks from out
And wishes his one thought all day:
"Oh! if I could but fly away
From this dull spot the world to see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I would be!"

Amid the city's constant din
A man who round the world has been
Is thinking, thinking, all day long;
"Oh, if I could but trace once more
The field path to the farmhouse door;
The old green meadows could I see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I would be!"
—Marian Douglas in Argosy.

The St. Paul Globe And Cleveland.

Now that the Democratic party, by the vote of a large majority of the American people, has been placed in possession of all branches of the national government,

YOU WILL WANT
THE ST. PAUL GLOBE

As a regular visitor in your home.
It will give you the news of the world.
It will give you the markets of the world.
It will give you the doings of congress.
It will give you the doings of your own state legislature.
It will keep you informed upon the acts of the administration of President Cleveland, as well as the acts of the Republican state administration.
It will discuss, intelligently and impartially, questions of legislation and administration in both state and nation—giving especial attention to questions of taxation, finance, free wheat markets and those things in which you are most deeply interested.
You also want the GLOBE'S great Geographical and Political Map, to hang up in your house or office. No intelligent family will want to be without the GLOBE or its Map.
Price of either the WEEKLY GLOBE one year or the Map, $1. Both taken together, $1.50.

MRS. JAMES BROWN POTTER apparently does not altogether admire Mrs. Oscar Wilde's style of dress, for she likens her to an animated lamp shade.

WE often hear people say of a man that he "talks like a book," but if any man talks like the conversation in some of our modern novels, he must be an extraordinary creature, wonderfully made.

MUNHALL estimates that the land in the United States is worth $12,500,000,000; the cattle, $5,500,000,000; the houses, $14,200,000,000; the furniture, etc., $7,200,000,000; the railroads, $10,000,000,000; the shipping, $300,000,000, the total wealth per inhabitant, $1,050.

CHARLES RIDABOCK, who in 1828 went to the Pacific coast as a sailor and there married the daughter of a Mexican rancher, from whom he received the ground that is now occupied as the site of San Francisco, obtained admission to the poorhouse in that city recently. He is aged 91.

ANOTHER secret society has been added to the long list of those organizations already in existence. It is called the "Supreme Tribe of Ben Hur," after the famous religious novel written by Gen. Lew Wallace, which has created such a wide interest in the religious and literary world. The society is a purely benevolent one.

AN eastern paper says: "A young man in Carmel, Me., took his girl for a sleighride. She fell out and he drove a mile before noticing it." Well, they don't sleighride that way out in this neck of the woods. The young men all drive with one hand, and sometimes the girl drives and leaves both arms of her escort loose to prevent accidents.

THE United States court at Jackson, Tenn., found the notorious "Rev. Frederick Howard" guilty on twenty-two counts of the indictment against him for violation of the United States postal laws. The crime was committed in connection with his bogus European claim agency, by which he defrauded American citizens out of many thousands of dollars.

"JACK, the Kisser," who has been infesting the streets of various cities, has just been sustained by the court of appeals in Amsterdam, Holland, which held that "to kiss a strange lady in the street cannot be an offense, as it is the nature of a warm mark of sympathy." Those grave and serious Hollanders do reach funny conclusions when they undertake to discuss light matters.

"DIDN'T know it was loaded" has been an excuse for innumerable homicides of the unintentional class and doubtless the cloak of many others that were deliberate murders if the truth were known. When it becomes the general practice of the courts of this country to class the "didn't-know-it-was-loaded" idiot with felons of murderous intent and punish him accordingly, fewer lives will be sacrificed to that sort of humor.

AMONG the novelties of the midwinter fair at San Francisco will be a miners' camp of '49 men, a wild animal and sea lion exhibit, a big wheel like the Ferris wheel, a gold mine into which visitors can descend, and even a Pacific deep-diver and "shark-hunter," a Kanaka from Liliuokalani's region, who, with male and female companion, will make daily dives into a lake within the Hawaiian inclosure, and perform various Kanaka aquatic sports. But the exhibits of the wealth of the mines, the fields and orchards of the state will be the great exhibit.

THE Chinese have no governmental postal system, and letters are transported by means of so-called "letter-shops." These are somewhat like our express business, as packages are also sent, and both letters and packages are insured and registered and charges are in proportion to the distance to be carried. There are said to be nearly two hundred of these letter-shops in Shanghai alone, which send out employes to work up custom. Foreign letters are conveyed from China to other countries by the postal system of the latter, consuls being considered as postmasters for their own countries.

THE journeys of the emperor of Germany cost him a great deal of money. According to an article recently published in a German paper, over 800,000 marks, or $200,000, were spent on the trip to Italy and Austria undertaken soon after he ascended the throne. A heavy trunk, in charge of a privy councilor on that occasion, contained 80 diamond rings, 150 decorations, many of them jeweled; 50 scarfpins, 30 necklaces, with diamond pendants; 6 handsome sabers, 3 large potographs of the emperor and his family, framed in gold; 30 gold watches and 100 gold cigarholders, with diamond ornaments.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

TUESDAY, Jan. 16.—In the senate to-day the federal election bill and the tariff measure were discussed. In the house several amendments to the tariff bill were offered and adopted and others were introduced but not acted upon.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 17.—After discussion of civil service reform until the close of the morning hour the senate resumed as "the unfinished business" the house bill to repeal the federal election laws, and the debate continued until the close of the legislative day. In the house Mr. Wilson's amendment to the tariff bill fixing the date on which free wool should go into effect as August 1 was defeated, and the substitute making it go into effect immediately on the passage of the bill was adopted. The rest of the day was spent discussing the amendment of Mr. Burrows to substitute the print wool schedule for that proposed by the Wilson bill.

THURSDAY, Jan. 18.—In the senate Senators Peffer and Allen (populists) and Senators Morgan and Daniel (democrats) condemned the bond policy of the administration. The announcement was made of the resignation of Senator Walthall, of Mississippi. Adjourned to the 23d. Almost the entire day in the house was spent in the continuation of the debate on Mr. Burrow's amendment to restore the existing duties on wool, with the result of its defeat by a strict party vote.

FRIDAY, Jan. 19.—The senate was not in session to-day. In the house the time was occupied in discussing the tariff bill and the proposed amendment to put steel rails on the free list was lost by a vote of 100 to 79.

SATURDAY, Jan. 23.—There was no session in the senate. In the house the tariff bill was discussed, and messages were received from the president vetoing the New York and New Jersey bridge bill and transmitting the latest correspondence from Hawaii.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Henry M. Rice.

Henry M. Rice, of St. Paul, died at San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 15. He was born in Vermont in 1816, and in 1839 removed to Fort Snelling, then in Iowa territory, and was post sutler at Fort Atkinson in 1840-2, and was subsequently an agent of a fur trading company, as such establishing trading posts from Lake Superior to the Red River of the North. Aug. 2, 1847, he served as United States commissioner at Fond du Lac in making a treaty with the Ojibway Indians for the cession of the country south of Crow Wing and Long Prairie rivers. He also assisted in making many other treaties with the earlier history of the Northwest.

Mr. Rice settled in St. Paul in 1849, was elected a delegate to congress from Minnesota territory in 1853, was reelected in 1855, was the author of the law extending the right of pre-emption over unsurveyed lands in the territory, and procured the passage of an act authorizing the framing of a state constitution preparatory to the admission of Minnesota into the union. He was then elected to the United States senate as a democrat, serving from May 12, 1858, to March 3, 1863. Mr. Rice was a member of the committee on finance and military affairs, and the special committee on the condition of the country in 1860-1, and a delegate to the Philadelphia National Union convention in 1866. He was the founder of Bayfield, Wis., and Munising, Mich., and gave Rice park to the city of St. Paul.

What a Horse Can Do.

While Mr. Cowling was driving near the Windsor hotel, in St. Paul, his horse started to run. After spilling the driver out of the cutter, the animal turned and bolted head first into the huge plate glass window at the entrance to Field, Mahler & Co's. Bleeding and struggling, he managed to force his way into the window and dragged the partially demolished cutter after him. He tore around amongst the upholstery curtains with which the window was filled, destroying some $50 worth, and then bolted through another window into the street. He was literally cut to shreds, but will live. The two windows were worth over $100 each.

SUGAR TO BE FREE.

The House Votes to Place It on the Free List—The Bounty Rejected.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Pursuant to the special order adopted in the house last Friday the sugar schedule was on Monday taken up. Mr. McRae (dem., Ark.) presented his amendment abolishing the bounty on sugar and putting sugar on the free list. Mr. Meiklejohn (rep., Neb.) offered an amendment for the substi ution of the existing law for the sugar clause of the Wilson bill.

Mr. Harter (dem., O.) offered a substitute providing that the bounty on sugar should cease directly on the passage of the Wilson bill; that sugar sweepings, cane juice, molasses, etc., should be taxed one cent. per pound, and that when imported from a country which gives a bounty on the exportation of sugar a tariff tax be imposed in this country equivalent to the bounty.

Mr. Gear (rep., Ia.), who was received with prolonged applause, offered an amendment providing that the decrease in the bounty on sugar should begin July 1, 1898, instead of 1895. Mr. Gear advocated the bestowal of bounties, which he said had always been the policy of the government.

Brief speeches were made on both sides of the pending propositions by the following members:

Bryan (dem., Neb.), Dingley (rep., Me.), Tarsney (dem., Mo.), Mercer (rep., Neb.), Washington (dem., Tenn.), Gillet (rep., Mass.), Snodgrass (dem., Tenn.), Harter (dem., O.), Bowers (rep., Cal.), Hooker (dem., Miss.), Warner (dem., N. Y.), Simpson (pop., Kan.), Blanchard (dem., La.), Hainer (rep., Neb.), Boatner (dem., La.) and Payne (rep., N. Y.).

Mr. Wilson (dem., W. Va.) then spoke briefly against any change in the tariff bill as prepared by the committee on ways and means.

The amendments and substitutes presented to the sugar schedule were then read prior to taking the vote upon them.

The first amendment was the one offered by Mr. McRae suspending the bounty on sugar and putting sugar on the free list. To this amendment Mr. Meiklejohn (rep., Neb.) offered an amendment substituting the provisions of the existing law. Mr. Harter (dem., O.) offered a substitute abolishing the bounty on sugar and putting a discriminating tax on all sugars, raw or refined. Mr. Price (dem., La.) offered an amendment to the substitute providing for a tariff tax on sugar.

Mr. Meiklejohn's amendment was first voted on and was defeated—yeas 82, nays 158. Among those who voted for this amendment were the following democrats: Messrs. Davey, Robertson, Meyer, Price and Blanchard, all of Louisiana.

Mr. Price's amendment was also defeated—yeas, 19; nays, 149. The following democrats voted for the amendment: Messrs. Boatner, Price, Blanchard, Black (Ill.), Bailey (Tex.), Davis and Meyer.

The vote was then taken on the McRae amendment, and it was agreed to on a vote by tellers by: Yeas, 135; nays, 69. Among those who voted for the amendment were the following republicans: Messrs. Grosvenor, Dalzell, Ellis, Moon, Keifer, McCall, Cannon, Wilson (Wash.), Lacey, Hopkins, Haugen, McDowell, Settle, Scranton, Marsh, Doolittle and Funk.

Mr. Robertson (dem., La.) offered an amendment providing for a tariff tax on sugar. To this amendment Mr. Warner (dem., N. Y.) offered an amendment putting refined sugar on the free list. Mr. Breckinridge (dem., Ky.) offered a substitute providing for a duty of one cent per pound on molasses, sirups and all raw products of cane juice, beet juice, tank bottoms, sugar sweepings, etc.

Mr. Warner's amendment was first voted on and was agreed to by a vote of 137 in the affirmative to 52 in the negative—nearly all republicans voting in the affirmative.

The Breckinridge amendment was then lost by a vote of 57 to 144.

The committee then rose but immediately resumed its sittings in the hope that the Robertson amendment might be passed, but the committee could not agree and at 5:40 it again rose.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Plans for Raising Funds for the Government's Needs.

A Tax of Two Per Cent. on All Income of $4,000 and Over—Playing Cards to Pay Two Cents a Pack and Spirits One Dollar a Gallon.

OUTLINE OF THE BILL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The income tax bill, as approved by the democratic members of the ways and means committee, was laid before the full committee. It was read in part, but the committee adjourned before the reading was finished. A synopsis of the bill is as follows:

The bill provides a tax of 2 per cent. upon all incomes of citizens of the United States, either at home or abroad, from any kind of property, rents, interest, dividends or salaries on all amounts over and above $4,000. The bill goes into effect January 1, 1895. In estimating incomes there shall be included notes, bonds and other securities, except such United States bonds as are exempt from federal taxation. The tax is laid on profits realized within the year from sales of real estate purchased within the year or within two years previous to the year for which the income is estimated; also on sales of live stock and farm products generally where grown upon one's own estate; all other incomes derived from any source whatever and the share of any person of the profits of companies, whether incorporated or partnership, who would be entitled to the same if divided whether divided or otherwise, except the incomes received from corporations whose officers, as required by law, withhold a per centum of the dividends and pay the same to the officer authorized to receive it.

In addition to the $4,000 exemption all national, state and county taxes paid within the year shall be deducted from the profits of the person who has actually paid them; also losses sustained during the year from fires, shipwreck and other causes not covered by insurance and compensated for, and worthless debts, but excluding estimated depreciation of value and losses on sales of real estate. No deduction shall be made for improvements which may increase the value of the property or estate. Only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of the members of any family.

Every person having an income of more than $3,500 shall make a return to the deputy collector of the district in which he resides of the amount of his income; but persons having less than $3,500 a year shall not make such a report. These returns shall be made on oath and the deputy collector may increase the amount of any list or return it if he has reason to believe that it has been understated. As a penalty for refusing to make the list, the deputy collector may make up such list according to the best information obtainable and add 50 per cent. to the amount. In cases where fraudulent list has been rendered a penalty of 100 per cent. shall be added.

The bill provides at some length the manner in which persons dissatisfied with the decision of the collector may submit their case to the commissioner of internal revenue. The tax shall be collected on or before the 1st day of each July, and an additional tax of 5 per cent. shall be laid on payment after that date, and interest at the rate of 1 per cent. a month upon the amount of the tax.

All persons in the civil, military, naval or other service of the United States, including senators, representatives and delegates in congress, shall pay a 2 per cent. tax upon incomes above $4,000 a year. This amount shall be deducted from their incomes by the disbursing officers making the payment.

The bill provides that when any revenue officer divulges the operations of a manufacturer or producer or the amount or source of his income he shall be subject to fine and imprisonment. The deputy collector shall make lists of persons owning property subject to tax and it shall be the duty of persons, firms and corporations made liable to any duty, special or other tax and not otherwise provided for, in case of a special tax on or before July 31, annually, in case of income tax on or before March 1, annually, and in other cases before the tax accrues, to furnish the deputy collector complete lists of taxable property. In case such person fails but permits the deputy to make up the return such lists may be received upon oath.

Section 11 of the bill relates to corporations. It requires them to make return before the tenth day of the month following the declaration of dividends under oath by the principal officer.

Section 12 requires corporations to furnish, beginning 1895, on or before the first Monday of —— (each year), a statement showing the gross profits, expenses, exclusion of interest, annuities and dividends, net profits without allowance for the same, amount paid on account of interest, annuities and dividends, amount paid for salaries, employes, above and below $4,000.

Section 14 levies taxes upon corporation dividends, interest coupons and annuities wherever and whenever payable, to all parties whatsoever, and provides that the corporation may deduct or retain from all payments made on account of such dividends, etc., a proportionate share of the tax so paid.

Section 15 provides for the issue of receipts by collectors for taxes paid, and whenever the payment is made otherwise than by a corporation the collector may give a separate receipt for each tax paid by any debtor on account of payments to separate creditors in such form that the debtor can present them to his creditors in satisfaction of their respective demands to the amount specified in such receipts.

Sections 16, 17 and 18 are not of public information, but are simply administrative.

Section 19 provides that after a date in 1894 there shall be a tax of 2 cents a pack on playing cards, payable by adhesive stamps.

Sections 20 to 28 (inclusive) are explanatory of section 19, and provide penalties for violation and evasion of the law.

Section 29 fixes the tax, on and after the second calendar month after the passage of the act, on all distilled spirits produced in the United States on which the tax is not paid before that day at one dollar per proof gallon, to be paid by the possessor on or before removal from warehouse within eight years from the date of original entry for deposit in any distillery or bonded warehouse, except in cases of withdrawal without payment of tax as now authorized by law.

Section 30 continues existing warehouse bonds on distilled spirits in full force for the time named in the bonds. When the tax is paid, on and after that date, there shall be added to the present tax of 90 cents a sufficient tax to make the total equal to $1. Bonds may be required for the additional tax.

Section 31 provides for regauging of spirits upon withdrawal, limiting the allowance for loss to 1 gallon for two months and 1½ gallons for twelve months.

Section 32, the last, repeals all inconsistent acts.

Prison for a Banker.

STERLING, Col., Jan. 24. — M. H. Smith, president of the Bank of Sterling, has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for receiving money on deposit after he became insolvent.

Stolen Cigars Found in a Cave.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 24. — Monday morning while two boys were skating on Hardwood lake, near Gibson, a suburb of this city, they discovered a cave in the bank, which upon entering they found to contain 20,000 stolen cigars. Gibson is thinly inhabited, has no police protection and is supposed to be the rendezvous for a gang of thieves.

I WILL THINK OF YOU.

I will think of you, my sweetheart, when the shadows softly creep,
And the crooning chirp of mother bird bids tiny ones to sleep,
And the twinkling, glist'ning starlight throws a halo, tender sweet,
Caressing, nodding flowers blooming brightly at my feet.

I will think of you, my sweetheart, for I know you think of me,
Throughout the breadth of daylight till all its suntips flee;
And the radiance of the mornings glides so softly from its place,
To where sable shades are waiting, the brightness to embrace.

I will think of you, my sweetheart, for in all this world to-day
There're no thoughts like thoughts of you can lighten up my way,
Can ease the heavy burden—can cause the clouds to part—
Can let the rays of God's light in—so I think of you, sweetheart.

THE BLUES CURE.

What the Great Golden Remedy Did for the Patients.

There was a Water cure, a Rest cure, and a Mind cure in the same town; but all three together did not do half the business of the Blues cure. In fact, those three establishments complained bitterly that the Blues cure took away many of their patients. They did all they could to crush it out; they declared it to be a humbug, a mere quack concern, "with its mysterious "Great Golden Remedy."

In truth, there was a mystery connected with the Blues cure. It was in one respect something like the Loisette Memory system, for every patient had to sign a bond that he would never reveal to anyone the secret of the "Great Golden Remedy." But, in spite of this, and the enmity of the other establishments, the Blues cure prospered extraordinarily, and people thronged to it from far and near. The Blues cure could proudly affirm that in all its career a case had never been lost.

The Blues cure office was a small, sunshiny room opening from a large, cheerful waiting room.

One fine October afternoon the clock was just striking three as the doctor, accompanied by a patient, entered the office and closed the door behind him.

The doctor was a jolly little man with a bald head, and a beaming smile so much like sunshine that on rainy days his great black cat would stretch herself out before him, as though she were really warming herself in its beams.

The patient was a tall, thin theologue, with a lugubrious expression of countenance, suitable for a chronic attender of funerals.

The doctor's style was laconic.

"What's the matter?" said he.

"I am subject to depression of spirits," replied the theologue, with a deep sigh that roused the black cat from its slumbers.

"When do these attacks come on?" said the doctor, looking at him with half closed eyes, as an artist surveys a picture.

"Every evening," replied the theologue. "I can't use my eyes then, and I fall to thinking of my theological questions, and I get extremely down in my spirits."

"What kind of questions?"

"Oh, the most important and interesting which can stir a man's mind," said the theologue, with such unwonted animation that the black cat again was startled. "Whether Moses wrote the Pentateuch; whether the Levitical code came in with Ezra or before; the doctrines of original sin, future probation, and many others. I am so upset in my old ideas (for I was taught from my youth up that it was wicked to question anything about such matters) that I get terribly blue."

"Oh, ho!" said the doctor, jumping up and fetching a little gilt box from a table. "I see what you need! You must drop your studies for a time and devote yourself to taking this great golden remedy. Follow the directions as if your life depended on it and you'll be cured of the blues."

"Is that all?" said the theologue, in astonishment.

"You'll find it enough!" replied the doctor, as he showed him the door.

"Next!" he called through the anteroom door, much as a lecturer directs his assistant to throw the next picture on the screen.

In came a young woman of perhaps seven and twenty, attired according to the latest fashion.

"Oh, doctor, how can I get over the blues?" she asked, in the jerky, chopped-off, broad-A style of enunciation so fashionable among feminine "dudes."

"What gives them to you?" said the doctor, looking at her with a magnifying glass, as if to see to what genus she belonged.

"My looking glass," frankly answered the young woman. "It shows me that I'm getting plainer every day. I've got three gray hairs and one crow's foot."

"Well, what of that?" asked the doctor.

"What of that?" repeated the patient. "It shows I'm growing old, and that's enough to make anybody blue. There are lots of 'buds' coming out every year in society, and I'm getting to be one of the old girls. I just hate to be an old girl and be laid on the shelf! I had an odious time at my last ball, and life isn't worth living, and I'm sick of it!"

"Humph!" said the doctor. "We'll cure you, if you will obey me implicitly. "You must follow this prescription faithfully. Take this Great Golden Remedy whenever you feel the symptoms coming on, and you won't have a single blue."

So saying he handed her a little gilt box like the one he gave the theologue, and she too passed into the street.

Next came a widow buried in crepe.

"Well, Mrs. Relict, I suppose you've come to report?" said the doctor.

"Yes," replied the widow. "The Golden Remedy has worked wonders with me. I thought it would be so easy, but I found it very hard to swallow at first. I persevered, and it has done me an enormous amount of good. I've slept and eaten as I haven't since John's death."

"You've given up reading your letters of condolence and wiping your eyes, then?" said the doctor.

"Oh, yes!" said the widow; "I don't have any time now."

"How often do you take the remedy?"

"Oh, nearly all the time," she replied. "If I go an hour without it, I get to thinking about John and how I miss him, and it gives me the blues terribly."

"Well, keep on the same way," said the doctor, heartily; "keep it up."

No sooner had the widow departed than in came a pale young man.

"What gives you the blues?" said the doctor, with one of his most sunshiny smiles. The cat left the window and stretched herself out in front of him.

The young man hesitated in answering this question, but as the doctor pressed him he finally admitted the cause.

"I can't help thinking about myself," said he. "When I go among people I am pursued by thoughts of my own awkwardness and stupidity and am keenly sensitive to every little slight. This shuts my mouth and makes me doubly uninteresting, and naturally people don't enjoy me; and then I come home and brood over it, and it really seems as if everybody were laughing at me, and I get as blue as indigo."

"Yes, you're right," said the doctor; "it's an aggravated case of morbid self-centeredness; but if you take this Golden Remedy every time you get to thinking about yourself, and take large doses of it when you are in company, you'll be cured as sure as fate."

The young man looked incredulous as he took his little gilt box and his departure, and went his way.

"Oh, doctor!" said the next, a poor little dressmaker with so sad a voice that the black cat again retired to the sofa. "I'm so blue! When I get through my work and sit alone in my little room evenings, I feel so lonely I'd most like to kill myself. I haven't a relation or a friend in all the town, and it's something dreadful to have no one to welcome you home—nobody to tell things to, nobody to say good night or morning to you. Why, sometimes I kiss my own arm, I feel so desperately lonely!" and she burst into tears.

"Poor thing! poor thing!" said the doctor, in a cheerful voice, as if he were saying: "Fine day! fine day! We'll fix you up. Now, my dear, just follow the directions in this little gilt box whenever you begin to feel lonely; and take a specially large dose in the evening when you come home from work."

"What in the world is the matter with you?" inquired the doctor of his next patient, an elegantly-attired young man, who looked as sleek and well-to-do and about as intellectual as a well-fed, well-curried horse.

"I'm bored to death," drawled the young fellow. "I was so bored with balls and parties and racing and cards and shooting and theaters and everything else in that line, it was positively a relief to wake up one morning and find I had the blues; for it was a new sensation. But I've had them so long now, I'm bored with them, too, and I've come here to get cured."

"Well," said the doctor, looking at him through his magnifying-glass till the young man actually blushed, "you'll find my remedy so hard to follow it will be like drawing teeth; but I can assure you it will be a 'new sensation,' and if you stick to it it will cure even you."

"I'll take it at any price!" said this afflicted representative of boredom.

"No price," said the doctor, "except secrecy. The remedy does no good if anyone else learns that you are trying it for such a purpose."

The young man signed the bond, and departed with a more animated expression on his blase countenance, and a small gilt box in his pocket.

The next arrival was an invalid in a rolling chair. Her pale face beamed with pleasure.

"Oh, ho! So you're back! Remedy don't work?" said the doctor, knowing better.

"I should think it did work," she answered, gravely. "You know how long the days were as I lay in my bed or sat in this chair, knowing I could never take a step, and brooding over every ache and pain. Well, now the days are not half long enough to do all I want. The remedy has given me so much to do, and made life entirely different to me. How can I thank you, doctor?"

"Pshaw, child!" said the good man, "don't thank me. It's the remedy. Keep it up; just keep it up."

Next came a very intellectual-looking young woman, who had obtained a degree from a university. She complained that through all the studying to which she devoted her life for the cultivation of her mind, there ran an undertone of melancholy which whenever she stopped work, culminated in an attack of the blues.

As usual, the doctor dispatched her with his universal prescription, and also the other half dozen patients who called that afternoon. One was a man made miserable by his own selfish jealousy of any attention paid his wife. Another got the blues because she was so discontented with her humdrum, monotonous life, being kept at home by an invalid sister when she wanted to study music in Germany.

So they came, rich and poor, young and old, no class in society seeming to be exempt from this miserable ailment, and each departed thankful for the Great Golden Remedy.

At last the clock struck six, and the doctor closed his office door and settled himself comfortably by the fire. The black cat jumped up in his lap, and the doctor took one of the mysterious little boxes from the table. As he, in an absent-minded way, removed the cover, a little paper fluttered out. Not a pill nor a powder was to be seen, and the Great Golden Remedy consisted only of the little paper, on which were printed in golden letters these words:

WHENEVER YOU ARE FEELING BLUE, SOMETHING FOR SOME ONE ELSE GO DO.

"How silly people are!" said the doctor to himself. "They travel miles to get here, take no end of trouble, sign that bond and all that nonsense just to get what they could have learned from the Book of the Great Physician just as well as I did. Just because the idea is dressed up in a poor rhyme and a gilt box, and there's a mystery about it, and it's the fashion to come here, the Blues cure is a howling success, and all the world is running after my Great Golden Remedy." And the black cat switched her tail and said amen as well as she knew how.—N. Y. Independent.

—It may be doubted, says an English writer, whether our measurement of animal courage has yet been sufficiently extended, for there appear instances in which the acts of daring are prompted by a sense of obedience, of discipline, and even of duty—something similar in kind to that which marks and distinguishes the highest forms of courage in man.

—A novel kind of cab has lately been tried in Berlin. In appearance it is not unlike a large bath chair with two seats, and is propelled by a petroleum-naphtha motor. It has three wheels, and carries only two persons, including the driver. The motor is of nearly two horse power, and produces, on good roads, a speed of about eleven miles an hour.

—Sir Charles Lyall, basing his estimate on modifications of certain species of marine life, assigned 240,000,000 years as the required length of geologic time. Darwin claimed 200,000,000 years; Crowell, about 72,000,000; Geikie, from 73,000,000 upward; Alexander Winchell, but 3,000,000; McGee, Upham and other recent authorities claim from 100,000,000 up to 680,000,000 years.

—It is said by an Indian botanist that some plants can see. This is as startling as the statement made some time ago, and now conclusively demonstrated, that certain plants have the sense of touch. Experiments have shown that plants have a tendency to grow towards supports placed at a little distance from them, and will even grow away from the light in order to reach objects about which they may twine themselves.

—Polygonum sakhaliæ is the name of a forest plant from the island of Sakhalien, Japan, of which flattering accounts are given by M. Doumet Adanson, who has cultivated a few stools of it in France. He got it as an ornamental plant, and it is really very handsome. It grows to be about six feet high in three weeks; produces a considerable foliage of which cattle are fond; and yields a good second crop after the first cutting. A section of root planted will produce a stool covering a square meter of surface. It takes care of itself.—Popular Science Monthly.

—Liquid chlorine is now being prepared on a large scale in Europe for use in chemical work. The gas is liquified by a special form of pump, and is kept or transported in iron or steel cylinders, which themselves weigh about 100 kilograms and hold fifty kilograms of liquid chlorine, equivalent to about 15,000 liters of chlorine gas. The density of the liquid chlorine is about 1.33; at 15 degrees C. its pressure is six kilograms; at 35 degrees C. it is ten atmospheres. The cylinders are tested for more than 100 atmospheres.

—The English coal strike extended over twelve weeks; it kept 250,000 men out of employment and reduced tens of thousands of families to destitution; the loss in miners' wages alone is computed at $22,500,000 and the loss in industries dependent upon coal mining is put at $23,500,000; the miners' funds exhausted by the fight amounted to $1,500,000 and the public charity was drawn upon to the extent of $3,500,000. These losses together amounted to $50,000,000, and it is said that the loss of manufacturers' and mine owners' profits and the indirect injury to trade would bring the total up to $150,000,000.

LARGEST EVER CAUGHT.

The Capture of a Great Sunfish Off the Coast of Redondo.

A fishing party of seven, under the charge of Alex. Mathison, were recently some five miles off the coast of Redondo in the sloop Helen after barracuda. One of their number saw floating in the water what at first was taken for a young whale. On approaching the object it was discovered to be a large sunfish lying on its side, evidently enjoying the sunlight. On the nearer approach of the party the monster dived beneath the boat, coming to the surface a few yards on the other side. The boat was turned and bore down on it once more. In its effort to escape the fish was struck by the bow of the boat and thrown upon its side.

The opportunity was seized to throw a jew-fish hook into its mouth. Gaining its equilibrium, the gigantic fish sped away, the reel humming with the one hundred and fifty fathoms of line carried with it. Then came a battle royal between the great ocean rover and the fisherman. After long maneuvering a rope was made fast under its fins and attached to the mast. The boat was nearly dragged beneath the waves by the violent efforts the enormous fish made to escape. Finally, under the pressure of sail and by the exhaustion of its own efforts, it was towed to Redondo and there upon the beach.

The fish is a magnificent specimen of its kind, measuring 11 feet from the dorsal to the anal fin, 8 feet 2 inches in length, and weighed in the neighborhood of 1,800 pounds. When the fact is considered that this is the largest specimen of its species ever captured, it will be of more than passing interest to the general public and of value to the scientific world. The largest heretofore recorded is numbered in the collection of the British museum, which measures seven feet six inches in length, captured off the coast of Dorsetshire in 1846.—Los Angeles Herald.

HE EXPLAINED.

The Old Man Resented Unjust Inferences of Fellow Passengers.

An old man with a fringe of gray whiskers and a general expression of frankness and truth on his countenance entered a Michigan Avenue car at the City hall yesterday, carrying a two-quart jug in his hand. There were seven passengers ahead of him, and every one had his eye on the jug as it was placed under the seat. At Griswold street three more people got in, and they were hardly seated before they discovered the jug. At Washington avenue the number was increased by two more, and they followed the glances of the others and gazed long and earnestly at the jug. The old man had been nervous and uneasy, and now he felt that he ought to say something. He accordingly reached down for the jug, set it on his knees, and said:

"I don't blame ye, but ye hev made a mistake this time. I hain't got whisky but 'lasses."

The man across the aisle smiled in a contemptible, sarcastic way. It was a smile which plainly said: "The old hayseed has a dreadful innocent look, but he's lying about the contents of that jug. I've seen jugs before to-day!" When the old man saw that smile he reddened up a little and said:

"I never took a drink of whisky in my life! It's 'lasses fur the old woman to put in her mince-meat."

And now the woman next to the smiler also smiled. She was smiling about the mince-meat instead of the whisky, but the old man took it the other way, and exclaimed:

"If you folks don't believe me you kin smell of it! If I'd had whisky in the jug I should hev walked!"

"O, we don't care to smell of it!" replied the man beside him, as he stuck up his nose. "If you say it's molasses that settles it, but——"

"But what? Why, gaul durn it, of course its 'lasses! D'ye suppose I'd go'n lie about such a thing as this? I've kept house fur fifty years and never had a drop of licker in it, and why should I begin now?"

"You shouldn't!" said the man who had started the row. It pains my heart to see an old man like you carrying home the little brown jug."

"It does, eh? Then you think I'm a liar, do you? I say it's 'lasses in the jug, and I want somebody to taste of it! I hain't goin' to be called a——"

But there was no need of investigation. In his nervousness he lost his hold on the jug and it fell on the floor with a crash, and was broken in many pieces, while two quarts of N. O. molasses spattered about and ran over the floor until the pool was as large as the head of a barrel.

"Thar! Is that 'lasses or whisky? I've bin called a drunkard and a liar, and you've made me bust the jug and lose the 'lasses. Now, you go right ahead and injoy yerself, for I won't ride another rod with sich a crowd!"

And while everybody held his feet up and yelled to the conductor, the old man made a break through the front door and struck the ground like a load of brick.—Detroit Free Press.

MUSIC IN WALES.

Melody Is the Very Soul and Kernel of the Welsh Nature.

Every church and chapel in every Welsh village and town, according to the Westminster Review, has its choir, often numbering sixty, seventy or a hundred voices, and every choir has its musical prodigies, leaders of parts, mayhap, who have never had a lesson in music in their lives, or some uncouth colliers or tip-girls, with voices which, had they been trained and developed, might have made of them Edward Lloyds or Antoinette Sterlings. District after district has its "united choral union," which will take up the study of some work of the great masters and deliver it at an annual concert or Christmas festival; not in the pale, flickering, dispassionate style which is so characteristic of some English choirs, but with rugged fire and intensity.

I have had the good fortune to hear the greatest oratorios rendered under the most brilliant conditions that talent and culture could produce in this the most talented and cultured of all metropoles, but I have never heard the majestic roll of the Hallelujah chorus or the matchless melodies of the "Elijah" rendered with such soul and verve and eloquence as by an obscure "united choir," led by a workingman in a mining village among the hills of Glamorganshire.

Rough, if you will; ruggedly vehement and impetuous, but rough with the roughness of unpolished genius, impetuous with the impetuosity of mountain torrents. The force of it, the emotional fervor, the richness of volume, the tone and timbre in it—these are things not to be forgotten. The same qualities in a lesser degree may be observed in the singing of any small chapel choir inside the boundaries of Wales. You shall never hear such singing as you may hear on quiet Sunday evenings from some Welsh hillside sanctuary by a choir of working lads and lasses, conducted by some rough-and-ready, unkempt, self-taught musician.

Music, then, we assert, is the very soul and kernel of the Welsh nature. A musical ear is the national birthright. Every Welsh preacher who migrates to an English church finds the greatest difficulty in abstaining from that weird, peculiar intonation of his sermon which is known as the hwyl, and which is often strange and objectionable to English ears.

Another remarkable and subtle fact which will be interesting to English readers and at the same time significant of the sensitiveness of the Welsh musical ear, is that it is positive discord to many among the Welsh congregations if the minister, in "giving out" the first verse of the hymn, does not so pitch the voice that it shall be in harmony with the key in which the tune has preliminarily been played by the instrumentalist.

ALL SORTS OF SERMONS.

Bishop of Wakefield's Classification of Pulpit Eloquence.

One does not look to a prelate for frank fun, but the bishop of Wakefield, unasked, has vouchsafed some genuine humor on the subject of preaching, says London Black and White. He has clearly made a study of the art, and he divides the modern sermon into seven species. Thus we have:

"The Sesquipedalian—Big words hiding little thoughts."

"The Wishy-Washy—No explanation required.

"The Pyrotechnic—Blazing with brilliant metaphors and illustrations, and finishing with a faint odor of gunpowder.

"The Anecdotic—Teeming with stories—some of them good enough once, but gone bad by keeping.

"The Flowery—In which rhyme is of more importance than reason.

"The Mellifluous—With calm, unbroken flow.

"The Paregoric—Against which the powers of wakefulness fail; like a roll of ribbon, so much alike at all points that a yard can be cut off anywhere." Who does not know each and all of these? This is a form of pastoral which congregations, as a rule, do not disapprove.

In connection with this severe episcopal utterance there is a story on the other side going the ecclesiastical round. A clergyman prepared to preach a few Sundays since, and gave out as his text: "The devil, like a roaring lion, goeth about seeking whom he may devour." In the same breath, before beginning his discourse, he continued: "My friends, you will probably have heard that the bishop of Manchester has announced his intention of visiting every church in his diocese, and consequently we may very shortly expect to see him among us."

216 Bus. 8 Lbs. Oats from One Bus. Seed.

This remarkable, almost unheard-of, yield was reported to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., by Frank Winter, of Montana, who planted one bushel of Great Northern Oats, carefully tilled and irrigated same, and believes that in 1894 he can grow from one bushel of Great Northern Oats three hundred bushels. It's a wonderful oat. 20 sorts field corn, yielding 80 to 130 bushels per acre.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND IT with 8c postage to the above firm you will receive sample package of above oats and their farm seed catalogue. [K]

Writes under date of Nov. 30th, 1893, from Winthrop P. O., Buchanan Co., Iowa: I will say a few words in behalf of Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood. I had been feeling bad for some time, and had been to THREE DIFFERENT DOCTORS and they did me NO GOOD. I felt tired, and could not work; so I had to hire a hand, and did not know what to do. It was some time in June that a friend recommended me to try Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood. I did so, and had not taken half a bottle of it, when I went back to work, and I have felt well ever since. I can recommend the remedy to anyone.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DELANO DIARY

—32 degrees below zero yesterday morning.

—Band Concert at City Hall next Tuesday evening.

—The outlook for a beautiful ice harvest is encouraging.

—One of the freights has again been taken off the G. N. and for awhile we will have a train each way every other day.

—The remains of Mrs. Norman Chance were brought to Delano this morning and interred in the Catholic cemetary.

—As soon as the floor can be cleard, after the band entertainment Tuesday evening, all who wish may indulge in a free dance.

—The "Confederate Spy" by the Montrose Dramatic Club was well received by a large audience at the city hall on Saturday evening.

—Jake Meyer received this morning from his father at Washington a branch of an orange tree full of oranges. John now has a fruit farm in Washington.

—The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church will give a "Literary Salad" Social in the parsonage, Friday evening, Jan. 26. Something new. Don't miss it.

—Another case of Diphtheria is reported in Delano this morning in the family of John O'Leary Mrs. O'Leary being the victim. The premises have been quarantined.

—Remember the band concert at the city hall next Tuesday evening. A program of 15 choice selectious has been arranged, to be followed by "The Pirate's Legacy" a play in two acts. At the close, all who wish, may participate in a free dance.

—The dance given by the I. O. O. F. lodge last Tuesday evening was attended by about 40 couple and greatly enjoyed by all. Music was furnished by the Star Orchestra of Minneapolis which was excellent. Supper was served at Young's Hotel.

—We are in receipt of a letter from Rev. J. R. Davies in which he says a revival spirit is being manifested at his new charge Brooklyn Center, six or seven professions having been made since New Years. He says he likes his new home and work.

—Rev. Millspaugh, of St. Paul's church, Minneapolis, and who preaches here monthly, has been offered a position as Dean of the Cathedral at Topeka, Kansas. He leaves next week to look over the new field. His parishoners in Minneapolis are preparing a strong protest to his leaving.

--Rev. J. W. Powell preached at the M. E. church on Sunday. He announced his intention to hold protracted meetings at Montrose until the Sunday preceeding Lent when he will begin a series of services here to continue 40 days and 40 nights. He is an earnest worker and with the aid of the Master hopes to accomplish good both at Montrose and in Delano.

—We understand there is a probability of securing the noted lecturer, Rev. Thomas McCleary, to deliver his famous leeture "That Preacher" in Delano, in the near future. He is among the best Minnesotans on the platform today, and ranks with the leaders anywhere, and "That Preacher" is pronounced worth hearing Should he make arrangements to come here don't fail to hear him.

Among Our Exchanges.

J. H. BLOCK is now making an active fight for the nomination of state treasurer and, from present indications, with excellent chances of success.—St. Peter Herald.

The Evening Wisconsin lets its partisanship go to a silly extreme when it charges the democratic party with responsibiliay for the flooding of an iron mine at Ashland.—Wabasha Democrat.

For each new subscriber received for The Republican before February 1, 1894, we will give free as a premium, one year's subscription to your choice of either the New York Tribune or the Chicago Inter Ocean.—Weepingwater (Neb.) Republican.

From the Norwood Times we learn that the Catholic congregation at that place recently had a lively time discussing whether to expend a thousand dollars in the treasury for a school building or a parsonage. The Germans going for the school were in a majority of six over the Irish and English speaking people who favored a parsonage and a resident priest. The article says: "The probability is that the school building will be erected in the near future, unless higher authority interfers."

It is given out cold that the republican bosses of the state are "agin" Bob Dunn for State Auditor. It's not to be wandered at that the men who have for years been silent partners in the pilferings from the state school fund, raise their hands and voices in opposition to one who was instrumental in uncovering their wickedness and dishonesty. It's not strange that they should not desire pine land investigations to cut an important part in the coming campaign. It would cut both ways and they desire as John Goodnow stated, a campaigh "upon national issues." But what say the people of the state?—The Mille Lacs County Times.

We see by the daily papers that the Republican state central committee is going to flood the country again with the weekly New York Tribune for campaign purposes. It had better save its money, or if it has money to spend, invest it in extending the circulation of home papers, which are much nearer the people and have more influence with them than any foreign paper even if it was founded by Horace Greeley. The material in the Tribune is all right enough, but the inattractive style of its get up, in imitation of British newspapers, makes it look heavy and dreary, and people are too busy these days to read anything that looks prosy.—Sherburne County Star-News.

It is not creditable to the intelligence of Protestants, to attribute so much power as some do to Mgr. Satolli, Cardinal Gibbons and other Catholic dignitaries. So far as they choose to contend against the American spirit, the influence of such is puny and imperceptible. Catholic laymen are thinking for themselves. Here is what Judge McSherry, member of the court of appeals for Maryland, savs, in refering to the question of the division of the public school funds:

"I am bitterly and intensely hostile to the whole scheme. I am a Roman Catholic, but because I am, it does not follow that I approve or indorse every wild or visionary measure which religious zealots choose upon there own responsibility to inaugurate. It is most unfortunate that this agitation has been started. It can result in no possible good and may lead to the disintegration of existing political parties and to the formation of new ones based solely upon differences of religion. Should this occur the agitators of this scheme would be ground to powder. No one would specialy object to this if they were the only sufferes. But, aside from this, the scheme is utterly indefensible. The school tax is levied for a special purpose, viz; for the maintenance of the public schools and for nothing else; and no legislature has the moral or constitutional right, in Maryland, to direct a portion of the fund to another and a different use. It would be a breach of the public trust to do this. The money so raised can no more be applied to denominational schools than to religious denominations; and it is but a short and easy step from the one misappropriation to the other."

In fact the Jesuitical priesthood and the foreign element in the Roman Catholic hierarchy are getting worsted in the fight against our public school system.—Methodist Herald.

"One of The Hands."

The following lines were suggested by witnessing the bitter grief of a mother, who told me, with a voice choked with tears and sobs, how her youngest born, her pride and darling, only nineteen years old, a brakeman on a Western railroad, had fallen under the wheels of a moving train, and afterwards lay uncared for on the floor of a station house for five hours; conscious till death ended his suffering; and how she might have reached him in time to have pillowed his dying head on his mother's breast. But he was "only a brakeman," and no word was sent her:

Only a brakeman killed!
Lay him down over there
On the floor, no matter where,
Crushed broken and bruised;
But the traffic for gain
Stops never for sorrow or pain.
Put another in his place,
Speed onward the train—
On, through the blood of the slain!

Only a brakeman killed!
Strong your limbs twisted and broken,
Life crushed out—no farewell spoken!
Only a brakeman gone,
Gone, like many another;
But, God! who shall tell his mother?
We have no time to spare!
Wealth cares not for its slave,
Get him a box, dig him a grave!

Only a brakeman killed!
Only Charlie, our handsome boy,
His sister's pride, his mother's joy.
Only, in a desolate home,
An old woman's breaking heart,
Only one "hand" less in labor's mart!
Only a bright young life,
Crushed out by the wheels today!
Only our Charlie, so bright and gay.

"Only one of the hands!"
But braver lad ne'er turned a brake,
And for his old mother's sake,
We will smooth his dark hair,
And whisper a prayer,
That somewhere, over there,
The Good Father will care
For "one of the hands."

Modern Education.

Education seems to be the principle object in life today. In America it has always been considered among the essentials. But it seems to be a growing hobby, with most people now-a-days, every thing else must be sacrificed for book learning. A college diploma must be obtained for every boy, and a many girls. No matter what vocation in life they expect to follow; they must have their sheepskins. It makes no difference how poor or how rich the parents are the offsprings must be college graduates. Sometimes a poor man and wife spend their best days toiling to educate one after another, a large family, who, when their school days are over are not capable of taking care of themselves being unused to work of any kind except to learn their lessons, so many pages a day to get through college. Some of them even relying Considerably on the help they can get from class mates and others to stand their examination for degrees. Health, wealth, happiness, are sacrificed in the mad race for distinction in this direction. In order to atone for the drain on the physical system a corse of rough games are indulged in to excess, and many a man remembers his college days by the bruises on his body. Others lament the loss of a fair fortune in the hope of making something of their son, and who, when in posession of the coveted parchments, which he keeps carefully rolled up in some business man's safe, while he himself saws wood or does some other manual labor for the prosperous man who perhaps grew to manhood in the same town, or county, working for his daily board and having but a limited time to apply to books secured enough only to enable him to look out for himself, but now that he has a competency, is making up lost time and living far more hapily than his educated neighbor.

We do not mean to discourage anyone from doing their best to learn all they can to educate themselves in all branches they may see fit; to secure the highest honors at the best institutions in the land. But would remind them that a diploma from any, or all the institutions in the world will not earn for them their daily bread, will not make for them a place in the hearts of their countrymen, will not bring for them peace and happiness, and prosperity unless there is behind it honesty of purpose, integrity of character, and a determination to make the most of surrounding circumstances, coupled with a dependency on Him that doeth all things well.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

CONGRESS has finally passed the Wilson tariff bill after allowing the income tax bill to become a rider.

DOCTOR J. H. MURPHY of St. Paul, the well known Railroad Surgeon died at his home on Wednesday, Jan. 31, 68 years of age.

ST. PAUL republicans are grooming Ex Gov. A. R. McGill, as a candidate for Mayor, instead of the preasant incumbent F. G. Wright, who has had enough and declines to again be a candidate.

WE acknowledge the receipt of an invitation from the city of Minneapolis and the Minneapolis Press Club to be preasant at an informal Banquet at the West Hotel, on Thursday, Feb. 15 at six oclock, p. m.

A FEW of Duluth's republicans showed the kind of material they are made of the last week when they made arrangments to have Maj. Baldwin burned in effigy. Such heathenish demonstrations should not be heard of in this age of the world. We are glad to note there are republicans even at Duluth who disapprove of such methods.

The Usurers.

In last week's Representative we noticed a very sensible letter from B. A. Burgeson, Hector, Minn., to Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, asking his opinion concerning the interest law, as follows: "In borrowing money, can the party letting it keep back say five per cent as a bonus? For instance, Mr. A borrows $1,000 from B; but B wants not only 10 per cent interest, in advance, but he wants a bonus of five per cent besides, leaving A only $850, while he has to give his note for $1000. I think it is a crying injustice against suffering humanity and against the statutes of the state of Minnesota. See Chapter 23, Sec. 2,090-1-2, which say such contracts are void and of no effect."

We presume Mr. Burgeson expected, as he had a right to, a good sensible, honest reliable answer; one that he could point with pride to while he advised his neighbors to borrow no money on those terms. The gentleman applied to for his opinion in law, was a man that had been to Congress, that was, and is a lawyer, that was a member of our legislature and is a member now of our State Senate. Who better qualified to express an opinion. He is also known as an orator and a statesman, an editor and a powerful reformer. Would not his answer be to the point? Would he not honestly advise the "poor farmers" who he is making such great efforts to educate to let such money loaners alone? But what is his answer? What does the Sage of Niniger. the author of Cæsar's Column, The Golden Bottle, etc., say on the subject? What advice does he send out in his educational campaign? Here what he says: "Our advice to the farmers is to borrow all the money they can get on the terms stated. The notes and mortgages so given are not worth the paper they are written on If possible have the testimony of a third party to help prove the facts." Now is this not very poor advice; considering the source? Suppose some poor widow has sold her farm and got the cash and asks one of these "money loaners" to let it out for her, is the farmer to borrow all he can of it expecting to never return a cent? Away with such advice. You can get better any where. If you are obliged to borrow on such terms borrow as little and not as much as possible. We don't like the spirit of this answer. DON'T BORROW MONEY OF ANY MAN OR WOMAN UNLESS YOU EXPECT TO PAY IT BACK.

Irrigation.

EDITOR GAZETTE:

Dear Sir:—Being a commissioner of the United States on irrigation, and, having finished the work assigned to said commission in regard to the water supply in the western part of our great and once prosperous country, I thought a few suggestions about the water supply of Minnesota might not be amiss. The state of Minnesota is wonderfully blessed with many lakes and streams of water and when the state was first settled there was no lack of water from the fact that the lakes were mostly surrounded by timber and the marshes were yearly covered with grass and not being ditched the water was held in the soil so the winds and sun could not draft the moisture so easily, and hence the crops raised did not suffer for water even with but little rain during their growing season. But experience has taught the farmers of Minnesota that the water supply for their crops in the last few years has been insufficient in various years to bring sufficient remuneration for the farmers' crops not getting only about half the amount of crops they formerly did when they had plenty of water. Now the farmers see this staring them in the face and begin to ask themselves "What are we going to do in this situation." One farmer says I used to raise 30 or 35 bushels of wheat per acre when I first came to Minnesota and got a dollar per bushel for it, but now I can raise only half as much and get fifty cents per bushel. What a difference. I pay more taxes too; my expenses are more every way.

The farmer says, "What can I do to get relief? Something must be done. Now Mr. Editor, I will make a little suggestion to the farmers through your journal, with your permission, to go to work on the principle of corperation work for the value of each farmer and see if you cannot overcome the difficulties you are laboring under. The lakes, marshes and streams in Minnesota can be utilized by science and corporation in such a manner that the farmer may have unlimited power over the crops he raises by a proper system of irrigation. All the lakes and streams can be utilized all over the state by means of windmills canals and water rams. What a grand chance you have along Crow river to supply yourselves with water for irrigation by daming the river, bringing the water by canals along the bluff on either side of the river and then by a system of wind mills, reservoirs and water rams you can take the water to any or all your lands to supply water in time of drouth. Why even with a good wind mill on the highest point of land in the state and a water ram the farmers can have all the water all over their farms they wish. The farmers can take the water from the lakes in like manner and use them to great advantage. The use of water thus utilized by proper scientific judgment will solve the problem as to water in the state of Minnesota. Now let the farmers put their heads and mites together and get down to business and let demagouge politicians go to grass and live like an ox or on what he earns out of labor for this is what God created man for to get his living out of the earth in the sweat of his face.

INDEPENDENT THINKER.

Why Bounties are Objectionable.

A correspondent asks the Times to "state plainly its objections to the bounty on sugar for the purpose of encouraging the production of cane and beet sugar in this country. We have about $170,000,000 of capital invested in the production of domestic sugar; and if, as is stated, we can under wise legislative encouragement, so develop this industry that in a few years we shall be able to produce all, or nearly all, of the 4,000,000,000 pounds of sugar we annually consume, can we not well afford to pay the bounty provided in the McKinley bill?"

The Times objects to the bounty on sugar, because sugar manufacturing is not a function of the government. What has Congress or the administration to do with the profits to be realized by those engaged in that or any other industry? It is not the business of Congress to use the taxing power to aid any industry. How can it confer special privileges or bestow a direct bounty upon the class engaged in a particular industry without encroaching upon the rights of somebody else? If Congress can pay $10,000,000 a year as bounty for sugar, it can pay $100,000,000; and if it can pay for producing sugar, what is to prevent it from paying for producing corn, wheat, cotton and other products?

With a depleted treasury, the government proposing to borrow money; the cry of hard times, distress and want heard in all parts of the country; farm values shrinking and farm products selling for less than the cost of production; mills shut down or running on short time; laborers out of employment; trade dull and commerce crippled, the Republican principle of direct bounties to special interests appears to us to be particularly vicious and odious. Certainly it is time that all taxes imposed and collected should be limited to "the necessities of the government honestly and economically administered."

The Times objects to the sugar bounty not only because it is unjust and in violation of the fundamental principle of equality upon which our government was organized, but because it is clearly unconstitutional. It has frequently been held by the courts, both State and Federal, that no lawful tax can be collected except for public purposes. Chief Justice Jeremiah S. Black declared:

Taxation is a mode of raising revenue for public purposes. When it is prostituted to objects in no way connected with the public interest or welfare it ceases to be taxation and becomes plunder.

Chief Justice Dillon, in the Vernon case, said:

No authority nor, as I believe, even dictum can be found which asserts that there can be any legitimate taxation where the money to be raised does not go into the public treasury or is not destined for the use of the government or some of the public governmental divisions of the state. In other words, a public governmental use or purpose is involved in and is essential to the idea of a tax.

The late Chief Justice Miller of the United States supreme court, in the Topeka case said:

To lay with one hand the power of the government on the property of the citizen and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative form.

Nor is it taxation. A "tax," says Webster's dictionary, "is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or state." "Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes."

If the opinions of these eminent jurists are of any value not only the payment of direct government bounties but the whole insidious and iniquitous tariff system is unconstitutional Certainly the policy which gives a bounty to the farmer who follows the plow between the cane rows in Louisiana or Texas, whilst denying a bounty to the farmer who follows the corn rows in Minnesota or Iowa, is open to arraignment and condemnation. The farmers of the northwest ask no bounty on their wheat, their corn or their cattle; they only ask of Congress an equal chance in the race of life, and that they be not taxed to raise money to pay other people. As for the Times, it believes that equality can only be established by equal laws that recognize equal rights, and that every vestige of legislation that confers an iota of privilege upon any citizen or discriminates against another, should be swept away as rapidly as public sentiment will permit.—Minneapolis Times.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan 19, 1894.

The time is drawing near for a final vote in the House on the Wilson tariff bill, and its passage by the House is now as certain as anything that has not actually taken place can be. The only material amendments made to the bill during the debate in the House were those abolishing the sugar bounty and putting refined sugar on the free list. The last is believed to have been the hardest blow even given to the sugar trust. A determined fight was made for the amendments putting a duty on iron ore and coal, but they were voted down by substantial majorities. It is not propable that any other important amendment will be attached to the bill, unless it shall be decided to make the internal revenue bill, which includes the income tax, which has just been reported to the house, one.

Several changes were made in the internal revenue bill before it was reported. Among them the following: The tax on cigarettes is $1 a thousand, instead $1.50 as first proposed; petroleum is put on the free list without qualifications, instead of being admitted free only from countries that admit ours free; changes were made in the wording of binding twine, condensed milk and pearl button clauses; cut stones and diamonds are left as at present, and an additional tax of 50 cents per thousand is placed on cigars.

President Cleveland and his sister, Miss Rose Cleveland, who presided over the White House during the early part of his first adminstration, have just returned from Hartford, Conn., where they went to attend the funeral of Mr. Cleveland's favorite nephew, Mr. H. G. Hastings of that place. Mr. Hasings was to the inauguration and spent a week with President and Mrs. Cleveland.

Senator Walthall left for his Mississippi home this week followed by the regrets of all who knew him. He was compelled to decline a testimonial banquet tendered him by his Senatorial colleagues, all of whom expressed the wish that his health will enable him to resume his duties for the full term beginning March 4, 1895.

Senator Voorhees stated at the last meeting of the Senate committee on Finance that he believed the bonds to be issued by Secretary Carlisle would only furnish a temporary relief to the Treasury and that Congressional legislation was absolutely necessary to put the goverment finances upon a firm basis. It is known that Senator Voorhees is at work upon a comprehensive financial bill, but he declines to state its nature or scope until he has completed it and formally introduced it.

Senator Peffer's resolution declaring the opinion of the Senate to be that the Secretary of the Treasury has no legal authority for the proposed bond issue, has been referred to the Senate Finance committee. That is probably the last that will be heard of the resolution, unless Mr. Peffer shall insist upon having it reported and formaly killed by a vote of the Senate.

Secretary Carlisle has had no official notice of that alleged attempt to prevent his issuing bonds by means of a restraining order from the courts, and he is going ahead with the preparations. The subscriptions received for these bonds exceeded the amount to be issued before the circular explaining the method of subscribing was sent out.

It is stated quite positively that Mr. Frank A. Crandall, of New York, who was at one time managing editor of the Buffalo Courier, and who has been prominent in politics in northern New York, is to be the Public Printer, and that his nomination will go to the Senate next week. That sort of an announcement has been made so often that democrats who are weary of seeing the immence patronage of the Goverment Printing Office controlled by a republican are waiting patiently, but anxiously, to ascertain whether this one has any better foundation then its predecessor.

The Senate committee on Foreign Relations has reported a resolution reciting that it is unwise and inexpedient to consider the annexation of Hawaii; that the people of that country should be allowed to choose and maintain their own government, and that foreign nations must keep their hands off. The democrates of the House Foreign committee have agreed to a resolution, which will come up in the House next week' which condemns the action of Minister Stevens in helping to overturn the government of Hawaii and endorse the principle announced by President Cleveland that interference with the domestic affairs of an independent nation is contrary to the spirit of American institutions. Senator Vest took occasion to say while the Senate was discussing the resolution: I am glad to say, as a democratic Senator, that I fully agree with the President in the position he has assumed in regard to Hawaiian annexation."

Farmers' Institute at Howard Lake.

The Institute opened on Monday the 28th inst, at 10 a. m.

Superintendent Gregg who presided gave an address on the dairy cow. He laid much stress first on the depth of the cow from the hook point downward. Second on steepness of pitch at the crops, that is, just behind the shoulders, and then good development of the udder. He said the skin of the udder and just above it should hang in loose folds when the udder is empty. He thought it very important that the milk wells or the openings in the body should be large. That indicated that the circulation of blood was quick and ample, and that meant much milk. Whenever an abundance of food was given, that is to say an abundance of food of the right kind, but the quality of milk produced in a cow could not certainly be told by the development of points in the animal. That had to be ascertained by testing. Mr. Gregg gave much useful information in reference to the dairy cattle. He dwelt upon the importance of using good sires of the right type. The dairy industry of the state has been much injured by the use of unsuitable sires.

W. L. Carlyle then tested milk with the Babcock test. He said it was indispensible to highest success that the dairy man should know the quality of milk which his cows gave as well as the quantity. The mornings milk is usually somewhat richer that what is taken in the evening. In testing milk therefore it is necessary to milk the cow both morning and evening and take a small quantity from each milking, mix the two and then go on with the test. The quality of the milk, so far as fat is concerned is largely affected by heredity, and by the time the cow has been milking. The new milk contains on an average 3.7 per cent of fat The samples tested gave respectively 4.9; 7 5; 4; 4.8; 5.5; 5.2; and 4 per cent. The butter would be about one-fifth more than the butter fat as there are some things in milk that come into the butter in addition to the butter fat.

Prof Shaw spoke for a short time on the school of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park. This school was doing an excellent work in educating the sons of farmers of the state. Including the students at the dairy course there were about 200 student in attendance at the present time. He said the young men who came were instructed in everything pertaining to farming. The attendance now is larger than at any other school on the continent.

Supt. Gregg supplimented Prof. Shaws remarks by saying that 500 students were wanted for that school, and they would be fourth coming inside of two or three years. The cost was only the cost of the board and washing. Young men who wanted to be admitted next autumn would have to apply early as there would undoubtly be a jam.

Theodore Louis, then spoke on rearing hogs. He said that men built palatial stables for horses cattle and sheep, but they seldom did so for the hog. Pigs were often lost at farrowing time, and when so lost they said it was through bad luck. Bad luck usually follows the transgression of nature's laws. No animal on the farm consumes more food to the live weight than the hog, and therefore none will lose money more quickly than the hog when not judiciously fed. The prices for hogs would vary but the average was good when a number of years were taken together. When a stable is high enough for a man to stand eaect in he is more apt to keep it clean. He described how to build small hog houses. He showed a plan of his own larger hog house which had served so good a purpose and described its different features, with some minuteness. The hog house should be put on a dry place and it should face the south. Many of the Minnesota farmers had from a quarter section to 1,000 acres of land, and yet in some instances they did not seem to have room for a hog house.

The afternoon session opened by a practical illustration of running a DeLaval Separator. Mr. Carlyle said that dairymen were now pretty well agreed that from 20 to 25 per cent more butter could be obtained from new milk seperated by one of these machines than from milk where the cream is raised by setting. The skim milk obtained may be fed when warm to the calves which is great advantage and it is easier keeping the cream away from bad odors than where the milk is set in cans. With a dairy of 10 to 20 cows it would pay to get one of these separators. The cost of these separators is $100 and upwards according to the size. The cows should be kept milking for at least 10 months in the year and the aim should be to have the cows come in in the autumn. A show of hands was called for as to how many people in the audiance favored winter dairying. A number of hands went up. The question was then asked if those who had tried it were pleased with the investment. The same hands went up again. Many important questions were answered by Mr. Carlyle on the feeding of dairy cows.

W. Somerville talked on the growing of berries. Every farmer should have at least one quarter of acre to raise small fruits, such as currents, raspberries and blackberries. That quarter of an acre should produce at least 25 bushels and that would be more than nearly all families on the farm could use. Moistme should be retained in the soil in growing small fruits by mulching. He would talk for a little while on raspberries. The raspberry rows should be nine feet apart and the bushes five feet apart in the row. He ploughed in the fall and pulverizes in the spring. Fall ploughing gives more density of soil. The good varieties are the Turner, the Cuthbert, the Schaffer, and the Brandywine. He described how he covered the bushes in winter. He drives in stakes at intervals and nails poles onto the stakes or stretches wire along them. The Ohio Black and the Gregg were among the best Black caps. He described how mulching could be done, and how mice could be destroyed which troubled the bushes in winter. He also described how to prune the bushes.

Supt. Gregg supported the views of Mr. Somerville as to mulching. His own experience in growing small fruits had convinced him of its great advantages in growing small fruits. His farm was in a section of the country that was liable to suffer from dry weather.

Theodore Louis then talked on the subject of growing clover. He showed the evils of growing grains continuously and selling them off the farm. Clover enriches the soil by drawing nitrogen from the atmosphere and also by bringing it up from the subsoil How to bring fertility to the land was the great question in New England, and it would be so here in the west if we did not adopt methods of husbanding fertility, as by the growing of clover. Mr. Louis answered many questions on the subject, the sowing of the clover, the kinds to sow, and the time to cut.

Prof. Shaw then gave an address on feeding dairy calves. He thought the fall the best time to come to hand. There was more time then to have them all cared for. They could be more easily taught to eat, the weaning season came at a more suitable time, and they could be more cheaply wintered the winter following the weaning. They should get new milk until they are two or three weeks old, according as they are robust or otherwise. The change from new to skim milk should be gradual. This change was minutely described as was also the nature of the shelter that should be provided for calves and the mode of feeding them in the stall. Prof. Shaw also showed why calves intended for the dairy should not be allowed to fat.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

We are in the receipt of the Los Angelles Herald, from our friend B. F. C. He has formally succeeded in falling among friends from the tone of a couple of the following extarcts:

Unless something abnormal should happen, our farmers and fruit growers will this year have the best and most productive season they have ever had.

As long as the McKinley bill is allowed to figure on our statute books it is a proclamation of non-intercourse with the out side world, and an invitation to the European holders of our bonds to send them back to us with a demand for gold. The one thing the country cannot indure is futher uncertainty. The McKinley bill ought to have been repealed at the latest by the middle of last April.

Mr. Carlisle tells us that at the rate revenue is now falling behind their will be a deficit in the treasury at the close of the present fiscal year of the enormons sum of $78,167,542! It was not a democratic congress that passed the laws which brought us to this deplorable condition. The high protective tariff has produced its natural and inevitable result—retaliation against us by the withdrawal of commercial intercourse as far as possible with a country which had set up a boycott against all other nations.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

TUESDAY, Jan. 23.—In the senate a resolution was reported from the committee on foreign relations declaring that the provisional government in Hawaii, having been duly recognized, should be allowed to pursue its own line of policy. The federal election law was discussed. In the house a bill was introduced for the free coinage of silver dollars. A joint resolution was presented declaring the sympathy of the United States with the effort now being made to establish a republican form of government in the Hawaiian islands. The tariff bill was further considered, and it was voted to place coal on the free list.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 24.—In the senate the Hawaiian question came up again and after an hour's discussion went over for the day. The bill repealing the federal election laws was further discussed. In the house an amendment to the iron schedule in the tariff bill placing iron ore on the free list was adopted. The income tax bill was reported from the committee on ways and means.

THURSDAY, Jan. 25.—In the senate the federal election law was discussed and protests were presented against the placing of coal and lumber on the free list in the tariff bill. In the house an amendment to the tariff measure calling for the free admission of all cotton machinery was defeated. An amendment to repeal the reciprocity section in the McKinley bill was adopted. At a democratic caucus it was decided to attach the income tax bill to the tariff bill.

FRIDAY, Jan. 26.—The session of the senate was devoted to a discussion of Senator Call's public land resolution and a general colloquy over the federal election bill. Adjourned to the 29th. In the house the only amendment to the tariff bill adopted was one increasing the duty on diamonds, unset, to 30 per cent ad valorem. The members of the judiciary committee adopted a resolution declaring that the secretary of the treasury has no authority to sell bonds to meet the current expenses of the government.

SATURDAY, Jan. 27.—There was no session in the senate. In the house the tariff debate was concluded, so far as it relates to the customs schedules. At least a hundred amendments were shut out. It was expected a vote would be taken on the bill on February 2, the interim to be spent in discussing internal revenue. A bill was introduced to increase the revenue by a direct tax on land in the United States.

California's Midwinter Exposition Formally Opened.

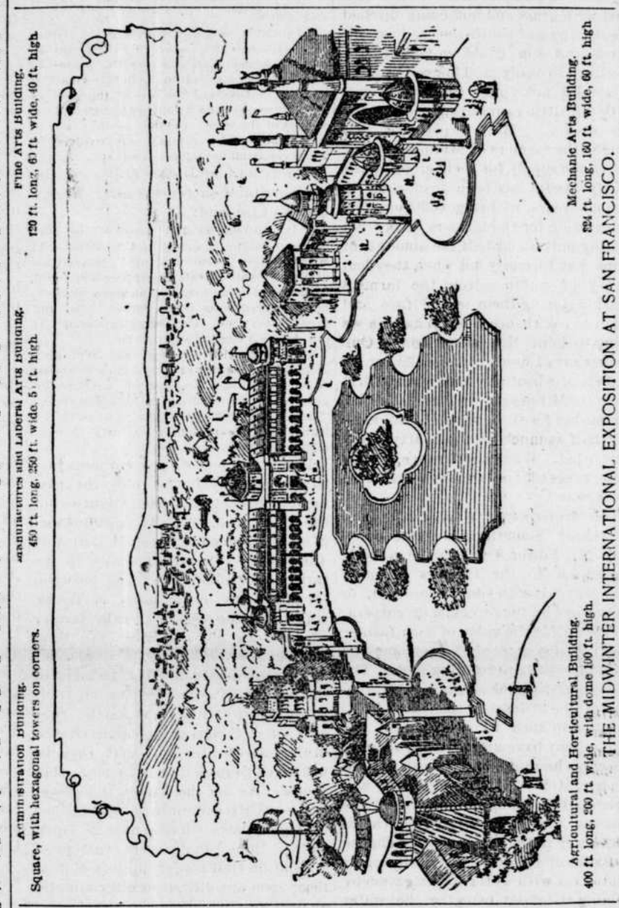
IN FULL BLAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—The Midwinter fair has at last been opened. Thousands of people from all parts of the state witnessed and participated in the dedicatory ceremonies, and the greatest and grandest enterprise ever seen west of the Mississippi river is finally in full swing.

It was a holiday in San Francisco. The shops were closed and business was neglected and abandoned. Buildings in every part of the city were lavishly decorated with flags and bunting, and the whole population thronged the streets and gave to them an eminently festal appearance. Thousands of visitors were here who are residents of Los Angeles and the distant southern part of the state, of Oregon, of Washington, of Navada, of Arizona and of British Columbia. The whole Pacific coast united to celebrate the inauguration of the enterprise which means so much to every part of it.

The exposition itself is beautiful, and its beauty was thoroughly appreciated by the throng of visitors. Everyone agreed that never before was seen a more charming collection of tasteful buildings.

Shortly after 10 a. m. Saturday the parade, under command of Gen. Dickinson, started for the fair grounds. In the procession were four regiments of the national guard, the regular army troops from Presidio, Gov. Markham and staff, the fair officials, civic societies, and many of the concessional features to be seen at the fair. Golden Gate avenue, the main drive to the park, was thronged with spectators, who listened to the stirring music of numerous bands, and cheered as the long line of men marched by. Shortly after 12 o'clock the procession reached the fair grounds, and assembled on the recreation grounds, where a huge grand stand had been erected near Festival hall.



The order of exercises was as follows: Medley of the airs of all nations by the Midwinter Fair band; introductory address by the president of the day, James D. Phelan; prayer by Bishop Nicholas; grand chorus, "America," sung by the Midwinter Fair chorus of 300 voices; address by Gov. Markham; music by Iowa State band; address by Director General M. H. De Young declaring the exposition open; oration on the general benefits and permanent results of the Midwinter exposition, by Gen. W. H. L. Barnes; music by the Austrian band.

At the conclusion of his address Director General De Young declared the exposition open and Mrs. De Young pressed the electric button which set the enormous machinery of the exposition in motion amid the shouts of the great gathering, the waving of thousands of flags and banners, salutes of a battery of artillery and the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the five bands. The vast audience, wildly enthusiastic, gave vent to their feelings in cheer after cheer. Such a scene has never before been witnessed in Golden Gate park and it was some time before comparative quiet was restored for the concluding exercises.

At night the buildings were illuminated and the opening day festivities closed with a grand pyrotechnic display.

Official figures from midwinter headquarters show that 73,248 persons passed through the turnstiles Saturday, opening day. Of this number over 60,000 persons paid the regular admission fee of fifty cents.

FOR HALF A MILLION.

Bemis & Co., Texas Lumber Dealers, Defraud Many Banks.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 30.—Indictments returned by the United States grand jury expose wholesale frauds on banks which will probably reach $500,000. The persons charged with the swindle are J. H. Bemis and one of his sons, both of the lumber firm of J. H. Bemis & Co., of Jefferson, Tex.

The National bank of commerce of this city brought the case before the grand jury, this institution being caught for $60,000. The First national bank of Kansas City and banks in Chicago, New Haven, Louisville, Cincinnati, Galveston, Houston and Dallas, Tex.; Memphis, Tenn.; St. Louis, Omaha and the east are also interested. Capiases are now in the hands of United States Marshal Stewart for the arrest of the Bemises. The fraud was worked through "accommodation drafts." J. H. Bemis & Co., of Jefferson, drew these drafts on other firms which Bemis controlled or was supposed to control, due in thirty, sixty or ninety days.

The firm on which the draft was drawn would accept it. The draft was drawn up so as to make the amount of odd dollars and cents for the purpose of giving it the appearance of a draft drawn for the sale or purchase of lumber in the ordinary course of business.

These drafts were issued several months ago when the firms had good credit, but were really in failing circumstances. The next step was to go to the banks, and under false representations get the drafts cashed. About the time the drafts came due the firms failed.

The fact that the drafts were time and not sight drafts excused the lack of attaching bills of lading, as is usually done in sight drafts, and covered up the fraud in the misrepresentation that the paper was for the account sale of lumber, and not for accommodation.

CAUGHT AFTER A FIGHT.

One Outlaw and One Officer Killed and Two Others Shot.

BIG STONE GAP, Va., Jan. 30.—Three Virginia officers tracked the two Fleming brothers, outlaws, from this county to West Virginia, and found them Thursday in a store in Boggs, a lonely little mountain town more than 50 miles from a railroad. Cal Fleming was shot instantly through the brain. Heenan, his brother, shot each of the three officers. He was shot in the chin and had the fingers of his right hand shot away. He shot Ed Hall through the back of the head, Doc Swindell through the neck and John Branham through the right lung. Then he gave up. Cal Fleming lived long enough to ask to be brought back home, but was buried where he was killed. Heenan is in jail at Nicholasville, and will probably recover. Branham is dead and buried near Cal Fleming. Hall and Swindell, who are badly wounded, came home Saturday.

ENJOINED FROM STRIKING.

Judge Dundy Makes an Order Reducing Union Pacific Wages.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 30.—Union Pacific labor circles were stirred to their depths Sunday when an order of Judge Dundy reducing wages on the system was made public. All employes in every department are affected by the cut, which amounts to nearly 10 per cent. The action of the court was not altogether a surprise, although most of the men had thought the wage question would not be disturbed. Judge Dundy not only enjoined the men from striking, but cut their pay and ordered them to continue work at the reduced pay.

BATH SWEPT BY FIRE.

Business Part of the Maine Town Lie in Ruins.

BATH, Me., Jan. 30.—A large portion of the business section of the city was laid in ruins by fire on Sunday. The waterworks system proved useless, there having been a big break in the main pipe Saturday night, and without water the fire department was powerless to check the spread of the flames. As a result the Sagadahoc house, two national banks, a savings bank and a dozen stores were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at between $500,000 and $750,000, an which there is insurance of one-half.

BIG SAVING ON PENSIONS.

Payments Will Aggregate $15,000,000 Less Than Last Year.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The pension appropriation bill was reported from the appropriation committee and bears the imprint of the new commissioner's knife. The annual appropriation for payment of pensions is $15,000,000 less than last year. Commissioner Lochren stated to the committee that the payment of pensions would be less than $140,000,000 this year. He also stated that the number of original applications would be less this year than last.

Davitt Denies It.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Michael Davitt in a letter addressed to J. S. Mullen, of this city, and dated at Ballybrack, County Dublin, denies that he ever saw the suppressed letters of Le Caron which gave the names of his three assistants. He says that he is convinced that Dr. Cronin was not one of Le Caron's confederates. He denies that he ever referred to Dr. Cronin as a spy.

ROSINA VOKES.

The Popular Actress Dies at Her Devonshire Home.

A Victim to the Ravages of Consumption —Her Last American Engagement Cut Short by Disease— Her Career.

DEATH OF MISS VOKES.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Rosina Vokes, the well-known English actress, died at Torquay, Devonshire, on Saturday. A few months ago she was compelled by ill-health, while making a tour of the United States, to break up her company. She returned to England in the hope that her health would be benefited, but her hopes were not realized.

Consumption made its appearance about fifteen months ago and from that time she declined rapidly. Her death was painless. Her husband and a number of relatives were present when she breathed her last.

Mrs. Cecil Clay, better known to the American and British public as Rosini Vokes, although her actual maiden name was Theodosia Vokes, was one of "The Vokes Family," which in 1851 was called "The Vokes Children," and made its debut at the Operetta house in Edinburgh. The company consisted of Fawden, Frederick, Mortimer, Jessie, Victoria and Rosina. The success of that combination is so well known that it is unnecessary to enumerate in detail its history during a period extending over ten years. The Vokes family made their London debut at the Lyceum theater, December 26, 1868, in the pantomime of "Humpty Dumpty." The Vokes crossed the Atlantic ten times and their travels took them half over the world. It is worthy of note that the pieces in which they appeared were for the most part written and invented by themselves and many of the incidents presented were simply illustrations of droll events and adventures that they had met with during their travels. "Fun in a Fog," for instance, was based on the incidents of their journey across the plains with the ill-fated Custer.

On marrying Rosina Vokes retired from the stage, but returned to it after a short absence. She organized a company of her own and appeared as a star, playing many successful engagements in Great Britain and America. Her last appearance was in Chicago, in November, 1893, when she played at Hooley's in "Maid Marian," "Dream Faces," "The Circus Rider" and other comedies. She was ill at the time and it was announced that she was about to retire from the stage permanently on account of her failing health.

BADLY SCARED.

Riotous Miners in Pennsylvania Have Lost Their Courage.

MANSFIELD, Pa., Jan. 31.—Nine Hungarians went to Foster's gun store at Bridgeville Monday afternoon and demanded ammunition. On being refused they threatened to demolish the store. They then left, and fifty men arriving with Winchesters pursued them, capturing three. The latter were armed with revolvers.

In the Tom's run and the Painter's run districts there is no sign of immediate trouble. The 100 deputies have complete control, and are not meeting with the slightest resistance. The rioters have come to a realization of the seriousness of their work and are hiding in every corner. The deputies went from house to house and thoroughly searched for the guilty parties. The deputies were divided into arresting squads, and, with their weapons ready for any resistance, visited the different places where the rioters were thought to be.

About fifty arrests have been made so far. The arresting squads brought their prisoners to Roseville, where they were handcuffed in pairs and marched to the train with four deputies with Winchester rifles as guards. A large crowd gathered to see them off and many threats were made. At Mansfield hundreds of persons followed them to the lock-up. The prisoners were badly frightened lest they should be attacked. They made up one of the roughest-looking gangs of men ever seen in that section. Not one of them is an American citizen and only a few can talk or understand English. Most of those arrested are miners from the Roseville and Hazletine mines or Tom's run. They were found in the attics, cellars, out-houses, under beds, in closets, and several had cut open bedticks and had crawled in.

Heidelberg, a hamlet 1 mile from Woodville, is said to be the general headquarters of the rioters. Three groups of anarchists are located here and it is known that the rioters have much ammunition stored away. Deputies are searching the houses to find it. They have been unable to locate the ringleaders and it is believed they are hiding in the hills.

TWO BROTHERS KILLED.

Fatal Accidents Which Caused the Death of John and James Dill.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 31.—At Hoods, Etawah county, Johnny Dill, aged 6 years, was accidentally struck on the head by an ax in the hands of his elder brother, James, and killed. Two hours afterward James was riding a mule. The mule got frightened and ran away. James became entangled in the bridle and was dragged 200 or 300 yards. He was picked up unconscious and died Saturday morning.

ROBBERS LOOT A BANK VAULT.

ELLAVILLE, Ga., Jan. 31.—The Planters' bank of this city was broken open by burglars Sunday night and $7,500 taken. The work was done scientifically and it is evident that the perpetrators were professionals. Dogs were put on the trail of two strange men who were seen journeying toward Preston. They had been in the neighborhood two days and disappeared Sunday night.

ENDED FATALLY.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Jan. 31.—William Milhollin, a veteran contractor, died Saturday evening under peculiar circumstances. He had been ill with the grippe, but for seventy hours before his death he was in terrible agony from incessant hiccoughing and all efforts of physicians failed to relieve him. He was entirely conscious and attempted to control the hiccoughing, but it was useless. He became weaker and weaker and finally died from sheer exhaustion.

Relief for Depositors.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The comptroller of the currency has declared a first dividend of 25 per cent. to the creditors of the insolvent Columbia national bank of Chicago on claims amounting to $860,012, and a third dividend, 15 per cent., First national bank of Kansas City, Kan., making in all 55 per cent. on claims amounting to $102,513.

A NEW ENGLAND MIRACLE

A Railroad Engineer Relates His Experience.

The Wonderful Story Told by Fred C. Vose and His Mother-in-Law to a Reporter of the Boston Herald—Both Are Restored After Years of Agony.

[From the Boston Herald.]

The vast health-giving results already attributed by the newspapers throughout this country and Canada to Dr. Williams' "Pink Pills for Pale People" have been recently supplemented by the cases of two confirmed invalids in one household in a New England town. The names of these people are Fred C. Vose, his wife and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Oliver C. Holt, of Peterboro, members of the same household.

To the Herald reporter who was sent to investigate his remarkable cure Mr. Vose said: "I am 37 years old, and have been railroading for the Fitchburg for 15 years. Since boyhood I have been troubled with a weak stomach. For the past 7 years I have suffered terribly and constantly. My stomach would not retain food; my head ached constantly and was so dizzy I could scarcely stand; my eyes were blurred; I had a bad heartburn and my breath was offensive. I had physicians, but they failed to help me. My appetite gave out, and four years ago I developed palpitation of the heart, which seriously affected my breathing. Had terrible pains in my back and had to make water many times a day. I finally developed rheumatic signs and couldn't sleep nights. If I lay down my heart would go pit-a-pat at a great rate, and many nights I did not close my eyes at all. I was broken down in body and discouraged in spirit, when some time in February last, I got a couple of boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished the first box I noticed that the palpitation of my heart, which had bothered me so that I couldn't breathe at times, began to improve. I saw that in going to my home on the hill from the depot, which was previously an awful task, my heart did not beat so violently and I had more breath when I reached the house. After the second and third boxes I grew better in every other respect. My stomach became stronger, the gas belching was not so bad, my appetite and digestion improved, and my sleep became nearly natural and undisturbed. I have continued taking the pills three times a day ever since last March, and to-day I am feeling better than at any time during the last eight years. I can confidently and conscientiously say that they have done me more good, and their good effects are more permanent, than any medicine I have ever taken. My rheumatic pains in legs and hands are all gone. The pains in the small of my back, which were so bad at times that I couldn't stand up straight, have nearly all vanished, and I find my kidneys are well regulated by them. This is an effect not claimed for the pills in the circular, but in my case they brought it about. I am feeling 100 per cent. better in every shape and manner."

The reporter next saw Mrs. Holt, who said: "I am 57 years old, and for 14 years past I have had an intermittent heart trouble. Three years ago I had nervous prostration, by which my heart trouble was increased so badly that I had to lie down most of the time. My stomach also gave out, and I had continual and intense pain from the back of my neck to the end of my backbone. In 14 weeks I spent $300 for doctor bills and medicines, but my health continued so miserable that I gave up doctoring in despair. I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills last winter, and the first box made me feel ever so much better. I have taken the pills since February, with the result of stopping entirely the pain in the spine and in the region of the liver. My stomach is again normal, and the palpitation of the heart has troubled me but three times since I commenced the pills."

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specifit for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ont.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

THE pope has issued an encyclical enjoining upon Catholics the study of the Scriptures.

THERE are in Italy, according to the estimate of Dr. J. Murray Mitchell, 60,000 Evangelical Christians in a population of 30,000,000, or 1 in 500.

THE Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church at its recent meeting at St. Paul appropriated $310,000 for the coming year.

IN 1892 the Beirut press printed 19,676,743 pages, of which there were 8,382,000 pages of Scripture. Since it was founded it has printed 485,107,350. That means that for every single working hour of 1892 that press gave out 6,286 pages of Christian literature. And since its founding in 1823 it has poured forth 2,053 pages for every working hour of every working day in every year.—Missionary Review.

"Sweet Sixteen."

The beautiful calendars sent out by C. I. Hood & Co., of Lowell, Mass., have attracted much attention in all parts of the country. The calendar bears the head of a lovely girl, "sweet sixteen," lithographed in delicate colors. Over eight millions of these calendars were made. C. I. Hood & Co., as is well known, are the proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is everywhere a household word on account of the wonderful cures that have been effected by means of this great blood purifier. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made in a building which is the largest in the world devoted to the business of making a medicine, and this great industry has been built up within a few years by the absolute merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

SHE MARRIED BOTH.

BY JULIUS WEDEKIND.

[Copyright, 1894, by the Author.]

Mr. Wilberforce Trott, lawyer, of the firm of Lunkenstein & Trott, was the picture of prosperity and contentment, sitting in his office in the most luxuriously-appointed office building in town. His private office, where we find him, was a poem in hard wood and stucco, but its spic and span cleanliness denoted its newness. In fact, Mr. Trott had not always occupied quarters like these. Indeed, as he sat in his rotary chair puffing the smoke from a colorado maduro with a sultanic air of limitless wealth, Mr. Trott's elegant surroundings bore the gloss of a week's existence and not a day more. Not that he wore the new conditions with any the less grace on that account, however. Anyone, to have observed him critically, would have acknowledged the aristocratic repose of his regular features and the exquisite taste of his fashionable apparel. But the fact remains that Mr. Trott, a week before, had been a struggling young attorney with an inchoate practice and an unreliable sequence as to meals.

As there are no such things as fairy wands to change hungry lawyers into well-fed barristers, the truth may as well be admitted—Mr. Trott had hit the races. The ten thousand dollar retainer from a delightfully mysterious corporation in the west, which he assured his friends was the basis of his new magnificence, was in reality a winning of that amount on a cluster of horses upon whose combined speed he had made a bet after the manner current among the pool rooms. For all this, Mr. Trott was by no means a "sport." He was unquestionably a young man of talent who would be heard from one of these days, and who knew what it meant to "toil terribly."

The reason that we do not find him at work with his books directly concerns our interest in this lucky youth. For Mr. Trott's thoughts were floating back over five long years of professional vicissitudes, as dreamily as the smoke that curled aloft over his blonde head, until they rested upon a face of dark, healthy beauty, surmounted by curling locks as black as the tender eyes whose depths he had once celebrated in a feeble quatrain with the opinion that they rivaled the glories of a starlit night. He had truly been desperately in love with Alice Monroe, a fact that had been fully appreciated by that dainty little despot, who not only accepted all his attentions in the way of theater tickets, balls and bouquets, but pouted for more. All of these things had been the despair of poor young Mr. Trott, who wondered how he was ever to marry a girl whose trivial expenses per week exceeded his income at the bar per month. To render the situation even more poignant, she repeatedly declared that the man she married would have to have money. In her heartless opinion love in a cottage was unqualified bosh. Often he had exclaimed to the four walls of his dingy room:

On every fine Sunday afternoon, for her sweet sake, he had hired a yellow cart and a large black horse with a stride like the course of empire, whose tan-colored harness was the swellest thing that graced the Clifton drives on that day. The swellest? Alas, no. There was one rig that excelled that of Mr. Trott, even as the white glory of the diamond excels the dull gray of the topaz. And in that rig sat the bete noir of Mr. Trott—the one being on earth whom he hated with the cheerful, cordial hate of a lover for a rival.

The name of this party was Messerschmidt, a cool, imperturbable gentleman, the unruffled impudence of whose small, steady eyes had taken Mr. Trott's measure on the night that they had first met in Miss Monroe's parlor, and were ever since noting the details of Mr. Trott's suit with a stolid Teutonic amusement that betokened their owner's confidence in his own supremacy. As a rival, Mr. Messerschmidt was, indeed, peculiarly dangerous in the possession of a gigantic soap factory, inherited from a simple-minded parent who would have turned in his grave with astonishment had he seen what his son had done for the old concern since its founder's death, for the plant had undergone the mysterious process known only to the subtle promoter who capitalizes a small enterprise into a colossal one by the hocus-pocus of the "street."

Never in his life had Mr. Trott claimed the society of the capricious Miss Monroe on one of those bright afternoons but what Mr. Messerschmidt could be seen in his gorgeous turnout, riding insolently alongside or else taking the road, in a manner even more insolent, just in front. This gentleman's presence was not only obtruded upon them at these times, but he seemed to divine by a diabolical instinct just when and where to find them together. If Mr. Trott took Miss Monroe to the theater, the other party invariably had a seat nearby, which he would change for one immediately next to the couple, and engage them in conversation with a mild, insinuating assurance that used to irritate the young lawyer to the point of insanity. When he took Miss Monroe to the art museum—a favorite ruse of his to get her away from possible intruders—his ubiquitous rival was there also, suave, calm, entertaining, agonizing!

As his mind dwelt on these scenes Mr. Trott's visage lost some of its tranquil contentment on this morning as he sat in the office dreaming of what might have been, for he rather blamed Providence for having failed to place him on the supreme bench at twenty-three.

Accidentally his eyes rested on the polished oak cover of his typewriter in the corner, and he smiled bitterly at the associations conjured up by that implement of modern correspondence. Well he remembered a certain morning when Miss Monroe took it into her capricious head to visit him at his palatial quarters—as he had represented them to her in order to keep pace with the plutocratic Messerschmidt. As usual, that worthy was tagging placidly at her side.

Mr. Trott shuddered with retrospective horror as he thought of the hideous catastrophe of that visit, and pictured the scene before him. There was Alice, as blooming and richly handsome as a Jacqueminot rose, radiating a delicate perfume, like the flower itself, which fairly intoxicated the young lawyer. The complaisant and phlegmatic Messerschmidt nearby wore his usual smile of vacant urbanity, but in his small gray eye shone the light of a demoniacal triumph; and as he watched Alice sweep the office with her keen eyes and gather in every shabby detail of the office, from the bare floor to the dilapidated desks, he visibly exulted at the disgust in her countenance. Then she spoke. She had just dropped in to pay her respects as she passed the building. She was delighted to find his quarters so comfortable-looking! Then Messerschmidt sniffed at the atmosphere like a warhorse that scents the aroma of battle afar. Unerringly those little gray eyes fastened upon the cover of Mr. Trott's typewriter.

"What make of typewriter do you prefer, Mr. Trott?" asked Mr. Messerschmidt, innocently raising the cover and disclosing—not a typewriter—but the meager and unsightly remains of some corned beef and cabbage on which Mr. Trott had been dining.

"WHAT MAKE OF TYPEWRITER DO YOU PREFER?"

That had been five years ago, and Mr. Trott had not tasted a dish of corned beef and cabbage since. The odor of that barbarous mixture used thereafter to make him both sick at his stomach and sick at heart—he, who had once been so fond of it!

Messerschmidt married her that fall, but Mr. Trott had never called upon them since the event.

II.

Suddenly he threw his cigar from him and exclaimed:

"Hang it! What do I care? I'll hunt her up and call for the sole purpose of showing her that—"

His vehemence came to an abrupt stop. He started erect and listened, like a man transfixed, to the sound of a soft, anxious voice in the other office, that was inquiring:

"Is this a lawyer's office?"

"Yes, madam," returned Mr. Trott's partner, affably. "What can we do for you?"

"I wish to get a divorce," said a voice, more timidly still, and trembling on the verge of tears. "My husband is a wretch—"

Mr. Trott interrupted the speech, radiant, precipitate, his voice vibrating with unmistakable joy.

"Alice!" he cried, as he opened the door with a rush.

The young lady rose in astonishment at the figure before her.

"Is it possible?" she faltered.

He took her hand and drew her inside his office with gentle force, leaving his mystified partner staring speechlessly at the vacated chair.

"What has he been doing to you, Alice?" cried Mr. Trott, holding her hand and looking as vindictive as a Corsican.

"He's been deserting me," she said, with a faint hysterical laugh, but with a relieved look in her eyes, like a hunted fawn that has found a protector.

"What, that harmless-looking moon-faced idiot—"

—"Was a horrid, despicable scoundrel!" retorted Mrs. Messerschmidt, with appropriate tact.

And then while Mr. Trott listened—and held her hand—she poured forth a tale of such heartrending cruelty that he wept also.

"Did you ever hear anything like it, Wilber?" she asked, appealingly, contracting his name as she used to do when he had pleased her.

Mr. Trott replied with an impulsive embrace and unexpected kiss.

"But I am Mrs. Messerschmidt!" she exclaimed, in demure alarm, drawing from him.

"That's so!" said Mr. Trott, soberly. "The disability will have to be removed before a prior courtship can be reinstated—ahem! By the way, Alice, have you seen my new typewriter?" uncovering the machine with a mischievous grin. "What do you think of it?"

"It doesn't look as palatable as the old one, Wilber," she said, laughing, and drying her tears.

"But it isn't nearly as embarrassing," he returned. "Your petition for absolute divorce shall be prepared upon it—without alimony!—for I wouldn't touch a cent of his oleaginous money, confound him!"

"Just as you say, Wilber," she said resignedly, dropping her eyes with a blush.

"Pisness is pooming!"

"PUDD'NHEAD WILSON."

How a Queer Genius Came to be Known by That Name.

He was a homely, freckled, sandy-haired young fellow, with an intelligent blue eye that had frankness and comradeship in it, and a covert twinkle of a pleasant sort. But for an unfortunate remark of his, he would no doubt have entered at once upon a successful career at Dawson's Landing. But he made his fatal remark the first day he spent in the village, and it "gaged" him. He had just made the acquaintance of a group of citizens when an invisible dog began to yelp and snarl and howl, and make himself very comprehensively disagreeable, whereupon young Wilson said, much as one who is thinking aloud:

"I wish I owned half of that dog."

"Why?" somebody asked.

"Because I would kill my half."

The group searched his face with curiosity, with anxiety even, but found no light there, no expression that they could read. They fell away from him as from something uncanny, and went into privacy to discuss him. One said:

"'Pears to be a fool."

"'Pears?" said another. "Is, I reckon you better say"

"Said he wished he owned half of the dog, the idiot," said a third. "What did he reckon would become of the other half if he killed his half? Do you reckon he thought it would live?"

"Why, he must have thought it unless he is the downrightest fool in the world; because if he hadn't thought it, he would have wanted to own the whole dog, knowing that if he killed his half and the other half died, he would be responsible for that half just the same as if he had killed that half instead of his own. Don't it look that way to you, gents?"

"Yes, it does, if he owned one-half of the general dog, it would be so; if he owned one end of the dog and another person owned the other end, it would be so, just the same; particularly in the first case, because if you kill one-half of a general dog there ain't any man that can tell whose half it was, but if he owned one end of the dog, maybe he could kill his end of it and——"

"No, he couldn't either; he couldn't and not be responsible if the other end died, which it would. In my opinion the man ain't in his right mind."

"In my opinion he hain't got any mind."

No. 3 said: "Well, he's a tummox, anyway."

"That's what he is," said No. 4; "he's a labrick—just a Simon-pure labrick, if ever there was one."

"Yes, sir, he's a dam fool, that's the way I put him up," said No. 5. "Anybody can think different that wants to, but those are my sentiments."

"I'm with you, gentlemen," said No. 6. "Perfect jackass—yes, and it ain't going too far to say he is a pudd'nhead. If he ain't a pudd'nhead, I ain't no judge, that's all."

Mr. Wilson stood elected. The incident was told all over the town, and gravely discussed by everybody. Within a week he had lost his first name; Pudd'nhead took its place. In time he came to be liked, and well liked, too; but by that time the nickname had got well stuck on, and it stayed. That first day's verdict made him a fool, and he was not able to get it set aside, or even modified. The nickname soon ceased to carry any harsh or unfriendly feeling with it, but it held its place, and was to continue to hold its place for twenty long years.—Mark Twain, in Century.

LIFE HISTORY OF CORALS.

The Process by Which Massive Great Islands are Created.

To Reaumur is due the improving legend that coral islands are built by the accumulated efforts of an industrious insect. Pliny, in like manner, quite gravely records the ancient belief that a little sucker fish could hold a ship against the impelling violence of a storm, and apostrophizes the deplorable vanity of mankind when confronted with the fact that their armored vessels could be held bound and immovable by a little fish six inches long! The wonders of nature do not really need these imaginary embellishments.

The life history of corals is sufficiently remarkable in its sober facts. Like other animals, they produce eggs, from which free-swimming young are hatched. But they have two other methods of propagation—namely, gemnation and fissiparity. Between animals and plants in general there is no distinction which makes itself more prominent and obtrusive than the free individual life of the one and the fixed colonial life of the other. By gemnation, the successive putting forth of buds, an industrious vegetable, starting with a seed of insignificant size, may build a massive structure, some times four hundred feet in height, the resultant of individuals almost innumerable, belonging to hundreds or thousands of generations, all of them the living members of a single family, successively sacrificing their individuality to promote the common good and to share it.

This procedure in plant life is illustrated by an endless diversity of examples, great and small. Whatever exceptions there may be, this, to the ordinary observer, is the customary, the commonplace, the distinctive habit in the vegetable kingdom. Thus it came to pass that men did not believe their own eyes when they met with animals behaving in a way that seemed to be the patent right of vegetables. The isolated sea anemone was well understood, but creatures of precisely similar structure, which took to sprouting out of stems and branches, had to be incontinently handed over to the botanist.—Edinburgh Review.

How He Worked It.

Bass—That was a cute idea of Sellem's.

Cass—What was that?

"He had a big lot of sofa cushions on hand, and they didn't sell worth a cent. He tried all sorts of ways to work them off. Finally, he told his wife in strictest confidence, and made her swear never to tell a soul, that he had a few cushions that were better and cheaper than any ever before sold in the city. He said he wanted to keep the thing secret to avoid a rush."

"Well?"

"His store was packed with women for two weeks and he sold his cushions and twice as many more."—Boston Transcript.

—Mary Stuart of Scotland was not a beauty. She had across eyes, and to save the trouble of having her hair dressed cut it off close to her head and wore a wig. When, after her death, the executioners lifted her head to show it to the people the wig came off and displayed a close-cropped skull covered with gray hair.

THE WORLD'S WOMEN.

THE New Zealand women, who have just voted for the first time, are said to have given their support to candidates professing Christianity and advocating temperance.

IN Germany there is a popular superstition that if a young woman buries a drop of her blood under a rosebush she is sure to be thereafter endowed with rosy cheeks.

"THE Enemy of Woman" is the title of a new review which an ungallant Vienna editor has undertaken in order to redeem man from the thralldom of the tyrannical sex.

STATISTICS of bankruptcy in England show that during the first half of this year 40 per cent. more farmers became bankrupt than two years ago, the average being one farmer for every working day in the year.

THERE was considerable excitement at Juneau and Sitka, Alaska, a week or two since, occasioned by the discovery of rich free gold quartz on Chekagoff island, in the Aleutian archipelago. Despite the closing in of winter many miners are flocking to the new camp.

THE promoters of the National Free Labor association, encouraged by the success of a conference in London, have undertaken to organize a free labor movement in the leading ports and industrial centers of the country. The movement is a general one against the despotism of the new unionism.

IN an important meeting of clergymen and others in London to consider the question of a "living wage," or the "Christian organization of industry," as an example of the discussion Canon Scott Holland moved that "the Christian organization of labor involved the maintenance of a living wage."

$5,800 from Ten Acres. [K]

A. M. Lamb, a market gardener in Pennsylvania, cleared $5,800 on five acres of cabbage and five acres of onions. The reason of this, he says, was because Salzer's seeds are so extremely early and wondrously productive. Lightning Cabbage and King of the Earliest Onions he had in the market three weeks ahead of any other home-grown sorts, and consequently received fancy prices. Salzer sends 35 packages earliest vegetable seed, sufficient for a family, for $1, postpaid.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND IT with 6c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and a trial package of "Get There, Eli," the sixteen-day radish.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. After Seventy-Five Years.

NOTTAWA, Mich., Oct. 29th, 1893.

I had been troubled with ERYSIPELAS and RHEUMATISM in my left limb for two years, so bad that I was unable to walk without the help of a crutch, until about four months ago, when I was urged to try a bottle of Dr. Ward's Gen-De-Can-Dra for the Blood. After taking the blood medicine, I found such great relief, that I got another bottle. I can positively say that it has done me more good than any medicine I ever took. I am now in my seventy-fifth year, and able to do my housework, without the help of my crutch or anybody. MRS. J. COX.

DELANO DIARY

--Lent commences next Wednesday.

--The Watertown Milling Company shipped a carload of flour from this place yesterday.

Among those receiving pensions this week we noticed the name of John B. Parvin, of Monticello.

—A party of about 20 came over from Buffalo Tuesday evening to attend the band entertainment.

--A "dime social" was held at the residence of N. K. Coffin last evening. A pleasant time is reported.

—Three children of Peter Johnson in Franklin township are having diphtheria. The premises are quarantinen.

—"That Preacher." The best thing I ever heard on that line—with good and practical results for the people and congregation.—W. F. Fritze, Pastor Central German M. E. Church, Minneapolis, Minn.

—Nick Frank's baby had the head of one bone of the fore arm displaced yesterday by her sister lifting her up from the floor by the hands. It is an easy matter sometimes to dislocate or break the bones of little ones.

—Examinations have been carried on in the public schools here this week. Owing to the long vacation had, we understand, the state examinations will be postponed for a few weeks. The schools seem to be doing well this winter.

--Officers and committeemen, of the Washington's Birth Day Association are requested to meet at the post office on Tuesday February 6th, at 2 p m. sharp, to prepare a program and make other arrangments for observing Washington's birthday anniversary in an appropriate manner.

—The "Old Folks Dance" which was to have been held Jan. 1st, but was postponed on account of the diphtheria scare, will be held on Tuesday evening next, at the city hall. Admission will be 50 cents, the proceeds to be given to the poor. Each lady is to provide a lunch and a basket supper will be held in the hall. A good time will certainly be had.

—A couple of dozen of young gentlemen have been considerably frightened this week for fear they would be arrested for disturbing the peace a few nights since. Some of them deny being there but appeared to think the Justice might take the same view as another who sentenced one who had proven that he was home in bed, saying: "never mind you would have been there if you could." Don't lose any more sleep, boys, Van says he knows nothing of it.

—The Cornet Band concert and entertainment on Tuesday evening was well attended. Quite a number from Buffalo, Rockford and Montrose being present. The audience speak in highest praise of the improvement in the playing by the band. They even say it was not disagreeable to remain in the hall while the entire band played. The balance of the entertainment is colled creditable for older hands at the business.

—Little Gracie, the two and a half years old child of Mr. and Mrs. John Ball, met with a fearful accident on Saturday resulting in its death on Tuesday night. On account of the diphtheria scare at this place Mrs. B., with little Gracie went to stop with her father, Mr. Carl Dolf, at Buffalo. A kettle of boiling water was placed on the floor for scrubbing purposes; little Gracie fell with her hands in the kettle, overturning it and scalding her in such a manner as to cause her death a few days after. The remains were brought here on Friday for burial, the funeral being held at the M. E. church. Mr. and Mrs. Ball have the sympathy of the community in this the hour of affliction.

—Rev. Thomas McCleary, of St. Paul, Minn, will lecture in Delano, on Thursday evening, Feb'y 8th. Subject, "That Preacher."

--On Tuesday Mrs. John O'Leary grew rapidly worse, and her death seemed sure, and as a last resort trachaotomy was performed in hopes of saving a mother to her three little children but she only lived about three hours after the operation. She was taken to Rockford for burial. John and the children have gone to Minneapolis for the present to be with his mother's family.

--At the regular meeting of the K. of P. lodge last Monday evening G. W. Rogers, District Dupty G. C., representing the grand lodge was present and assisted is installing the following officers:

A. W. Wittman, C. C.
F. L. Sherer, V. C.
S. A. Cutter, P.
C. Gast, M. W.
H. W. Haines, K. R. S.
W. D. Young, M. A.
L. W. Terry, M. F.
M. Carlton, M. E.
J. P. Chance, I. G.
C. Sturman, O. G.

Personals.

Mrs. J. C. Hitz, of St. Paul, visited Delano over Sunday.

Misses Hannah and Fannie O'Leary, of Minneapolis, visited Delano this week.

Rev. Frank R. Millspaugh, of Minneapolis, held Episcopal services here on Monday.

W. Anderson, of Watertown, made Delano a business visit on Monday.

Auditor Lamson, of the County Seat, made us a pleasant visit Tuesday evening.

John McGary dropped in the other day and told us he still believed in Jackson and Jefferson Democracy.

The ponderous proportions of Squire Mapes of Montrose, cast a shadow on our streets on Tuesday evening.

Miss Nancy Conroy, of White Bear Lake, is the guest of C. J. Buckley and family.

Miss Julia Steffes goes to the cities today to look up some of the latest styles in dress-making.

O. L. Billings is transacting business at Long Lake today.

Through the kindness of Prof. Shaw we were furnished with a typewritten copy of the transactions of the Howard Lake Institute. See another column.

Ex-Sheriff John C. Nugent seems as likely as any one to recieve the appointment of U. S Marshal for this district. John would fill the bill.

County Cullings.

The County Commissioners held a session this week. We have, as yet, received no typewritten report.

Senator Eaton thinks three-fourths of the Legislators failed to read the lunacy law before voting for it. Why didn't he tell us what the Senate Judiciary Committee were about while time and money were being wasted in passing bills only to be declared unconstitutional by the courts.

Our county commissioners are apt to purchase a type writer and a steam heating outfit for the Court House, notwithstanding the howl of the republican papers about hard times they brought on to us themselves.

John Kelly, of Waverly, has been favorably mentioned as a candidate for County Commissioner from the Fourth district. John knows his business and will attend to it, in an honest and punctual manner if elected.

The Editor of the Buffalo Journal promised to send us a lot of New York Tribunes to help educate us. We have not yet received them. Perhaps his supply has been cut off since he ackeled the State central committee in such shape.

The Howard Lake Herald came out last week with its long deferred write up of the village, by Iowa's Long haired editor, Geo. Williams. George still sticks to it that we have "seen the locomotive climb chamoise-like over the cliffs and the very crest of the Rocky mountains. The village business write up is the work of local talent and is very good.

Among Our Exchanges.

We learn that the Little Falls Electric Light and Water Co. have secured the services of Ed Farnham, who has accepted a responsible position in the establishment.—Waverly Tribune.

We are pleased to note that John Kelly, who has been under the weather for the past week, is now able to be out again. We have heard it intimated in circles usually well informed that the nomination of John Kelly for county commissioner of this district—if "Barks is willin" —among the possibilities that the future has in store for us.—Waverly Tribune.

The North, the organ of the Scandi avian people, published in the English language, has been sold to the publishers of the Loyal, American, the anti-Catholic paper. The two will be consolidated, and the office will be removed to the fifth flore of the Tribune building. The new paper will represant the A. P. A and the Order of Orangemen.—Minneapolis Journal.

Insurance companies are canceling policies in small towns in all portions of the state. Where they take any risks at all it is at a greatly advanced rate. What's the matter of small towns forming companies and doing their own insuring? It could be done cheaper, more satisfactory and would lead to less litigation We believe it worthy of a fair and impartial trial.—Milaca Times.

There were no services at the Methodist church last Sunday owing to the illness of the pastor, Rev. John Doran. It was then hoped that Mr. Doran's illness might not be serious, but on Monday his condition was such that his family at Sauk Rapids was notified, and a son came from there and remained with his father several days. Mr. Doran is suffering from Erysipelas, and members of his congregation are giving him good care and nursing at his room at the Foley. But their is no disguising the fact that his condition is somewhat alarming.—Atkin Age.

At the very time Mr. Donnelly was urging upon the alliance the nomination of S. M. Owen for governor. Mr. Owen was usging his friends to oppose Mr. Donnelly's re-election as president of the state alliance! We are sorry to hear this, for the man who demanded Mr. Donnelly's head was the man who sold out to the republicans and opposed Mr. Owen's election for governor in 1890. "Fair play is a pretty thing." Nothing is to be gained, for the cause, by the proscription of any of our earnest and honest workers. Let us have peace and brotherlp feeling all around.—Representative.

Bond Cure for Hard Times.

Good morning Mr. Editor, Mushroom Penny Politician says, mighty hard times these days, and so it is. Too bad we did not kepp those other fellows in office and this great calamity would not have come upon us.

"Yes," says the tramp "our business is greatly demoralized, worth hardly 10 cents on the dollar, but we will make a scape goat of them democrat people and they must bear the sins of the whole people or nation." It is natural to human nature to have someone to blame for all the misfortunes in life indiyidually, collectively or otherwise.

Frogs never croak in running water. It seems now days the devil is the largest stock holder in church and state, his annual dividends being bond computation. But we believe and hope for the best. Hope is good to breakfast on but poor diet for supper. It seems things are not just what they should be in this day and age of the world.

This country had an extra session of Congress last August, for the purpose of restoring confidence and fixing up things, but did not do the business for which they claim it was intended. And yet many claim the higher the tariff the better it is for the people, especially the poor man. This may be good policy, but is certainly very poor economy. The McKinley bill puts a high protective duty on most all the articles the poor man consumes. But very often the masses of the people are enslaved to opinions especially in political matters. Then it behooves us to cast off the shackles of opinion and walk resolutely before the world guided by a grounded opinion of our own. But oftimes you might as well try to manufacture a cyclone out of a tin whistle as to turn a man in his politics.

Our Secretary of the Treasury, J. G. Carlisle, has attempted to relieve the financial condition of this country by issuing $50,000,000 of Government bonds; what a farce, five per cent bonds to run for ten years, redeemable in coin (that means gold) interest payable quarterly in coin (gold) at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. These bonds to be on sale by 12 o'clock noon, Feb'y 1st 1894. It states they will be sold for gold only. Where will the gold come from? The bankers of Wall street can go to the sub-Treasurer at New York, present $50,000,000 in green backs which is redeemable in gold, take the $50,000,000 of gold out of the reveune fund, buy up the $50,000,000 and we do not have any more money than we had before, but $50,000,000 more in debt. It helps nobody but the bond holder and national banks. Why not issue Treasury notes direct from the U. S. Treasury. Cut down appropriations on harbors, public buildings, etc., until we catch up with our financial condition then we will be all right again. The Senate Finance committee and John G. Carlisle have now done the thing up fine. But where is the Priest that will grant them absolution should this thing go into effect. Did we believe in ghosts, spooks and hobgoblins. We should think their midnight slumbers would be greatly disturbed by the Phantoms of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln. It seems that a little 4th of July oratory is needed just now to warm up the blood of the country. Is this free America we have so long boasted of? Have the poor men of this country no rights that the millionair is bound to respect. It seems not. Then repeat the words of Wm. Lloyd Garrison when he says the constitution of the United States is a covenant with death and an agreement with hell and the flag a floating lie. "Ye have sold yourselves for naught and ye shall be damned without money." If money is to run this administration then we say it is not democratic. It seems it takes a long time to do a little business when the country is demanding relief all the while.

It makes no matter whether we be democrat, republican, Jew or Gentile if we only do the fair thing for our silver and our constituence. Our country is sick and in need of a physician. They who are whole need not a physician but they who are sick.

List of Patents.

Granted to Minnesota inventors this week. Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C:

E. P. Caldwell, Minneapolis, Rail joint; H. L. Day, Minneapolis, Dust or shavings collector: L. C. Farmer, Minneapolis, Pendulum scale; J. M. Lloyd, Luverne, Book-support and leaf-holder; J. K. Miller Minneapolis, Dust-collector; J. P. Pederson, Kenyon, Printing-press; T. Prushey, Minneapolis Flexible metal fire-escape. F. R. and R. Wheelan, Minneapolis, Capo tasto.

The Country Doctor's Success.

There is plenty of reason for the country doctor's wonderful success in practice. He is a strong believer in the efficacy of drugs, and knows about all there is to know about them. He is thoroughly posted concerning the new remedies, and doesn't hesitate to try them when he meets a knotty case.

Then, too, he suffers less from substitution; in some cases he owns his own drug store, in others he handles his own medicines; both serve to increase his familiarity with and confidence in the action of his remedies.

He must also do his own thinking. He cannot refer his patient to this, that or the other specialist, and if in a multitude of counsellors there is wisdom, there is also often confusion. Taking it all in all, there is no better insormed or trustworthy man in the profession the country doctor.—Medical Brief.

For Governmental Money.

The Enquirer has been, and is, the avowed enemy of all banks of issue, both state and national. We hold that it is the exclusive function of the Federal Government to supply everything that circulates as money, and that it has no right to relegate that function to individuals, associations or corporations. It is a dangerous power to intrust to dealers in money and currency, and unconsistent with the business of legitimate banking. They can control, as they have done, the financial legislation of the Government; they can create a panic at will, and, having no souls, they will inflict calamities upon the people if their gains will be promoted by such infliction.

Mr. Chase, the author of the national banking system, said before he departed that it was a mistake of his life. All will remember that President Hayes vetoed the bill to refund the national debt at a lower rate of interest giving as his reason that the national bank was opposed to it, and that they threatened to withdraw their circulation, which would result in universal disasters. This is not the only instance where they have shown their hand to influence legislation.-Cincinnatti Enquirer.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH YOURSELF.

Young man, the books will bid you read
The seers from Kant to Plato,
But get acquainted with yourself,
You are no small pototo,
And though you swing a blacksmith's sledge,
Or dig within the trenches,
Hold up your head with those that sit
Upon the highes benchest,
Oh, read the sages of the world
And let your wisdom win you;
But get acquainted with your-self
And find what you've got in you.

In modest arrogance of soul
Make your own valuation,
Then slowely make the sluggard world
Accept your estimation
Go get acquainted with yourself,
Before your leaf is yellow;
You'll find the man beneath your hat
Is something of a fellow,
Then stir him out and prod him up
Before his force has faluted
Go, get acquainted with yourself
Then make the world acquainted.

Then trust the man beneath your hat,
And when you come to know him,
You,ll find a fellow fit to grace
A novel or a poem
Go get acquainted with yourself,
You'll find that very few are,
For tasks for which you wer designed,
A better man than you are.
Young man, the books will bid you read
The seers from Kant to Plato,
But get acquainted with yourself
You are no small potato.
—Sam Walter Foss, in Boston Globe.

MORTON WILKINSON, Ex-United States Senator from Minnesota died last week at his home in Wells.

DULUTH elected a republican ticket this time. The Populist and Democrats fused and failed. It is better to advocate right principles and stand firmly by them. Some of the Duluth Democrats seem to think tariff on iron ore might be a good thing. Smallpox has also made its appearence there.

THE recent decision of the Supreme Court seems to have made it possible for the Asylum authorties to turn out all the patients sent under the new law, to shift for themselves. Attorney General Childs' opinion is given that they are not entitled to transportation home. It is a pretty hard state of affairs when laws are made so lax as to be set aside in this manner. And still harder for several hundred insane patients, to be turned out of house and home in the middle of winter to get home the best way they can.

FROM Public Health we learn that the Governor appointed as the new board Drs. Franklin Staples of Winona; W. H. Leonard and K. Hoegh, of Minneapolis; Edward Boeckman and Perry H. Millard, of St. Paul; Charles F. McComb, of Duluth; W. J. Mayo of Rochester; and W. L Beebe, of St. Cloud. The board organized by re-electing Dr. Franklin Staples President, and Dr. Hewitt as permanent Secretary. The office of the board is to be moved to St. Paul as soon as suitable quarters can be obtained. A move in the right direction.

Why Didn't Donnelly Answer the Question?

In our issue of January 12 we took occasion to point out the inconsistency of the Alliance party in adopting a resolution condemning the Supreme Court of Minnesota for deciding that the Farmers' Elevator Law was unconstitutional; and then passing another one "inviting" this same Court to apply to the Capitol Bill the same rule that they had already condemned. We received from a correspondent in a neighboring town, who is a sympathizer with honest reform movements, a communication, which appeared in the next issue of this paper in which occurred the following "Your criticism on some of the resolutions adopted at the annual session of the Farmer's Alliance are timely. The resolutions are not above criticism." Several others informed us that we were right. So we were somewhat surprised on receiving the Representative, the Alliance organ of St. Paul, last week, to see an article signed "I. D." which is the signature the President of the Alliance makes use of in his communications to that paper, with the scare headline "A Buffalo Rampant." and to find that the author of Cæsar's Column was after us. Of course we felt somewhat knocked out; but, on analyzing the article we concluded the Sage had a very poor case and was only trying a bluff on us country folks, to see if he could not frighten us into silence. Below we give our analysis; the President of the Alliance's remarks in small type our criticisms in larger letters:

Mr. John Hillstrom of Maple Plain sends us a clipping from the Buffalo Gazette, and is distressed over it, and a-ks us to reply to it. The Yankee truly observed,—it strains a man dreadfully to kick agin nothin'." There is nothing to reply to.

The Sage's best hold being in cyphers of course the article must be reduced to that denomination the first thing. Next the discoverer of this little discrepency to the public, and those green enough to see it the same way must be annihilated at once; for this purpose a self-instituted lunacy board consisting wholy and solely of the ponderosity known as I. D. aforesaid; did then and there proceed to declare the said John Hillstrom "distressed" about "nothin" and further that anyone who saw anything wrong in the resolutions afore mentioned, especially the Editor of the BUFFALO GAZETTE, were profound imbeciles. And yet the question "Is not this an absurd way to go to work to reform the country?" is not answered.

The profound imbecil says the alliance convention denounced the Supreme court for its decision in the State Elevator case; and then asked it to apply the same rule to the new State Capitol act. Why not?

The opulent reformer does not deny the fact. The resolutions are published on the second page of the BUFFALO GAZETTE of January 19, and speak for themselves. Look them over for yourselves and carefully form your own opinion concerning them; and unless you can conscientiously see it the same way don't accept any body else's I. Ds. The wily politician next tries the Yankee dodge on us of answering one question by asking another and asks very innocently, apparently, "Why not?" And still Mr. Hillstrom is left to grope in darkness so far as the oracle of the Ryan is concerned.

Even bad laws should apply uniformly; and "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." If the reasoning of the court, however false, knocked out a measure dear to the farmers' hearts, why should it not knock out another measure to which the farmers are opposed. Or is the bad law to stand only against the farmers, and to be ignored when it would help them? Will the Buffalo of the Gazette get up on his hind legs long enough to answer that question;—and then "dry up." I. D.

And now the great source of information seems to have exhausted its I. D., and still Mr. John Hillstrom of Maple Plain has recieved no answer to the question, "Is not this an absurd way to go to work to reform the country." And we have been called upon in a manner not very creditable even to I. Donnelly for an answer to another question. While we feel that we would be justified in quoting from an old school book:

"Alter your tones my little man" and letting it go at that we believe it is our privilege and duty to defend the right as against the wrong and that we owe it to our readers to do so to the best of our feeble ability whether the President of the Alliance's I. Ds. coincide with our views or not. As for our criticism it was that a reform party ought not to condemn the rulings of the Supreme Court of the state and then resolve to "invite" that Supreme Court to "apply" the same rule in their behalf. If while traveling the Sage on arising in the morning were to find that during the night some man had through "reasoning" "however false" driven off with his horse we don't believe he would go to work and "invite" that man to use the "same rule" to deprive some other man of his means of locomotion but would seek another way of completing his journey; of course with an eye out for his lost animal. We don't for a moment think the Alliance President meant it so, nor do we expect to do what the last line of the article in the Representative says: 'and then "dry up" I. D.'

THE Electional law has been repealed by Congress and the Senate, and now awaits Grover Cleveland's signature.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3, 1894.

President Cleveland was one of the first, outside of his Congressional colleagues, to extend congratulations to Chairman Wilson on the success of his tariff fight in the House. The congratulations were telephoned from the White House to the Capital. Mr. Wilson is not a man of robust health at the best, and the continuous and arduous labor which he has performed since becoming chairman of the Ways and Means Committee has almost completely broken him down. He has earned the rest and he will probably leave Washington to spend several weeks in some quiet place. Other democrats at times allowed the noise of the opposition to raise doubts of the passage of the bill, but Mr. Willson has been calmly confident from the day the bill was reported from the committee that it would pass without being materially changed. The result shows that his confidence was built upon a firm foundation. The belief that men elected to congress on a tariff reform issue would not allow themselves to be stampeded by manufactured sentiment against tariff reform.

Represenitive Dingly, of Maine, was the only republican who succeeded in getting an amendment to the tariff bill adopted. He moved that the bond peroid be provided in the whiskey clause of the internal revenue section of the bill should be three years, as at present, instead of eight years as reported from the committee, and the House voted with him.

Democratic opposition to the income tax amendment, which at one time seemed strong enough to endanger the whole bill, begun to grow less and less early in the week and a day or two before the vote was taken had grown so insignificant that it was no longer considered a factor in the fight. If the democratic Senators will do as well as the democrats in the House have done tariff reform will soon be here, but indications do not point to speedy action by the Senate.

Upon evidence presented by Judge Durand, of Mich. who has been acting as special counsel in the smuggling cases, the Treasury department has decided to push the indictment against Whitney L. Boise, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Oregon for complicity in the illegal landing of Chinese in that State. Judge Durand brought with him to Washington the chief of a band of coast smugglers who has turned state's evidence. He it was who furnished the evidence against Boise, and he implicates several other prominant republicans of the state who will be prosecuted if sufficient corroborative evidence can be secured.

So many lies have been told concerning the absence of senator McPherson, of New Jersey, who was recently orderd south by his physician because of a severe bronchial affection, that he has returned to Washington and announced he would resume his duties, although his doctor says he will endanger his life by so doing. McPherson's friends, among whom are President Cleveland, are trying to persuade him not to try to resume his work until his health gets better. I can state on the very higest authority that no break has taken place in the pleasant relations which have existed for years between Senator's McPherson and Voorhees, and that all stories to the contrary are maliciously false.

The debate on the Tucker bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws will close in the Senate next Tuesday and the bill will be passed, notwithstanding the silly stories which have been widely circulated attributing indifference on the part of democratic Senators towards the bill. Not one word has been said by a democrat, to indicate that a single democratic Senator will vote against the bill or remain away to keep from voting upon it. Neither is their any truth in the statement that Mr. Cleveland has expressed opposition to the bill.

Secretary Carlisle accepted bids yesterday for the $50,000,000 of bonds, in accordance with the official announcement recently made, notwithstanding the futile attempt of the Knights of Labor to prevent the issue by obtaining an injunction from the courts and the twaddle from Senators Allen, Peffer, Stewart and Hoar about the illegality of their issue. There is some talk in favor of the Billy resolution, which has been favorably reported to the House, being rushed through as a hint to Secretary Carlisle that the money received for the bonds shall only be used to strengthen the gold reserve funds, but as Representative McClary has secured the right of way for the next three days in the House for his Hawaiian resolution it is clear that Mr. Bailey's resolution cannot come up until the expiration of that time. Senator Sherman strongly favors Secretary Carlisle's action, but other republicans are trying to make trouble, hoping to gain partisan advantage.

THE Senate has sustained President Cleveland's Hawaiian policy.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

BY HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

Aside from fruit products heretofore mentioned there is something done here in the way of raising corn and vegetables. The pumpkin and squash species grow extremely large. In the Hollenbeck hotel, Los Angeles, two large specimens of this species were on exhibition which were labeled as having grown on one vine, giving respective weights as 181 and 231 pounds, near by was a sweet potato weighing about 8 pounds. Ordinary potatoes as they appear in dining halls are no larger or better in flavor, if as good, than elsewhere, and likewise other vegetables. This part of the country seems to be short on dairying and poultry industries. Those products are shipped here from other localities. High priced lands in the matter of pasturage render dairying almost out the question. It is claimed that poultry raising is practicable in the canyons of the mountains being more free from parasites and disease than in the valleys. The peculiar vegetation of the mountains seem to be suitable for fowls but is not adaptable for pasturage for cattle, the growth being rather meager at best.

In my letter published January 12, your compositor was evidently puzzled to decipher some of my scrawling chirography. He made me say of the part of this country that I was trying to describe that its surface sloped with "quiet descent," etc., instead of "gentle descent" as I intended to say. While slopes and descents of individuals under peculiar circumstances are sometimes of the quiescent kind, it is almost grim sarcasm to apply the term at present to California "dirt" while slumbering in the reactionery effects of the collapse of the greatest boom that this land of booms ever experienced. While there are sales of real estate here at present at prices which people east of the Rockies would regard as being almost exorbitant I am informed that the demand for land and prices paid at present are insignificant compared with those existing in time of the boom of a few years ago. The lowest priced farm land that I have heard of near Monrovia was offered at about $125 per acre, which included irrigation privileges, the land having buildings and a commencement of a growth of fruit trees.

Monrovia is situated on the south side and at the foot of the Sierra Madre range of mountains and southeasterly of Wilson's Peak. It is an incorporated city containing about 500 inhabitants, with territory sufficient to permit its increase of population to several thousand. The limits of the corporation contain several sections of land which territory is platted into streets and blocks, the latter being subdivided into lots of the usual city or village dimentions at the business part and into one acre lots toward the outer portions of the territory, each block containing five acres. The entire territory is underlaid with water mains and pipes connecting with a reservoir situated at the foot of Sierra Madre range and supplied with water absorbed by, and remaining at the crests of those mountains in the shape of snow, so that each subdivision, lot or block has its water supply for dwellings and irrigating purposes for the cultivation of small tracts, on which are to be seen at present orange, lemon, fig, apricot, apple pear and other fruit trees, constituting small orchards from which the owners receive considerable revenue among which neat cottages and comforts of home are found as well as the golden fruit. The orange and lemon crop are now being harvested and shipped. In the Los Angeles market Navel oranges sell at $2.25 and $2.50 and seedling oranges $1 50 and $1 75 per box. Lemons, uncured, $2 and $2 25, cured 25 cents per box additional. The quantity of oranges and lemons per tree depend on the trees size and age. In my estimate given in the letter to friend McGary I had the eight year old tree in my eye and I think my estimate as to one box per tree of that age was not far wrong on an average, although sanguine Californians claim a larger yield which may be possible when the trees have received the best of attention. Older trees, of 12 to 15 years will bear several boxes especially when the branches extending from trunks set 20 feet apart meet. The small tracts in Monrovia with some improvements, excepting buildings range from two to three hundred dollars per acre in prices asked including water privileges. These improvements consist in the land being under cultivation and perhaps some orange trees of about two years growth.

It was rather flattering, I confess, as suggested in your locals to have my initials taken by one of your readers for those of Rev. B. F. Crary, who besides being chaplain in the Minnesota 3d Reg., during the war, was an early superintendent of public instruction for the state of Minnesota.

Farmers' Institute at Howard Lake.

W. L. Carlyle then described the process of dehorning, he thought the best age for de-horning was when the calves were about six months old. Clippers did the work more accurately and readily than the saw. Dehorning may affect the milking qualities of the cow for a week. He answered many other questions bearing on de-horning. Mr. Carlyle then described the method of ventilating stables.

Prof. Shaw opened the meeting on Tuesday by speaking on the advantages of basement barns. He showed a plan of a basement barn which he had built on his own farm some eight or nine years ago. It was 110 feel long and 60 feet wide with 20 foot posts. There was a basement under the whole of it. He had wintered 85 head of cattle in this basement, and the food required for them was kept in the part over the basement. One man was able to take care of all the animals in the winter. He dwelt with much minuteness upon the advantages of basement barns, and hoped the farmers would give this the most careful attention. When barns are to be built they should keep in view the fact that some time they might desire to put a basement under it, and should therefore plan it accordingly. He had gone last evening some three miles away and had been shown a nice basement barn by the farmer who said that it had cost him $400 to build it, but now he would not be without it for a thousand dollars.

W. L. Caryle gave a lesson in butter making. He said that in butter making three essentials were necessary. The first was a good man to take care of the cows, and good cows to make the milk, and then good milk, these were important in the order named. The average temperature for churning in about 62 degrees, but the temperature varied with the season, with the cows and with the condition of the cream, and these things should be carefully studied. The cream should be strained before being churned to remove certain curdy matters that would get into the butter. A perforated tin bottomed strain is used. Butter color may be added to suit the market. It was better to feed the food dry than in the form of slop, and the meal should be put on cut food. Ensilage was an excellent food for milch cows. The corn was in good condition, when the ears were just past the stage for boiling. The cream in this instance was too thick for churning in so small a churn. Water was added to thin it at a temperature of 64 degrees. It would be better to leave a little skim milk in the cream. The milk should, where it is practicable, be set in deep water at a temperature of 45 degrees. The churning should stop when the butter appears the size of pinpoints. Then cold water is added to wash the butter, one pint to every gallon of cream. A little salt may be added to the water.

W. Somerville said that apples could be raised in Minnesota, at least in many parts of the state. Many failures in the past had arisen of not knowing how to take care of them. The drough of summer was as dangerous and more so than the cold of winter. The Duchess of Oldenburg had given him good results. It ripened its wood before the coming of winter. He sets trees a rod apart, and sets them deep in light soil. He cultivates them for three years without mulching them in the summer. He then mulches with straw. In winter he mulches to render them later in coming into bloom. The trees should be headed low. He prefers a northern slope.

Theodore Louis said that the feeding of swine commenced with the pregant sow. He preferred breeding from matured rather than young sows. Breeding from young sows had a tendency, if continued, to lesson size, to impare maturity and to decrease vigor. Corn, barley and rye are not good food for a brood sow. The aim should be to have litters come as near together as possible. It is easier caring for them at the time of farrowing, they feed better together and they take the market better. He showed the dangers of feeding too freely while the pigs are quite young. He showed the necessity of giving careful attention to the price of the kinds of food fed. Young pigs may be taught to eat by sprinkling a few oats on the floor. He scalds food but does not boil it. For a sow nursing her pigs, equal parts of shorts, bran and corn meal may be fed, and a little oil meal may be added. He showed how to prevent the diarrhoea in pigs.

Dr. J. C. Curryer spoke on educating the colt. He said that the horse was an animal that we could least well afford to do without. He thought the education of the colt should commence before he was a day old. It should be demonstrated to him that you are stronger than he is. Every part of his body should be handled to let him know that you are not going to hurt him. He may also be further coaxed by giving him sugar. The doctor then showed how the colt should be halter broken. He also showed how horses could be broken from pulling on the halter. He showed how weanling colts should be educated to driving. The way of doing this was carefully described in detail and illustrated by appropriate drawings. If colts were thus trained when young they never forgot the lessons thus given. He answered a number of questions on the management of colts.

Prof. Shaw then answered a number of questions on raising sheep. He thought there was a great future before the sheep industry of Minnesota. This was a grand time to go into raising sheep they were so low in price. Money could be made at fattening sheep if properly done. In fattening sheep the work should be completed before the sheep are beyond the age of twelve months. The various speakers answered a number of questions on the various subjects which belonged to each. Some other questions were also discussed bearing upon important subjects.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

Reforms which can be accomplished without a struggle, it can be taken for granted are not worth one.

The highest philanthropy does not consist in almsgiving, but in producing a condition where that sort of charity will not be necessary.

"Prohibition has been tried and is a failure" says a minister. On the same line of reasoning, salvation has been tried and is a failure, because all men will not accept it.

There are 42,000 tramps in our country. A careful investigation shows over half of that number have trades and 1,189 were able to read and write, Liquor and shiftlessness were the chief elements of their downfall.

Lady Henry Somerset said in a late speach "Men and women are not temperance reformers simply because they cease to drink intoxicating liquors, but because they have guaged the evils, have seen the misery, and have heard the cry of captive millions, and have determined to see terms enacted that shall put rich and poor upon one level, and shall consider the welfare of the people, before the pocketbook of the publican." In speaking of how she was drawn into the temperance work she says, she had seen two children, a boy and a girl, sip wine at their father's table and heard the guests laugh at the precocious little ones. She had seen the boy go to the drunkard's grave when twenty four years old. "But what of the girl?" she went on. "The girl was happily married, and became the mother of lovely children. The fatal seed had been sown however, The youg mother became a slave to strong drink. I prayed with her and wept with her. She asked me one day if I would be a total abstainer if she would renounce strong drink forever. The proposition was a strange one and I asked twenty four hours for consideration. When I saw her again she said it was too late, I felt that if I had given her promptly the answer she would have received, she might have been saved. Today her home is shattered, but I resolved to do in the future all I could for God and humanity."

"The Woman's Cause Is Man's."

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

There is no other proof so great of the good understanding that subsists between men and women as the voluntary relinquishment by men of powers hitherto unshared. It is the highest tribute that has ever been paid to woman, and yet one of the most unobserved, that not a school has ever been opened to her except by the votes of men, nor has she been admitted to any learned profession, or to an enlarged sphere in the line of honorable occupation except by men; nor has any woman been made a voter, in greater or less degree either in church or state save by the free permission of "creation's lords." They have clothed us with all the power that they themselves possess, save in the highest ranges, ecclesiasticial and governmental. No magnanimity analogous to this has been witnessed since history began. But there are two considerations which, on their own testimony, have moved men to this bestowment of power upon the gentle comrade at their side. First, men are conscious of being abundantly able to take care of themselves and their interests; and secondly, they have learned by centuries of observation and experience that, as a class, women (being the mothers of men) are, if possible, more concerned to do them justice than they are to do justice to themselves. every woman is the daughter of a man, and every man is the son of a woman. In this organic law is grounded the unalterable faith that cheers me on my way while I seek to multiply the topics of interest and thought between men and women, that home-life may be enriched and home-happiness rendered more stable. There are three strands in a stout cable that binds together the members of a an ideal household—religon, affection and intellectual sympathy. The first and second have held their own througout the ages past; the third this age is forming, and no truer or more enduring tie has ever yet been forged.

Dr. Mitchell is of the opinion that the principal cause for this increase of nerve disease is our climate and justifies his opionion by the results of his own observations and those of other scientists.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

TUESDAY, Jan. 30.—In the senate at the conclusion of the financial discussion the bill to repeal the federal election laws was considered and it was decided that a vote on the measure should be taken on the 6th. In the house the income tax bill was discussed at length.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31.—In the senate the entire time was consumed in the discussion of the resolution of Senator Stewart, of Nevada, declaring that the secretary of the treasury has no power to issue the bonds for which bids have been invited. In the house the income-tax bill was placed as a rider upon the tariff bill by a vote of 175 to 56. The entire day was spent in the consideration of amendments which were offered to the various internal-revenue features. An amendment increasing the tax on whisky from 90 cents to $1 was adopted.

THURSDAY, Feb. 1.—The time in the senate was occupied in discussing the legality of the bond issue. In the house the Wilson tariff bill, with the income tax incorporated, was passed by a vote of 204 to 140. All the republican members and eighteen democrats and one populist voted against the measure.

FRIDAY, Feb. 2.—In the senate notice was given of amendments to the house tariff bill providing for the coinage of silver bullion for the benefit of owners and repealing all acts authorizing the issuing of bonds. The legality of the recent bond issue was discussed. Adjourned to the 5th. In the house a resoulution was favorably reported to amend the constitution so as to limit the terms of office of the judges of the supreme and superior courts to ten years. The debate on the Hawaiian matter began under a special order, which will bring it to a vote on the 5th.

SATURDAY, Feb. 3.—There was no session in the senate. In the house the time was mostly occupied in discussing Hawaiian affairs. Mr. Bland introduced a bill providing for the coinage of silver bullion in the treasury.

LATER NEWS.

TWO burglars were shot and seriously wounded by Mrs. Duehrer at St. Louis, Mo., the 5th. The burglars entered the room where Mrs. Duehrer was asleep with a Miss Maggie Sanford, who lives with her. The men attempted to choke the two women, but met with a terrible resistance. Mrs. Duehrer drew a revolver from beneath her pillow and shot one of the robbers through the left breast. She then turned the weapon at Miss Sanford's assailant, who was armed with a hatchet, and fired, but missed her aim. A second shot hit him in the back. Both men escaped.

THE remains of George W. Childs were, the 5th, laid at rest in the Drexel mausoleum in Woodland cemetery, Philadelphia, beside those of his closest friend and business companion, Anthony J. Drexel, who died but a few months ago. The funeral was the largest ever seen in that city. The services were held at 1 o'clock in St. James' Protestant Episcopal church, which is directly opposite the residence of the dead philanthropist at Walnut and 22d streets, and of which Mr. Childs had been an honored member and vestryman for many years.

Narrow Escape of a Negro Fiend from Lynching.

A Mob, Led by a Woman, Places a Rope Around His Neck Three Times, and He Is Only Saved at the Pistol's Point.

EXCITING SCENE IN INDIANA.

LEBANON, Ind., Feb. 7.—In a lonely and secluded spot 5 miles east of this city Mrs. Akers, a widow with four small children, ekes out an honest living on a forty-acre farm. She is connected with some of the best of Boone county's citizens and her character is above reproach. About midnight Saturday night she heard some one around her house, and to add to her fright a long pole was thrust through the window and an attempt was made to knock from a stand the only light burning. She seized the light when Frank Hall, a big burly negro, who lived with his parents near her home, jumped through the window. She screamed, and he drew a revolver, pointing it at her head, and demanded that she be quiet. He then took her children, locked them in a room and assaulted their mother. When he was ready to leave Mrs. Akers was more dead than alive.

He had been gone about an hour when, taking her baby in her arms, Mrs. Akers dragged herself as best she could about a half mile to her brother's house and related the occurrence. Her brother alarmed the neighborhood and traced Hall through the snow to his home and stood guard around his father's house until the sheriff was notified to come and arrest the criminal. The sheriff arrived about 3 o'clock Sunday morning and brought Hall to jail. He denied his guilt, claiming that he had been at home since 9 o'clock. His father said that he came in after midnight.

Threats of lynching were so strong that the prisoner was taken to Indianapolis Sunday afternoon and brought here Monday morning for a preliminary hearing. At an early hour the farmers from around the city congregated in squads and some yelled at the top of their voices to storm the jail. A leader got out in the street and beckoned for followers. He marched to the jail. Prosecutor Dutch hastened over and mounting the jail steps pleaded for better counsel. He said he would prosecute the negro and do all he could to see that he was given the full penalty, and for the sake of Boone county's fair name to disperse. This speech had a temporary effect and the crowd did disperse partially. At noon the prisoner had not had a preliminary trial through fear of the crowd, as it was thought best not to remove Hall. A secret trial was held in the jail, which resulted in Hall being bound over to court in the sum of $500.

About 1 o'clock the victim of the crime came in accompanied by a Mrs. Taylor. She gave out to the crowd that she would be their leader and that Hall should die. Mrs. Taylor had a strong hempen rope about 20 feet long, one end of which she was trying to form into a hangman's knot. She finally made a common slip-knot, and the women started for the jail. Just at this moment the sheriff had received orders from Judge Neal to bring Hall before him at once, and as the women approached the jail the prisoner, accompanied by three deputy sheriffs, came out. Somebody cried: "Hang him!" and the crowd lunged for Hall. The deputies drew their guns but failed to shoot.

Hall was pounced upon and pulled from the sheriff and way made for Mrs. Taylor, who came up and placed the loop over the negro's neck. Yell after yell of "Hang him! Hang him!" was heard, but by this time the citizens of the town came to his rescue. Charles Neal, the judge's son, weighing nearly 300 pounds, was among them. A tug of war was begun and the negro was pulled first one way and then another until he was completely fagged out. The rope was cut and again placed over his head; this was repeated another time, the crowd fighting over a distance of 300 feet, pulling the negro.

Finally the way was made clear for a space before the north courthouse entrance, and Hall was dragged in with his clothes nearly torn from him. The judge then demanded that enough men be deputized to restore quiet. The prisoner was ordered to stand, the affidavit was read and Hall pleaded guily. He was sentenced to twenty-one years in prison. The sheriff placed him in the judge's private room, where he was kept until 5 o'clock, when he was escorted to the train by 100 citizens, who had been sworn in by the sheriff.

When they started to the train the crowds were still gathered and cries of "Lynch him!" were heard again. One man made an effort to seize Hall, but Marshal Oden was too quick for him, striking him on the head and knocking him down. The crowd followed to the depot, and, while open threats were made, they lacked a leader. The train rolled in at 5:15, when the deputies boarded the train with their prisoner, bound for Michigan City.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 6.—Frank Hall, the Lebanon negro, arrived here at 7:30 Monday evening accompanied by Sheriff Troutman and seven deputies. He will be taken from here to the Michigan City penitentiary.

Head Chopped Off in a Quarrel.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 7.—James Davis and his son, farmers, quarreled with a neighbor, James Holtsclaw, at Barnard Monday. The younger Davis seized a rail and, striking Holtsclaw, crushed in the side of his face. Then the father picked up an ax and in three blows severed the fallen man's head from his body. No arrests have yet been made.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—The midwinter fair will be extended a month beyond the time first proposed. The managers have decided that as there was a delay of a month in opening it should be made up at the other end. The fair will not close until July 31 and probably not until August.

Gold Discovered in an Iowa Town.

OTTUMWA, Ia., Feb. 7.—Gold has been discovered at a point 1½ miles from this city. It is not present in paying quantities, though experts pronounce it of fine quality. The city is much excited over the discovery of the quartz.

TO IMPEACH JENKINS.

The Judge Under Fire for the Northern Pacific Injunction.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Congressman McGann, of Chicago, has introduced a resolution directing the judiciary committee of the house to investigate the charges made against Judge James G. Jenkins, of the Seventh circuit, and to report whether they warrant the presentment of articles of impeachment and also report what action is necessary to prevent a recurrence of the conditions now laid by the injunction upon the Northern Pacific and other railroad employes and labor organizations. The resolution has a long preamble reciting the right of employes to organize and strike and Judge Jenkins' order restraining the employes of the Northern Pacific from exercising this right. Mr. McGann made a fruitless attempt to secure immediate consideration for his resolutions.

When unanimous consent was refused for the consideration of the resolution it was referred to the judiciary committee. Mr. McGann says he will endeavor to have that committee report back the resolution at once. He would have secured immediate consideration of the resolution had it not been for the objection of Mr. Outhwaite (dem., O.). The latter explained later to Mr. McGann that the attendance in the house was too small for the consideration of such an important subject.

The crime for which Hart was tried was the murder of his two sisters, Mary and Nellie, on the afternoon of September 5 last. His act was undoubtedly the result of trouble in the family over the division of the estate left by John Hart, the father of the defendant, who committed suicide two years ago, leaving much valuable property.

HALF A MILLION IN ASHES.

Disastrous Fire at Savannah—Three Business Houses Burned.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 7.—A disastrous fire started at 10 a. m. Monday in the guano warehouse of Wilcox, Gibbs & Co., and from there spread to the Savannah Grocery company's six-story brick building, which was totally consumed. The store of the Savannah Grocery company was worth $180,000. It was insured for $130,000. The fire next extended to M. Ferst's wholesale grocery, three stories high. The stock is worth $150,000; insurance, $125,000. The building belongs to Wilcox, Gibbs & Co., and is valued at $100,000; insurance, $68,000. The guano warehouse is valued at $10,000.

The fire proves to be the largest since the great conflagration of April, 1889. The loss is estimated at nearly $500,000. The buildings destroyed front on Bay street and were built in 1889. The Savannah Grocery company's building was three stories high on Bay street, six stories on River street and ran back to the water front. Ferst's building was two stories on Bay street and three on the river front. The weather being very cold the fire was hard to get at. William Tilton was run over by the hook and ladder truck at the fire and dangerously hurt.

SHOT DEAD.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 7.—J. B. Wert, a prominent insurance man, and hitherto a leader in church circles, was shot dead Monday afternoon by G. N. Henson, president of the Citizens' Bank & Trust company, whose wife Wert is alleged to have led astray. Some time ago divorce procedings were begun by Henson but dropped Monday afternoon as Henson was coming down in an elevator of the Richardson building Wert stepped in. As they reached the first floor Henson opened fire, killing Wert at the second shot.

Father and Son Arrested.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 7. — A man named H. A. Hackett, and his son, E. R. Hackett, were arrested by Chief of Police McRae Monday afternoon. They are wanted at Farmington, Me., on a charge of stealing between $10,000 and $20,000 worth of bonds. They had $10,000 worth of the bonds in their possession and were attempting to negotiate them at the city banks.

Ex-Congressman Buckner Dead.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 7.—A Post Dispatch special from Mexico, Mo., says: Hon. A. H. Buckner died here Monday of a complication of diseases. He held many important offices during his life. He was representative from the Seventh Missouri district in the Forty-third, Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth congresses, voluntarily retiring in 1884.

Currency of the Country.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The paper currency outstanding January 31 was $1,167,040,231, less $1,060,000 estimated to have been destroyed by fire. This shows an increase of $6,884,166 during the month.

CYCLONE DOWN SOUTH.

It Demolishes a Church and Causes Four Deaths.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 6.—A destructive wind and rainstorm swept over Birmingham Saturday night. The damage done in the city was not great, but at Gate City, 6 miles from here, the Congregational church was blown down. At the time the Christian Endeavor society, with about fifty members, was holding a meeting in the church. Many of them were caught under the falling timbers.

Estella Jones was killed outright and Mrs. A. H. Pritchard, wife of the superintendent of the rolling mill, died Saturday night from her injuries, as did James Smith and James Williams, who were standing in the railroad station house near the church and carried with it when it was blown away. The station was blown against the church at the same time as the church fell and was covered with the debris. Eight others received injuries from which they will probably die. About thirty people were in the church and all received painful scratches, with one exception. This was Simon Tucker, who was conducting the services. Strange to say, debris fell all about him, but he was not touched.

So far as has been ascertained the Gate City church was a very flimsy structure. A fortunate circumstance was that the roof was lifted upon its side and fell into the church edgeways. This left a covered passage about 6 feet wide on the left of the church where most of the people were. Many of them were in a tomb, with an arch above them, protecting them from the flying beams.

Gate City is a scene of woe. It is a small town with a working population employed for the most part at the rolling mills. Saturday nights are their times for holding several church meetings. Only the violent weather prevented a large attendance at the church and a greater offering to the storm. The injured women not dead are reported in a state of nervous prostration from fright and many more deaths are expected.

At East Birmingham the Methodist church was blown down, but no one was in it at the time. The course of the hurricane was due west, and its path seems to have been but 2 miles wide. Birmingham, Columbus and Artesia, Miss., seem to have been the only towns struck. In other parts of his state there were rain and wind which knocked down telegraph poles and unroofed a few barns, but no loss of life occurred.

WINONA, Miss., Feb. .—The cyclone that passed over this county Saturday was especially severe at McAnnerney, a small town 6 miles west of here on the Georgia Pacific railroad. The railroad depot was lifted up bodily and thrown from its pillars, wrecking the building. The most serious damage so far reported was the destruction of the storehouse of P. W. Guenther. It was literally torn to pieces and scattered in every direction. Mrs. Guenther, who was alone in the store at the time, was seriously injured by the falling timbers, and her recovery is doubtful. Reports from the country are coming in slowly and indicating heavy property loss.

NO MORE SUFFERING.

Generous Responses Have Relieved the Unemployed in the Gogebic Range.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Feb. 6.—There is no longer any suffering or starvation in the Gogebic range, thanks to the appeal of Gov. Rich and the generous response thereto by the people of the state and the revival of activity of some of the leading mines. There is a sufficient supply of goods on hand to meet the wants of the poor until the middle of March. Up to date donations of food and clothing have been received to the value of nearly $100,000. When an appeal was first made for help there were not over 500 working at the mines of this city. Now there are 700 employed at the Norris, East Norris and Pabst and 100 at the New Port. Wages are much lower than a year ago. Miners then received $1.75 and $2.25 per day, and some as high as $3. They are now working for $1.35.

DEATH WAS SUSPICIOUS.

Mother of Annie Pixley Sets an Investigation on Foot.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—A searching investigation into the death of Annie Pixley is being made by Lawyer R. J. Haire, of 245 Broadway. Mrs. Pixley, mother of Annie Pixley, is at the bottom of the search. She does not believe her daughter's death in London November 8 last was due entirely to natural causes. She has repeatedly asked Robert Fulford, her son-in-law, for particulars regarding her daughter's last hours, but without avail. She says Miss Pixley left a will disposing of $250,000, but this has been kept back and not filed.

A Stay for Koetting.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 6.—The supreme court has granted a writ of error in the case of Banker Koetting, of Milwaukee, who was sentenced to five years in state prison for receiving a deposit in his bank when he knew it to be insolvent. The court also granted a stay of proceedings until the case can be reviewed, the prisoner to remain in the custody of the sheriff of Milwaukee county unless he furnishes bail to the amount of $15,000.

Killed in His Own Doorway.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 6.—Harry Carr, a young attorney, was shot and killed by burglars upon entering his home with his wife at midnight Saturday. He turned up the electric light in the hall and while lighting gas in the parlor a shot was fired, tearing off the top of his head. The burglars escaped. He was the son of one of the leading Colorado lawyers and has had a sensational career.

GOOD SEEDS

Purchasers of SEEDS, in looking through the columns of this paper will be in some doubt as to where to send for a CATALOGUE. To write to each house would involve a good deal of TIME as well as EXPENSE for postage. Many houses also (either directly or indirectly) charge from 8 to 25 cts. for their catalogue. We are very GLAD to SEND OURS to any BUYER of SEEDS, and are not afraid to have it contrasted with any Seed Catalogue published in America, for Beauty of Illustration, Taste in Design, or Originality of Matter. It is not from that standpoint, however, that we seek business. The true merit of our catalogue consists: 1st. in our endeavor to represent everything exactly as it is, without exaggeration in description or design. 2d, it is not merely a price list of Seeds. It contains valuable suggestions and information. Our notes on Oats, Carrots, Barley, Corn-Insurance, Field Peas, Rape, Lathyrus, Fodder Corn, Grasses, etc., afford food for thought. A beautiful colored plate of Prince Patrick, winner of the World's Fair Sweepstakes for the best Clydesdale horse in America, will interest every one interested in stock.

WHERE TO SEND FOR A CATALOGUE

100 Bushels Wheat from Two Acres.

This remarkable yield was reported by Frank Close, Minnesota, on two acres of Marvel Spring Wheat. Speaking of this wheat, this new sort takes the cake. It is the greatest cropping spring wheat in the world. Farmers who tried it in the past season believe seventy-five to one hundred bushels can be grown from one acre, and are going to get this yield for 1894. At such yield wheat pays at 30c a bushel. Salzer is the largest grower of vegetable and farm seed in the world. [K]

A Family Laxative.

Physicians are not inclined to recommend self medication to the laity. Yet there is one need which they are almost unable to supply. We refer to the "family laxative." The family physician is able to prescribe for the most complicated and obscure of maladies and yet is often puzzled to know just what to give when asked for a remedy which can be kept in the house for family use as a laxative, that shall be effective, free from danger, and not unpleasant to take. When absent on our summer vacation we were asked by four different parties, representing as many families, what we thought of the "Syrup of Figs." Not one word did we volunteer on the subject, and we were somewhat surprised to find that there was this small token of the very general use of that preparation. These parties said they derived more benefit from it and found it more pleasant to take than anything of the kind they had ever used. The simple question with them was, is it a dangerous compound? We informed them that its active ingredient was a preparation of senna, and that it was entirely free from danger. With this assurance they volunteered the information that they should continue to keep it in the house.

The therapeutical properties of senna are so well known that comment on this seems unnecessary. It might be well to notice, however, that Bartholow says it is "a very safe and serviceable cathartic," and that it is "highly prized as a remedy for constipation." He also makes the important observation that its use "is not followed by intestinal torpor and constipation."

The simple truth of the matter is, we have altogether too few preparations which we can recommend to our families as effective laxatives. But the California Fig Syrup company has one of the most desirable combinations for this purpose with which we are familiar. The Fig Syrup company gives to the profession the composition of this preparation, therefore there is no secret about it; the persons who use this laxative speak in the highest terms about it; and we are pleased to notice that a large number of physicians are prescribing it.

Viewed from the narrowest and most selfish standpoint the physician will lose nothing by recommending such a preparation as Syrup of Figs to his patients; while viewed from the highest standpoint of doing the best possible by those who place themselves in our care, we would say the profession cannot do better than give their indorsement to such a preparation.—American Analyst.

A LITTLE LOVE OF MINE.

I know a clever little maid
And sweet, who claims me for her knight,
And, I confess, I'm half afraid
She thinks whate'er I do is right.
The reason why I may not tell,
She's five, while I am twenty-nine,
And yet we love each other well,
I and this little love of mine.

She has a slender, lissome form,
Brown eyes where trust and truth abide,
A Cupid's mouth where kisses swarm.
Rose cheeks where dimples deftly hide,
A smile she borrowed from the skies
In some rare hour of summer time,
That's sweet or serious, glad or wise,
As suits this little love of mine.

La reine petite, the little queen,
Swift to forgive as to command,
The daintiest monarch ever seen,
She keeps her subjects well in hand,
Their happiness her only task.
She rules by childhood's right divine,
And richer kingdom none may ask
Than has this little love of mine.

The bonndary of her empire lies
In home's fair walls: her wealth untold,
The lovelight in her mother's eyes,
A treasure greater far than gold.
Aye, running over is her cup
With love's most rare and costly wine,
And she—she gayly drinks it up,
This charming little love of mine.

Fresh be the draught. I wish the hours
May bring her what she most may prize,
Soft, dewy dawns, and fragrant flowers,
And light winds calling to the skies;
But if my soul might win the bliss
To beg a boon from Father Time,
'Twould be to leave her as she is,
This dainty little love of mine.

A HUNTRESS OF INDIA.

Her Victorious Encounter with a Savage Man-Eater.

Mrs. A. W. Salmon, wife of an officer in the Indian police, enjoys the distinction of being one of the few ladies who have sought for and found a genuine man-eating tiger and laid the king of the jungle low, unaided by hunters of the sterner sex. Mrs. Salmon has had the pleasure of bagging two of these fierce brutes, and has also shot a panther and any number of smaller fry, such as jackals and deer.

Mrs. Salmon is at present visiting some old friends in San Francisco, and told a reporter the story of how she shot and killed a ten-foot man eater up in the Nilgherry hills in the Madras district.

"I first went to India in 1883, and during the seven years of my stay there I traveled nearly all the time. My husband was continually on the move, and I was always with him when possible.

"Before I went to India I passed two years in the western part of the United States, and I had learned to use a rifle pretty well, and I often tried my skill on jackals, deer and such animals as we met on our trips from place to place through the jungle. The hills around the sanitarium are covered with heavy brush and long grass, and as a rule are rather free from tigers, but that summer the heat was so great that, like ourselves, the big man-eaters sought the hills, and soon after we got settled down the natives began to bring in stories of tigers which had been seen in the vicinity.

"My favorite weapon was an American Winchester repeating rifle—one of those 44-caliber guns which seem to be a favorite with American hunters. Besides this I had a heavier rifle—also a Winchester—and it was with this rifle that I bagged my big tiger.

"During the summer of 1886 a party of my husband's friends, who were stopping at the Ootacamund sanitarium, 'way up in the Nilgherry hills, invited us up on a visit, and, as the heat in the lower country was simply terrific, we gladly accepted the invitation. Little was thought of the story until one morning when the mail carrier failed to appear, and when a little leather pouch in which he carried his letters and his stick of bells used to scare away wild animals in the jungle were found in the road about eight miles from the sanitarium, the gentlemen began to clean up their guns and talk tiger.

"Several hunting parties went out, but in spite of the most thorough search not a single tiger could be found, and then the excitement began to die down. The birthday of one of the gentlemen was celebrated by a picnic to a spot on the banks of the Pycarra river about twelve miles from the sanitarium, where we intended staying a week. The camp, which consisted of seven tents, was set up in the wildest spot imaginable, and we had a very pleasant time until the fourth day, when Capt. Rays, who went out gunning with another gentleman, had the misfortune to fall in a hullah and injure himself so badly that he could not get out. His companion hurried back to camp for assistance, and as the scene of the accident was not more than half a mile from the camp, all the gentlemen went along, leaving the ladies in care of a couple of men servants.

"Thinking that hot water might be required when Capt. Rays was brought to camp, one of the ladies sent Anthony, one of the servants, to the river, not more than one hundred yards away, to fill a water jar. A few moments after the servant had started we were startled by a wild cry for help, and then all was quiet again. Thinking that the man had been attacked by a jackal, I seized my heaviest gun and ran down the path toward the river. The low brush hid everything from my sight, until I had reached a point about twenty yards from the river, and there I saw something that made me tremble with fear.

"There on the bank of the river lay poor Anthony, and by his side, licking the blood from her paws, was a big tigress. For a few moments the sight fairly froze my blood, and then a sense of personal danger and the thought that I should be the next victim, filled my brain. Up to this time I forgot that I had a rifle in my hand, and then came a wild desire to try my skill, with the tigress as a target. All thought of what the result would be should I shoot and miss or only wound the big man-eater fled from my mind as I saw the terrible brute pick up the body of the servant, and, after taking a few steps, put it down again and eagerly lick the blood that flowed from the wounds made by its sharp, cruel teeth.

"As gently as possible I drew back the hammer and raised the rifle to my shoulder, and taking aim directly at the tigress' ear I pulled the trigger. As the report rang out it seemed to me as if a score of hungry tigers sprang at me from every rock and bush, but this passed away in an instant, and after reloading the rifle I took a look at the tigress. She was still stretched beside the body of the man, but the powerful limbs were motionless, and the head was resting on the man's thigh. That I had killed the animal at the first shot never entered my head, and I sent a couple more shots into its body as fast as could, but the first shot had settled the business.

"Upon making sure that the animal was dead I turned to walk back to the tents, when I heard the scream of a tiger cat, which seemed to come from some brush a short distance up the river. I am very foolish to say it, but I don't think a dozen tigers could have frightened me then, and I at once started toward the spot from where the cries came. At first I could see nothing, but after a close search, during which I took care not to venture too close to the bushes, I caught sight of a half-grown tiger cub crouching in the grass and eyeing me as if waiting for me to get a little closer. I was then rather too close for comfort, and I quickly raised the rifle and fired.

"The cub was facing me and the bullet glanced from its forehead and only partially stunned it. The tiger dropped to the ground flat and then rose to its feet, but instead of rushing for me, as I expected it to do, it began to walk away. This gave me a good show at its side and I fired again. The tiger fell, rose and then tried to rush at me, but its strength was gone, and before it had taken a dozen steps it sank to the ground and rolled over on its side.

"The noise of the shooting was heard by my husband, who hurried back to camp, wondering what was the matter. Learning from the other ladies that I had gone out alone and that the shooting had taken place down near the river, he hurried down and met me on the way. He was fairly horrified when I pointed to the dead cub and could hardly believe his eyes, but when I told him the mother had killed poor Anthony and that her body and that of our poor servant were lying on the bank of the river, he was speechless with surprise. He took me back to camp, and when the other gentleman arrived with Capt. Hays and the story of my encounter with two tigers was told it was decided to break camp at once and return to the sanitarium.

"Poor Anthony was buried, and the tigers were skinned and the trophies, with heads and claws attached, were sent to Madras and placed on exhibition. The notoriety I gained was anything but pleasant, and made me sorry that I had ever learned to handle a rifle.

"After that I got an invitation to join every hunting party got up in that part of the country and was bothered to death by newspaper men, who would persist in having me tell the story a dozen times a week.

"Six weeks after I bagged my tigers I, while out with a party got up by the sultan of Hyderabad, bagged a handsome panther and a spotted deer, and a few days after I received a check for one hundred and fifty rupees as a bounty for killing the tigers and the panther."—San Francisco Examiner.

THE RULING PASSION.

"A doctor in the course of his practice sees some queer things," said the old physician, leaning back in his chair. "I have come to believe in the saying of the ruling passion strong in death, and that Dickens' old Mrs. Skewton wanting rose-colored curtains for her bed as she lay dying was a picture true to life, for women think of fashion in the very embrace of the grim angel.

"Why, not long ago there was brought in an arm-chair to my office a woman, who had not three weeks to live, and her son tried to tell me the history of her disease, but she interrupted him at the outset by saying: 'Doctor, do you know where I can find a fashionable dressmaker?'

"But for the matter of that, men are nearly as bad; at least, one to whom I was called recently was. He was dying rapidly, and had only a few moments in which to settle his worldly affairs, and I was sitting by him administering stimulants in order to give him as long as possible.

"He called his nephew to him and whispered: 'John, don't forget my cowlick when I'm laid in my coffin. Get the old-fashioned bear's grease; that's the best and keeps it down longer.' At first I was puzzled to understand what he meant, but his nephew afterward explained that he was peculiarly sensitive about a disfiguring lock of hair that grew on one side of his brow.

"On another occasion I witnessed a scene where death was also stayed to settle an affair so trivial in the face of the final tragedy that had it not been death it would have been laughable. The patient was a man in good health suddenly stricken down with diphtheria, and in a few hours was choking to death. It seems that he had purchased several thousands of dollars' worth of United States bonds a few days before his illness and had deposited them somewhere with some bank or safe deposit company, but where he was now unable to tell. He tried to write it, but was overcome by such giddiness as he endeavored to shape the letters that he soon gave it up, and was soon as indifferent to them as to the rest of mundane affairs. He was gasping his last when his wife hurried into the room. She had been away on a visit, but had been telegraphed for and met at the station by a friend who related as a pathetic instance of her husband's care for her his trying to write the information regarding the bonds. Well, she did not stop to take off her wraps or bonnet, but came hastily into the room.

"I met her at the door and she threw up her hands as if in anguish. 'Oh, doctor, is he here still?'

"I told her 'yes,' as kindly as I could, knowing that it was only a question now of a second or two.

"She answered fervently: 'Thank God, I am not too late!' and ran to the bed. She evidently saw at a glance that he was going, and reaching down, she seized him by the shoulders and slightly shook him, as if to draw his attention. 'James, James, where are those bonds?' And yet that woman fainted at the grave and had the sympathy of the community."—N. Y. Telegram.

The Whistling Tree.

A species of acacia, which grows very abundantly in Nubia and Soudan, is also called the "whistling tree" by the natives. Its shoots are frequently, by the agencies of the larvæ of insects, distorted in shape, and swollen into a globular bladder from one to two inches in diameter. After the insect has emerged from a circular hole in the side of this swelling, the opening, played upon by the wind, becomes a musical instrument, nearly equal in sound to a sweet-toned flute.

CAPERS OF A GEORGIA STORM.

A Sort of Kindly Carefulness Characterized All Its Pranks.

Col. Richard Malcolm Johnston, the writer of southern plantation sketches, tells some wonderful stories about Georgia weather. He admits that he would not believe them himself were it not for his unbounded faith in everything Georgian in general, and his personal knowledge and unlimited confidence in the veracity of the men who told him the stories in particular.

"I heard them," he said, "while on a visit to my old home in Hancock county, Georgia, some years ago, and I know that they are true. We had a big storm down there about ten years ago; the folks called it a hurricane, the weather men said it was a tornado. But, hurricane or tornado, it cut some queer old capers. Col. Humber, over in Putnam county, saw the storm coming up and knew it was going to be a big one. There were a number of ladies at his house, and, of course, his first thought was for them, so he got them all safely in their rooms and went down into the large hall which ran through his house and shut the door. Now, Col. Humber is a big man—weighs about two hundred pounds. When he got down stairs he found the storm was blowing through his hallway, and before he knew what had happened it had picked him up, carried him out on his lawn, and laid him down—not roughly, but gently. At the same time it took a heavy stone and brick chimney off the house and laid it on top of him to keep him in place. It didn't throw the chimney on him, but laid it down with so little force that only his leg was broken. In a moment or two another gust came along, picked up the chimney and carried it off, and Col. Humber crawled back into the house.

"That same storm went a little further on till it came to a barn in which were two horses, two mules, and two cows. These were in separate compartments. With a whirl the roof of the barn was taken off as clean as a whistle and carried away, and while the stock was wondering what had happened, a section of the storm went in the top of that barn, lifted those horses and mules and cows high up in the air and set them down again without hurting one of them. But the queer part of the proceeding was that when it had those animals in the air the tornado changed their position so that when it set them on their feet the mules were where the cows had been, the cows were in the horses' apartments, and the horses were occupying the mules' stalls.

"But that storm hadn't finished cutting up its capers. It struck a house in the same county and made its way into a lady's chamber. A bureau was standing against the wall, having on it a lot of such traps and trikets as ladies usually have—cosmetis, bottles and so on. A bandbox with a few laces inside was standing by its side. The wind took that bureau, moved it to another part of the room, but didn't disturb the bandbox. It went into another lady's room, picked up a trunk filled with clothing, carried it out of a window, and wafted it over into Hancock county—my own county—and deposited it in a field forty miles away from the house from which it had been taken. It was found there unbroken the next day and returned to the owner, whose initials were stenciled on its end. I am glad, however," remarked the genial colonel, as he wiped his forehead, "that the storm didn't carry that trunk more than forty miles. I couldn't have believed another mile.

"Georgia is a great state," he continued, "but even such storms as that do not occur often. To prove that such queer things do happen, there is a section of a telegraph pole in the museum of the state university. This pole has a light cypress shingle sticking through it, about half of it projecting from each side. That shingle was picked up in a storm and blown clear through the telegraph pole and left sticking there.'—N. Y. Sun.

AN OBSTINATE JURYMAN.

He Would Not Vote to Convict, for He Himself Was the Slayer.

The most remarkable case of a jury "standing out" against what seemed irrefutable testimony, and all through the resolution of one man, occurred before Chief-Justice Dyer. He presided at a murder trial at which everything went against the prisoner, who on his part could only say that on his going to work in the morning he found the murdered man dying, and tried to help him, whereby he became covered with blood, but when the man presently died he had come away and said nothing about it, because he was known to have had a quarrel with the deceased and feared he might get into trouble. The hay fork with which the man had been murdered had the prisoner's name on it. In other respects his guilt appeared to be established, and the chief justice was convinced of it, but the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

This was Chief Justice Dyer's case, and he put some very searching questions to the high sheriff. The cause of the acquittal, said the official, was undoubtedly the foreman, a farmer of excellent character, esteemed by all his neighbors, and very unlikely to be obstinate or vexatious. "Then," said the judge, "I must see this foreman, for an explanation of the matter I will have." The foreman came, and, after extracting from his lordship a promise of secrecy, proved at once that the prisoner had been rightfully acquitted, "For," said he, "it was I myself who killed the man." It had been no murder, for the other had attacked him with the hay-fork, and (as he showed) severely injured him, but in the struggle to get possession of the weapon he had the misfortune to give the man a fatal wound. He had no fears as to his being found guilty, but, the assizes being just over, his farm and affairs would have been ruined by a confession through lying in jail so long, so he suffered matters to take their course. He was horrified to find one of his own servants accused of the murder; he supported his wife and children while in jail; managed to be placed on the jury and elected foreman. He added that if he had failed in this he would certainly have confessed to his own share in the business, and the judge believed him.

Every year for fifteen years his lordship made inquiries as to the foreman's existence, and at last, happening to survive him, he considered himself free to tell the story.—London Daily News.

—At Waterloo there were 145,000 men on both sides, of whom 51,000 were killed or disabled.

A NATION OF FISHERMEN.

The Dutch and Their Progress in the New World.

One never reads in American colonial history of the Dutch seeking gold like the Spaniards or Englishmen. His head was too level, and his eye too clear. Excelling as farmers, yet even more as traders, the Dutch laid the foundations of the commercial supremacy of New York by inherited instincts re-enforced by wise policy and large ideas. They gave points not only as to fish, fur and wampum to their neighbors down east. Quickest to catch customers, they sent out their agents among the Indians, forestalling the fur and other crops. Incomparable as is the modern Boston "drummer," he is but the evolution of the Dutch bos-loper, or wood-ranger, who scoured the forests for trade. With perfection of dress and manners, irresistible in tongue, brainy and resourceful always, as is our commercial tourist in this Columbian year, he probably does not proportionately excel the skillful bos-loper who in the seventeen century scoured the Indian villages along the Mohawk, and even to Duluth.

It was Capt. John Smith—who, like all the military men in the early colonies—Gorgas, Dudley, Miles Standish, Lyon Gardiner, Leisler, Argall, Wingfield, Raleigh, had served in the Dutch armies—who first pointed out the gold mines in the ocean. Smith, who had first discovered and named both Plymouth and New England, prophesied that their main staple of wealth would be fish. So it proved. For over a century a golden codfish has hung in the legislative halls of Massachusetts as the symbol of her wealth drawn from the sea. It was Smith's prophecy that has gilded the flashing dome on Beacon Hill. He saw how the Dutch had "built Amsterdam on herring bones," had become the best fed, clothed, housed and educated people in Europe, and handled easily the Spaniard on land and sea because of their skill in boats, hooks and nets. 'Never would Spaniard pay his debts, his friends and his army half so truly as the Hollanders still have done by this contemptible trade in fish." The Dutch had not only taught the British the science of hunting in the deeps, how to catch whales and herring, but also how to cure food-fish, and to transmute the poorer sorts into manure for agriculture. The immigrants to America were quick to imitate, and also to improve. Those who gave the promise and potency of the later "codfish aristocracy" had qualities of mind and body equal to those of any race on earth, and a rich civilization was possible. At first, as Bradford complained and explained, their fishing did not pay, but in due time the Yankee made the "contemptible trade of fish" not only a lucrative business, but a school of heroes. They enriched their own inventive brains, furnished Friday food for all southern Europe, traded at the ends of the earth and maintained what proved to be a permanent nursery of the United States navy. As some of them have declared, the chief motive of the settlers of the Massachusetts Bay colony was not only the worship and glory of God, but also the catching of fish and the making of money. In both their aims they finally succeeded. The vocabulary of the deep-sea fisherman, with, for example, its "dipsy," its Dutch pronunciation of a shoal (school) of fish, bears witness to these first teachers.—William Elliot Griffis, in Harper's Magazine.

A QUEER MOUSER

Preying Upon the Mice in the Country of La Plata.

In some years mice are strangely numerous in the country of La Plata. A naturalist says that at such times domestic fowls become rapacious from living on this prey, cats leave the house and become wild, while dogs, foxes, weasels and opossums fare sumptuously. The naturalist had a curious mouser in an animal which resembles the cat very little in habit or structure.

I kept an armadillo at this time, and good cheer and the sedentary life which he led in captivity made him excessively fat; but the mousing exploits of even this individual were most interesting. Occasionally I took him into the fields to give him a taste of liberty, though I always took the precaution to keep hold of a cord fastened to one of his hind legs; for as often as he came to a kennel of one of his wild fellows, he would attempt to escape into it.

He traveled with an ungainly gait, carrying his nose, beagle-like, close to the ground. His sense of smell was exceedingly acute, and when near his prey he became agitated and quickened his motions, pausing frequently to sniff the earth till, discovering the exact spot where the mouse lurked he would stop and creep cautiously to it; then, after slowly raising himself to a sitting posture, he would spring suddenly forward, throwing his body like a trap over the mouse, or nest of mice, concealed beneath the grass.

A curious instance of intelligence in a cat was brought to my notice at this time by one of my neighbors, a native. His children had made the discovery that some excitement and fun was to be had by placing a long, hollow stock of the giant thistle with a mouse in it—and every hollow stalk at this time had one for a tenant—before a cat, and then watching her movements.

Smelling her prey, she would spring at one end of the stalk—the end toward which the mouse happened to be moving—but would catch nothing, for the mouse, instead of running out, would turn back to run to the other end; whereupon the cat, all excitement, would jump there to seize it; and so the contest would go on for a long time, an exhibition of the cleverness and the stupidity of instinct on the part of both the pursuer and the pursued.

There were several cats at the house, and all acted in the same way except one. When a stalk was placed before this cat, instead of becoming excited like the others, it went quickly to one end and smelt at the opening; then, satisfied that its prey was inside, it deliberately bit a long piece out of the stalk, then another strip, and so on until the entire stick had been opened up to within six or eight inches of the further end, when the mouse came out and was caught.

Every stalk placed before this cat was demolished in the same business-like way; but the other cats, though they were made look on, could never learn the trick.—Youth's Companion.

LAKE MARY, Minn., Nov. 19, 1893.

DEAR SIR:—I regard it my duty to you and many other sufferers, afflicted with some terrible disease as I have had, so I want to state here what good it has done for me. I had a terrible case of Rheumatism, so that I was hardly able to be around. Then I bought six bottles of your Gen-De-Can-Dra, of which I have only taken three bottles and it has helped me wonderfully. And I have also recommended it to my neighbors. It is the best medicine for Rheumatism and other pains. And I also have used your Liniment for the last four years, and it seems as we can't be without it. MRS. W. H. MILLER.

DELANO DIARY

—Tomorrow, Saturday, Feb'y 10, will be the usual monthly fair day.

—Read the programme for the Old Settlers meeting at Buffalo, on the 22d.

—W. Johns' new store is an improvement on the old. He keeps a fine line of confectionery and groceries.

—So far February has furnished us with exceptionally fine weather. Yesterday considerable water stood on the snow from recent thawing.

—Rev. J. S. Sherrill will preach at the Presbyterian church on Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Evangelestic meetings will be held the week following.

—W. Johns has moved his store into the building formerly occupied by Leo Eppel as a restaurant. The Delano Provision Company taking Johns' old stand.

—The Cosmopolitan for February introduces a famous European author to its readers—Valdes of Madrid, and the artist Marold, of Paris, well known as a French illustrator.

—Our City Council allowed a prize fight to come off in the city hall and failed to make themselves half as notorious as did the Governor of Florida in opposing such things.

—Rumor says that our village council dare not refuse a certain liquor license for fear of losing a job. And that if any one but a wealthy brewer owned the most prominent corner in town he would be made to procure ovespouts.

—The dance Tuesday evening was not very much of a success financially, but all present report a very pleasant time. Dancing was indulged in until about 12 o'clock when lunch was served, after which all left for their respective homes.

—Committees of the Washington's Birthday Association of Delano are hard at work arranging for the celebration of that great event in the history of our country. All join in saying if we do as well as we did last year we will meet expectations. A literary programme is being arranged.

—If in every case the man who violated the law by selling an old drunkard liquors received the bullet in his own carcus, directed by the liquor he has sold instead of having it lodged in some innocent, inoffensive and helpless person, there would soon be fewer cases of that kind to deal with.

—One of our citizens suggested on hearing of the Nugent murder case that a good punishment for the man who would furnish such men as are habitual drunkards with intoxicants would be to confine him in a cell with the man he helped to make a criminal so long as he was confined. Another asked what would be the matter with hanging him also.

—Uncle Joe Van Eman says there are three persons responsible for such crimes as was enacted in our county this week; the drunkard, the man who openly violates the law by supplying him with liquor, and the officers who grant and continue in force license to a man who openly violates it every day. How far removed from responsibility, some inquire, is the man who votes license?

—The six jurors secured yesterday are intelligent men. * * * Martin Conzet is a Frenchman, who bears a close resemblance to Joe. Jefferson in his makeup of Rip Van Winkle. He lives at Greenwood.—Minneapolis column in Globe.

The above is concerning the selection of a jury to try "Slim" Dugan in the Harris murder case. If that reporter ever meets his Rip Van Winkle subject he will find him down to date in a thing or two. A genuine "singed cat."

—See John McGary's trip through old Hennepin County.

—Prof. Shaw's account of the Howard Lake Institute is interesting to farmers and stock raisers.

—Pay your personal taxes by the last day of this month. On the first of March the 10 per cent penalty will be charged.

—Read our letter from California. Hon. B. F. C. has a knack of telling just what people want to know about the country.

—Several of our citizens expect to hear Henry Watterson, the star eyed Goddess of Liberty of the Courier Journal, of Louisville, at Minneapolis tonight.

—Quite a number of Catholic's observed Ash Wednesday this week by attending church here. Lent is now being kept by religously inclined people everywhere.

—Our neighbor, up street has an editorial this week, trying to show how the democrats are to blame for wood being so cheap. The Good Book says "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." Perhaps this fine weather has something to do with the cheapness of that article.

—Rev. John Doran died at Aitkin, Minn. where he had recently gone to take charge of the Methodist Episcopal work. Mr. Doran twice served our circuit in the capacity of pastor. He was a man who had many friends and few if any enemies. He was an earnest faithful worker for the Master. He died in the harness.

Personals.

Sheriff Carpenter drove through town yesterday.

Squire Otto, of Franklin, was in the village yesterday.

Jos. Van Eman and J. F. Powers visited Rockford this week.

H. E. Grafft made a trip as far west as Willmar this week in the interest of the Eagle.

John O' Leary came up this morning from Minneapolis for a couple of days business visit.

Dr. Shrader's father, from New York, is visiting him and other relatives here at present.

R. M. Bohn and Pete Peterson helped furnish music for a dance at Loretto Monday night.

Miss Maud Cruikshank returned from a visit with Minneapolis friends Wednesday evening.

Rev. J. W. Powell has been attending meetings on his son's charge at Kimball Prarie this week.

Rockford's genial depot agent, W. L. Haggerty, and Wm. Dorman, of Rockford Station were in town yesterday.

Ernest Otto is hustling for members for the St. Anthony Benovelent Society of this place. A general agent was in town this week.

Washington's Birthday.

At a meeting of the W. B. D. A. of Delano officers on Tuesday at the post office, M. A. O'Hair was president and Miss Rebecca White was secretary. There were present M. A. O'Hair, John Rader, C. H. Vorse, John Cunningham, T. J. Catlin, Rebecca White, C. W. Ingerson. The following committees were appointed:

ON FINANCES—Mrs. W. Rader and Miss R. White.
ADVERTISING—John Cunningham.
SPEAKER—Dr. Catlin.
MUSIC—J. M. Borrell and J. M. Beck.
TOAST MASTER—Prof. Dewey.
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—John Cunningham, N. K. Coffin, G. P. Schaffer, Mrs. M. A. O'Hair, and Mrs. W. Rader.

Sub-Committees as follows:

Committee on arranging tables—John Coolen, I. C. Steward, A. L. Mealey.

Decorating Hall—Mrs. A. A. Davis, Mrs. O. L. Billings, Miss Tillie Coolen.

Serving Coffee—Mrs. L. M. Maxfield, Mrs. G. P. Schaffer, Mrs. John Cunningham.

A motion to set tables instead of groups, carried.

To furnish cream—Mrs. Jos. Matter, Mrs. James Sherry, Mrs. John Rader, Mrs. Peter Church, Mrs. Atwood Welker.

Committee on reception—Dr. Catlin, M. A. O'Hair, I. Gutzwiller, Jr., F. H. Lindsley, C. H. Vorse.

A good time is expected. Everybody invited. Come and bring your dinner and have a good social time and a cup of good coffee free.

REBECCA WHITE, Sec'y.

County Cullings.

Our community was shocked on Tuesday morning to learn of the killing of Eunice Nugent, aged 14 years, near Maple Lake, the night before by her father, James G. Nugent. Mr. N. was, sad to relate, under the influence of drink, a habit he had long indulged. It seems his daughter left the house on account of the language her father, under the excitement of liquor, used to her, and saught shelter in the stable where her mother came to induce her to return to the house, when Mr. N. suddenly appeared at the door of the stable and fired at her three times, killing her instantly. James has been taken to the Minneapolis jail to await the action of the court. His case will probably be heard at the June term. This is another strong temperance lecture. People who drink may be led to do what in their sober moments they would not do. Old drunkards are served with liquor in open defience of the law and the innocent are made to suffer untold miseries and even death as a consequence.

Among Our Exchanges.

Craig the miller, is busy as a bee. He has a splendidly equipped mill, and a good big trade.—Milaca Times.

Frank Hoskins, the Henning editor who was adjudged insane and confined in the Fergus Falls asylum because a certain clique at Fergus Falls didn't like his style of heading local politics, has been released on habeas corpus proceedings, and has returned to Henning to edit his paper. Those Fergus Falls fellows are not laughing as loud as they were.—Brainerd Journal.

We will send both papers one year and fifty photographic views of the World's Fair, to new subscribers only, all for fifty cents. Sample copy of the Poultry Keeper, with particulars free. Send five cents for either of the following back numbers equal to a 25-cent book; Poultry Houses, July 1891, has 50 views; Brooders and Incubators, August 1889 and August 1891. Address, The Poultry Keeper Co., Parkesburg, Pa.

February "Cosmopolitan."

The secret of the great success of the Cosmopolitan is not so hard to find, if one looks carefully over the number for February. A story by Valdes, the famous Spanish novelist, the first from his pen to appear in any American magazine is begun in this number. Arthur Sherburn Hardy's story, "A Rejected Manuscript" is charmingly illustrated by L. Marold, who we believe makes his first appearance in the magazine on this side of the water. A profusely illustrated article on the designing and building of a war-ship appeals to the interest taken by all in the new navy, and a thrilling description of a naval combat under the significant title: "The Melolan and the Pentheroy" describes, after the manner of the Battle of Dorking, a possible seafight, the outcome of which is watched by the entire naval world. "Gliding Flight" is an interesting contribution to the problem of aerial navigation by one who has studied the flight of soaring birds in the East for twenty years. Elaine Goodale, who married a member of the Sioux nation, has some interesting information of Indian Wars and Warriors. T. C. Crawford, the Washington correspondent, gives the first half of a startling story, under the title of "The Disapperance Syndicate." The poetry in this number by Sir Edwin Arnold, Graham R. Tomson and William Young, is unusually good. The Departments' "In the World of Art and Letters" and the "Progress of Science" continue to have as contributors men famous in both continents.

A Trip Through West Hennepin.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—Yesterday being wash Monday, and your correspondent not wishing to play second fiddle, I took the overland Pumpkin Vine route for Loretto, a small town of about 50 inhabitants or more, on the Soo road, just over the line, in the town of Medina. Most of the inhabitants of Loretto and for two or three miles around are Germans intelligent, industrious and are our most prosperous farmers. They as a class live within their means, pay their bills and do not believe much in sumptuary laws.

The first man your correspondent called on in Loretto was Mr. Miller who keeps the only store in the village. I found him at his place of business ready to wait on customers and answer all questions put to him by one seeking information. Mr. Miller is also post master at Loretto. He says trade is quite good with him considering the times.

John Berg keeps hotel and saloon and is one of the business men of the place.

Fred Schmidt is the village blacksmith. He does horse shoeing and all kinds of reparing in his line.

Baker Bros. sell feed and hay and run a feed mill. They are doing a first class business.

C. W. Spurzem, station agent at that place, I found to be a genial and obliging young man, a little more so than the average, and on inquiring learned that he is a son of an old friend of your correspondent, who I soldiered with in the army.

They have just built a new school house at this place, but it has never been used yet.

At the station there are immense piles of cord wood both green and dry waiting shipment, but they say sales are rather dull at present.

Mr. Spurzem says trains are running regularly on the Soo line now.

After leaving Loretto I went south along the east shore of Lake Independence. I find that this part of the country has greatly improved during the last few years.

There is a saw mill going in on the east shore of Lake Independence about one and a half miles from Loretto.

After a short drive I came to Maple Plaine on the Great Northern, this had made but little improvement since my last visit. I think there is a good opening for the Salvation Army people, but then they might not repent at the preaching of a Jonah.

The western part of Hennepin county is made up of good soil, very productive when well cultivated. It has a class of citizens equal to any in the state for industry, intelligence and good looks, are very harmless under ordinary circumstances, but when aroused are ferocious and blood thirsty.

Would it not be a good plan to form a new county out the western part of Hennepin and eastern part of Wright making Delano the county seat. That could be agitated in the next Legislature by electing a representative from Delano and one from western Hennepin. Those Minneapolis fellows think we have no rights that they are bound to respect, especially when they want to build a $5,000,000 court house. To us fellows living in the bush it looks like a prodigal waste. But they consider themselves at the head of navigation on all railroad lines coming from the four points of the compass and they Lord it over the rest of us fellows while we pay tribute to Cæsar.

JOHN MCGARY.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

CARRYING OUR OWN BUNDLES.

ELOISE BENSON.

'Tis said that Pat one day was trudging
Along a hot and dusty road;
A bundle slung upon his shoulder,
Making a hard and tiresome load.

A passing teamster Pat espying,
Called out to him in a friendly way—
"Ho, friend! come ride upon my wagon!
'Tis better than walking this hot day."

The invitation quick accepting,
Pat clambered to the driver's side,
In his rich Irish brogue expressing
Thanks for the unexpected ride.

"I assure you, sir, you are very welcome,
"Just throw your bundle in behind;"
"Oh, no!" said Pat; "No sooch advantage
Would I be takin' of one so kind.

"An', sure, it's enough for me to be roidin'
With a foine gentlemon loike yerself;
An' not to impose upon good nature,
I'll be atther carryin' me bundle meself.

We laugh at poor Pat's stupid blunder.
But are we no wiser, when we bear
Upon our weak and tired shoulders
Our heavy loads of anxious care?

Regardless of the voice entreating,
"Cast it on Me. I care for you.
Believe in Me and be not troubled.
My love shall bear you safely through."

We hear the voice, we say we trust Him,
But do not let the burden fall—
Like Pat, forgetting in our worry,
That He is carrying us, bundle and all.

Owosso, Mich. —Methodist Herald.

J. ADAM BEDE, has been appointed United States Marshal for this district. He was Congressman Baldwin's candidate. J. Adam is a hustler, and something of a humorist. He will doubtless give satisfaction in this position.

"A PROPHET is not without honor, save in his own Country," seems to be verified in the case of Congressman Baldwin. Some Duluth man, has been telling around St. Paul that the Major could not be elected Alderman in Duluth now, while Mr. Baldwin is receiving honors in abundance in the Capital of our Country, and his stock is coming up even in his own Congressional district which extends from Delano to Duluth.

ST PAUL seems likely to place Robert C. Smith in the Mayor's chair again after his brief rest. Most of the Ministers and other leading citizens are opposed to the present rate and favor a change they claim, as did most of the Republican papers at the time that the present Mayor was to keep good order and run a respectable administration if elected, and the large majority of those that are saying anything, are dissatisfied with the choice they made. It will be hard to fool even most of the people again right away.

QUITE a number of our republican exchanges are printing under the head of "The Corn Laws" something that reads much like democratic doctrine. For instance the Buffalo Journal the Sherburne County Star News and others agree, concerning England's famous corn laws, in saying; "As the population of the towns increased, grain became extortionately high, until it was a question of lower price or death. The corn laws went down." We suspect these editors of being "protectionists" for "revenue only," at least to the extent of getting a ride over the Burlington route.

OUR Democratic Congress seems to have gotton a move on itself after all. The unpopular election bill has been repealed. The President's Hawaiian policy has been endorsed. The Wilson bill stands a good chance of becoming law, and the purchasing clause of the John Sherman silver bill has been relegated to the past. Secretrry Carlisle has sold some bonds and secured money enough to aid in bridging over the hard spell. From the alacrity with which moneyed men bought up these bonds we should judge they do not expect this country to become a bankrupt right away at least. At this rate the country will again be on a solid footing in the eyes of her own people, and all the scare will be past.

CONCERNING the late decission in regard to the releasing of insane patients; the St. Paul Globe says: "Let the hospital board turn loose in any community, as they threaten to do, even one case dangerous to the community, or unable to take care of himself or herself, and they will learn what public sentiment demands, even though they may forget for the time being their duty to there fellow men. There are patients now in the asylum whose residence is known to be in other counties who were committed to the hospital counties. It has been the practice to commit them wherever they may be found, if they really need hospital treatment. No city on earth has a board so inhuman as to turn the insane loose upon their own community merely to avoid the expense of committing.

SLIM DUGAN'S trial has finally come to an end. The jury found him guilty of the Harris murder in the second degree; penalty life imprisonment.

HON. O. O. CULLEN, has been started in the race for Mayor of St. Paul, by his friends. The seventh ward democrats have resolved to stand by him, and it now looks as if Mr. Cullen would be the next mayor of our capitol city.

TO THOSE republican papers that are inquiring "Who is J. Adam Bede?" We would say he is the man who made a speech at the Democratic convention two years ago in Minneapolis, which stampeded the convention as no other speech in Minnesota ever did and when he placed in nomination his candidate he was chosen by a rising vote almost every man in that large convention voting for Harry Hawkins although many of them had never heard of him before. J. Adam Bede traveled over the 6th district and made many telling speeches against the "iniquitous tariff" and had the satisfaction of seeing, partially as a result of his labors, a democratic Congressman elected from this district. No one seems to dispute but that Mr. Bede will will take proper care of his office.

Public Opinion.

Public opinion don't favor saloons breaking the law by selling to habitual drunkards. This mode of procuring a few dimes has been carried on to such an extent and for so long a time that people are beginning to cry out against it. It will have to be stopped even if the people vote to have no liquor sold within the borders of Wright county. It would be a good thing for one of the most favorably situated counties in this great state; for the state; and for the United States if everybody would quit drinking liquors. If liquor licenses are granted certainly those who are able to pay $500, and give bonds to keep the law, should be made to do so. These things rest with the people themselves. When they are sufficiently aroused to compel their officers to enforce contracts made according to law; to see that the saloon keeper keeps his end of the bargain or surrenders his license a step in the right direction will have been taken We don't know how or of whom Mr. Nugent procured the liquor that inflamed his brain and aided in fitting him for the awful crime he committed but think if the person who took his money in exchange for the liquor could exchange back again he would willingly do so. As a sample of how people look on this matter we quote from several of our county papers concerning the murder.

The killing of Eunice Nugent, of Maple Lake, by her father, James G Nugent, is one of the most terrible things in the history of Wright county and one can not read the blood-curdling particulars without a shudder at the thought that hundreds of such men, half crazed with drink are abroad with no degree of certainty that they will not be seized with an irresistable desire to kill at any moment.—Eagle.

The funeral of the murdered girl took place yesterday afternoon, Father Savy of the Catholic church of Maple Lake officiating. There was an immense crowd present. It was a pitiful sight to see the grief stricken mother and her six little children, and the saloon keepers of Maple Lake who sold her husband liquor must have had their conscience touched a little bit.—Wright County Times.

Nothing has ever happened to so shock this community. Jim was an habitual drunkard and we are informed he had been affl was then, on one of his sprees and was no doubt crazed with liquor when he did the awful deed. Men who will give or sell or furnish to such men as Jim Nugent, intoxicating liquors, are the real criminals, they are the men who point the revolvers and who fire the fatal bullets. It is an awful thing to do.—Buffalo Journal.

Now Have Your Say.

We are in receipt from D. W. Voorhees, Chairman of the Committee on Finance, United States Senate, of several circulars or letters of inquiry concerning how tariff rates effect different kinds of business. Among them are questions to be answered by Manufacturers, Importers, Merchants, Chamber of Commerce and Boards of Trade and Public Officers, Labor Organizations of Workingmen, and one to Agricultural districts. We give below the body of the circular to Agriculturists. If anyone is so inclined let them make known to this committee their grievances or forever hold their peace. Should some of our readers wish to give their views on the questions or any of them our columns are opened to any reasonable extent for a discussion pro and con. Send along your views or don't find fault after Congress has done the best it knew how:

MY DEAR SIR: In former years when the question of the tariff was uppermost in the consideration of the people, circular letters were addressed to merchants, importers, and others, making inquiries as to to the character and amount of their business, prices and wages paid, rates of import duties, etc. This was notably the case in 1845, under the direction of Secretary Walker; in 1882, through the Tariff Commission; and, in 1885, under the direction of Secretary Manning.

The replies to such interrogatories furnish valuable statistics and other data, and materially aid in legislating upon the subject of customs duties.

With a view to securing such information, the Committee on Finance submit to you the following questions, which they trust you will formulate replies to, adding such general or special matter as you may be possessed of, and which, in your judgement, will be of value to the Committee:

1. What is the character of your product?
2. Do similar foreign products compete with yours?
3. What would be the effect upon your product of a reduction of duty on imports of all kinds?
4. Have the wages which you pay for labor increased or decreased within the past two years?
5. To what extent does your state export agricultural products?
6. What competition do such exports meet abroad?
7. To what extent, in your opinion, are the prices and character of your products affected by the manufacturing industries of your State?
8. Have your living expenses increased or decreased during the past four years?
9. Please give your views on the proposition to restore sugar to the dutiable list.
10. Do the present duties benefit, in any respect, people engaged in growing agricultural products and staples; and, if not, how can they be so modified as to produce this result?
11. State, generally, any thing you wish you believe would be useful to the Committee in preparing tariff legislation.

The committee are desirous that your reply shall give a full expression of your views, and not be restricted to merely answering the questions categorically. At the same time it is desired that your answers shall be confined to your own business and be stated concisely.

Publicity will not be given to names or location of business if you so desire.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 9, 1894.

It is gratifying to note that the democrats in Congress have at least realized the benefit of united party action. No man in Congress has a right to expect that every measure he is called on to support will be entirely in accord with his personal ideas. If every member of Congress should adopt that idea legislation of any sort would be impossible. Long years of power in Congress taught the republicans the value of organization and unity, and the lesson will have to be learned by any party that hopes to accomplish important legislation. The democrats in the House made a good start by passing the Wilson tariff bill and followed it up this week by the adoption of the McCreary Hawaiian resolution which condemns the acts of ex-Minister Stevens and endorses President Cleveland's policy. The democrats in the Senate are not entitled to graduate in unity, but they got together this week and passed the House bill for the repeal of the odious Federal election laws. If they would get together on every thing and stay together it would be greatly to their credit and to the advantage of the democratic party.

Representative Bland's bill for the coinage of the seigniorage is now before the House, but as it has no order from the committee on Rules behind it and the anti-silver men are refusing to vote to make a quorum there is some doubt as to whether it will be able to maintain the right of way until disposed of. Countless misrepresentations have been made of the attitude of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle towards this measure Neither of them have publicly spoken one word either for or against the bill, although Secretary Carlisle did point out one particularly objectionable feature in the bill to Mr. Bland—that providing for the issue of silver certificates in advance of the coinage of the seignorage—and Mr. Bland expressed his willingness to change the bill so as to make the certificates issuable on the coinage of the silver.

In deciding not to grant hearings on the tariff bill the Senate committee on Finance deeply offended a few gentlemen who had come to Washington to instruct the committee and air their views, but the democrats on that committee in so voting were acting as they believe from the information they have received the entire country wished them to act. From north, south, east and west comes in chorus, "whatever is to be done let it be done quickly," and the denial of further hearings on the tariff means the saving of several weeks time in the consideration of the bill in the Senate. Senator Voorhees sized up the situation correctly when he said: "Prompt and speedy action on pending tariff legislation is required at this time by every patriotic and business consideration." This being a fact acknowledged by business men who oppose as well as those who favor the Wilson tariff bill, the Republican Senators will do well to consider the matter carefully before they attempt to carry out the obstructive program which is now being prepared by their ablest parliamentarians in the Senate. The capitalists of the country are only waiting a definite settlement of the tariff question to invest their money and inaugurate a period of prosperity for everybody, not for a comparatively few fortunate individuals, and woe be unto the republican party if its representatives in the Senate postpone that prosperity by factious opposition to a measure that they know they cannot in the end defeat.

The sub-committee of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations has concluded its Hawaiian investigation, so far as the taking of testimony is concerned. The reports of the sub-committee will shortly be submitted to the full committee for action thereon. Although there is some talk about three reports there is no real foundation for the belief that there will be more than two, a majority report signed by democrats, and a minority report signed by republicans. There is no reason to doubt which of these reports will be adopted, notwithstanding publications to the contrary in republican and anti-administration papers.

President Cleveland must enjoy reading the contradictory fairy stories that are daily printed in the metropolitan papers concerning his alleged actions to secure the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Peckham to the Supreme Court. What Mr. Cleveland is really doing in that connection can be authentically stated without any violation of confidence in one word—nothing. As the Supreme Court has adjourned for a month there is no special occasion for haste in disposing of the nomination.

Mr. Anselum J. McLauren, the new Senator from Mississippi, is not widely known in Washington, but if he is as able a man as the Mississippians in Congress say he is he will make a fine successor to Senator Wildhall. Like "Private" John Allen, the populist Congressman from the same state, he carried a musket in the late unpleasantness.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

The Rev. Father Cox, of St Jarlath's church, preached a temperance sermon last week in the Church of the Annunciation, Pauline and Wautansia streets, on "The Drink Scandal." The great church was crowded. He said in part:

Let us begin at the bottom, with the barrel house bum, the last stage of the drunkard. He has come by rapid stages from better conditions until he has lost property, friends, self-respect everything but thirst for liquor. Next comes the more respectable drunkard. He patronizes a better class saloon, one into which women of the neighborhood go to buy beer with but shawl over their heads because they can't afford to buy bonnets. The same people complain that capital is crushing labor. Labor is crushing itself under the load of drink. These respectable saloons are highly illuminated. Their walls are adorned with pictures. Then there are high-toned saloons, wives and daughters of whose names would astonish us. The daughters are sent to convent schools and are given medals, etc., because they are the daughters of these men. It is possible for a man to keep saloon in a respectable way but they don't do it. Their business is to make drunkards.

Club drinking is a habit worthy severest condemnation. There, at little bar, men of fine families and splendid prospects spend late hours when they should be at home. There are more men besides saloonkeepers who are responsible for the drunkards of our land. We, the Catholics of America, have much to be ashamed of on this question. At the world's fair congresses Catholic celebrities used the strongest language regarding temperance. Under the facts protestants have a right to say we are inconsistent in that we preach one thing and practice another. At the celebrations in our colleges the amount of wine that is poured down is enormous.

The medical profession is partially responsible for the awful reign of intemperance. The physician who only medicine is rum does not want to save you. He merely wants to please you and see your money.

To you as individuals I appeal. The men of wealth who handle brewers' stocks; young ladies who smile at and tolerate as companions young men who drink; parents who allow their children to drink unrebuked, are all responsible for the spread of this awful curse. Let us all do what we can to repair past damage and in the future stand as a stone wall against the further spread of this worst of evils.

"Character is moral order seen through the medium of an individual nature..... Men of character are the conscience of the society to which they belong."—Emerson.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE COMPASS.

Keep your eye on the compass
If the sea runs high
And the ocean's inky billows
Mock the blackness of the sky,
When beating up against the winds
So pitiless and strong,
Keep your eye on the compass
And you can't go wrong.

Keep your eye on the compass
And your white light trimmed,
Though the moon hide in the heavens
And the stars are dimmed;
Though the voyage may be lonely
And the way seem long,
Keep your eye on the compass
And you can't go wrong.

Keep your eye on the compass,
It will guide you o'er the deep,
Will show you where the north star is
And where the flowers bloom
In the sunny south. No matter
If the way seem long,
Keep your eye on the compass
And you can't go wrong.

—Cy Warman in New York Sun.

MONEY AND MORALS.

Henry Watterson at Minneapolis.

Ye editor had the pleasure of listening to the very entertaining and instructive lecture of Col. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, at Minneapolis, on Friday evening last. The Lyceum Theater was well filled with an intelligent audience; many of whom had come from a long distance to see and hear this distinguished man talk. The speaker of the evening was introduced to the audience by Mayor Eustice in his happiest strain. We give a few of the points made by Mr. Watterson during his speech. He said he intended rather to avoid than provoke controversy. There is scarcely a question but has two sides to it. I think the world has been misled by the misinterpretation of some of its accepted maxims. Success in life is to be happy. Happiness is a creation of the brain and heart not of the stomach. Official money and private funds should never become mixed; should always be kept separate. Where trouble comes it is usually from neglecting to follow this rule. Gambling is wrong. Hypocracy, it has been said, is the homage vice pays to virtue. It is the mask behind which pretended virtue seekers hide. What's the matter with this country? Is it the Race question at the south. I long since ceased to have theories concerning it, think education of both races necessary, and a strong faith in God. "Who does all things well." Is it the questions of labor, free elections, or Agrarianism? No the real danger, the Damocles sword hanging over us is the money standard. "Put money in your purse" seems to be the motto of world more in like. A sage who refused to spend his time in money making, though tempted by large sums to go on a lecturing tour, the world would be the better for them. Honest poverty seems to have become one of the lost arts. Young men now seek to make money and then buy a seat in Congress. Neither the poor nor the chair the happiest. Switzerland is a happy country, their president is paid less than $1,000 per year. The country no richer than it was 500 years ago. I have thought if I were ever an exile from this country I could find happiness and comfort in Switzerland. The money standard is too high and the moral standard too low in our country. I always believed in morals; am something of a Methodist in conceit, but people grow in grace. I am an optomist to some extent, think we are on the ascent and not on the descent of development. We have the finest country and the most perfect system of Government on the face of the earth. There are two moral dangers to our government, the devil of party spirit and the devil of money; join them together and I have named them the money devil. It now costs $1,000,000 to place a Presidential ticket in the field and $100,000 for a seat in the Senate. How long will it be at this rate before the Presidential chair will be put up at auction to the highest bidder? Let every man entertain his convictions and live up to them, but think no less of his neighbor who differs from him. "Do thou unto others as you would that others should do unto you," is the whole mystery of human happiness. "Fling away ambition." "Be just and fear not, Cromwell." Leaders must better and teach more morality. If I were preaching to a New England audience, on the rocky shore, I would tell them to go South, and learn hospitality of the Southerners I would tell them to go North and learn of the Yankee many things; how to make money, how to work. We are the most homogenious people on the face of the globe. All American citizens to be proud of their country, all can be moral and have true manhood; can be happy; love home, work, and country.

After the lecture an informal reception was held at the Press Club rooms. The apparitments were elegantly arranged with pictures, among them a fine oil painting of our old time friend the late Martin Williams, and flowers in profusion; while beautiful strains of instrumental and vocal music filled the air. Many enjoyed an introduction to the distinguished guest, Henry Watterson, all received a good hearty hand shake from the man who single handed fights against the fallacy of protection to American industries.

ROCKFORD.

The remains of Dr. Dean were burried in Rockford last Saturday.

D. R. Tompson, C. M. Johnson and W. C. Hawks did business in Minneapolis on Monday.

Simon Wehlelee accompanied by the the Noble Duke visited Annandale on Monday on business and pleasure combined.

Among those who visited the G. A. R. encampment at Minneapolis were A. Conklin and wife, G. Shelly and wife, G. A. Maunts, Mrs. J. Jacobs and Mr. V. Fredricks and wife.

Chape Farnhan is contemplating building a dwelling house at the station in the spring. Chape says the station is the comming place; lots are all ready spoken for.

A party living not over five miles from here on his way to Delano with a fair sized check to be cashed ought to be more careful how he stops in public places, where he knows they do not keep any such amount of money on hand to cash them. It is poor policy to display such amount of wealth unless for the purpose of letting people know you have it. And most folks in these hard times of tramps and robbers would not sleep much without a guard if they thought the whole neighbor-hood knew where to find wealth in such an abundance.

E. Miller of Castand is visiting his family.

DIED.—As Mr. Zimri Willcutt was carring the last bag full, of a load of potatoes into Johnson Bros. store on Wednesday afternoon, he suddenly dropped to the floor and when assistance came to him was dead. Mr. Willcutt was an old settler leaves a numerous family and an aged father to morn his sudden death.

"The prosperity of a country depends, not on the abundanceof its revenues, nor on the strength of its fortifications, nor on the beauty of its public buildings; but it consists in the number of its cultivated citizens, in its men of education, enlightenment, and character, here are to be found its true interest, its chief strength, its real power."—Martin Luther.

Was Mr. Lochren's Comrade.

Editor Camp Fire: Allow me, a member of William Lochren's old regiment, to correct a very natural mistake of D. L. Beebe's in the Camp Fire of Sept. 7, in reference to the pension commissioners' record. It is true that the roster of Co. E. as given in the history of the 1st Minnesota infantry, as written by our comrade Lochren himself, says that "he was mustered in July 3, 1863," but that has reference to his muster as a 1st lieutenant. He enlisted as a private April 29, 1861, and was discharged for disability in December, 1863. I think that up to the time of his discharge, he was engaged in all the sanguinary battles in which his regiment took such a glorious part, and I never heard his courage called in question, and I shall be slow to believe that he is not actuated by a high sense of duty in his management of the pension bureau.—L. S. Wood, Co. G, 1st Min. Inf.—Toledo Blade.

A Plot to Free Poland.

WARSAW, Feb. 14.—The police here claim to have discovered an extensive conspiracy, the object of which is the freedom of Poland. The conspirators are said to include nihilists, as well as persons affiliating with members of that sect. A large number of arrests have been made, among whom are the entire editorial staffs of the two journals published here and many Catholic priests. The conspiracy is said to have extended to many other places in Poland. At Kielce a police visit was made to the seminary and college there, which resulted in the seizure of a large number of pamphlets calling on the youths of Poland to rise and free their country of Russian oppression.

List of Patents.

Vick's Floral Guide, 1894.

It contains descriptions that describe, not misleand; illustrations that instruct, not exaggerate. This year it comes to us in a suit of 8 printed in eight different colors besides black. Colored plates of Chrysanthemums, Poppies and Vegetables. On the the front cover is a very exquisite bunch of Vick's New White Branching Aster and on the back is the New Double Anemone; 112 pages filled with many new novel ties of value as well as all the old leading varities of flowers and vegetables. We advise our friends who intend doing anything in the garden this year to consult Vick before starting operations. Send 10 cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Vick's Guide. It costs nothing as you can deduct the 10 cents from the first order. It certainly will pay you. 2-tf

IT is a little singular, says the St. Paul Globe, that when two southerners meet on the street and fill each other full of bullets, they are always spoken of as "gentlemen of high social standing." It is about time that gentlemen of high social standing, or any standing whatever, ceased to carry deadly weapons and use them on the slightest provocation. The practice is a relic of barbarism that all men possessed of gentlemanly instincts should discard utterly.

"WAVES mountain high" which writers of marine "yarns" are fond of mentioning have usually been regarded as creatures of the imagination. But there was no imagination about the tidal wave seventy-five to eighty feet which struck the Normannia, almost submerged her, did a great deal of damage and compelled the ship to return to New York; nor in the experiences of the other vessels coming into port with like stories of encounters with monster waves. It is only another illustration showing that truth is stranger than fiction.

IT is told of Hannah More that she had a good way of managing talebearers. Whenever she was told anything derogatory to another her invariable reply was: "Come, we will go and ask if this be true." The effect was something ludicrously painful. The talebearer was taken aback, stammered out a qualification or begged that no notice be taken of the statement. But the good lady was inexorable; off she took the scandalmonger to the scandalized to make inquiry and compare accounts. No one ventured a second time to repeat a gossipy story to Hannah More.

THE report of the commissioner of immigration at the port of New York shows that 352,885 immigrants landed during the past year. Of these 54,576 were enable to read or write. Italy sent the largest number of immigrants, 69,074, of whom 44 per cent. were illiterates. Next in numbers were the Germans, 55,981, of whom only 1,239 were illiterates. Russia sent 37,100, of whom 11½ per cent. were illiterates. Of the 22,710 from Hungary 20 per cent. were illiterates. The greatest proportion of illiterates, 50 per cent., was among the Poles, but their number was only a little more than 5,000.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 7.—In the senate the house bill to repeal the federal election laws was passed by a vote of 39 to 28. In the house the McCreary resolution condemning Minister Stevens and sustaining the Hawaiian policy of Mr. Cleveland was adopted by a vote of 175 to 57.

THURSDAY, Feb. 8.—In the senate Senator Perkins presented the memorials of the San Francisco chamber of commerce praying for the annexation of Hawaii. Senator Wolcott (Col.) presented a resolution providing for the submission of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the states from denying suffrage to any person on account of sex. A memorial of the woolgrowers against the Wilson bill was presented by Senator Sherman. In the house the deadlock on Mr. Bland's silver seigniorage bill was broken after hours of continuous filibustering when, by a vote of 176 to 4, Mr. Bland's motion to go into committee of the whole for consideration of his bill was carried.

FRIDAY, Feb. 9.—No business was transacted in the senate to-day. The entire day in the house was consumed in debate on the Bland silver seigniorage bill.

SATURDAY, Feb. 10.—There was no session in the senate. In the house resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Representative Houk, of Ohio, were adopted and an adjournment was taken.

MONDAY, Feb. 12.—The Hawaiian controversy occupied the greater part of the time of the senate. Senator Gallinger (N. H.) introduced a substitute for the Wilson tariff bill which declares that in view of the widespread industrial depression it is the sense of the senate that it is unwise to attempt any change in the tariff laws. In the house a bill authorizing the extension of time for the construction of the high wagon bridge across the Missouri river at Sioux City, Ia., was passed. The urgency deficiency bill was also passed and a message was received from the president transmitting additional correspondence in the Hawaiian matter.

Indications are strong that work will begin soon on the wire and sheet copper mills at Great Falls.

IT BRINGS DEATH.

The Wide-Sweeping Blizzard Finds Many Victims.

Loss of Life and Great Suffering in Oklahoma—Traffic Interfered with and Business at a Standstill in the Northwest.

HORRORS OF THE STORM.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Feb. 14.—Reports come from the strip of great suffering among the homesteaders residing there. Several persons, it is reported, have perished in the storm, among them two families residing near Cross. No particulars can be obtained. Hundreds of head of stock were frozen to death.

Many people are still living in tents and as fuel is scarce the condition is awful. James Mulligan, living 4 miles south of Perry, was found Monday evening frozen to death, and his partner, Harvey Newcomb, died from exposure and cold fifteen minutes after being found. At Ponca Mrs. Jennie Cramer and two children, Lizzie and Sallie, were discovered frozen stiff in a coyote's burrow, 10 yards from their abode.

An Awful Alternative.

Word comes from Cross that Sherman Stone and family, consisting of wife and five children, were found sitting about a stove with their throats cut from ear to ear. The following note found on a table near by Stone gives a horrible story of murder and suicide in connection with the storm.

"Wood all gone. Mollie frozen to death, the rest of us freezing. I have killed my family and now kill myself to prevent further suffering. God have mercy on us."

Stone was a homesteader and lived in a tent. It is thought that after the snow melts hundreds of dead settlers will be found, along with the remains of thousands of cattle.

Other Fatalities.

Col. Henry Melton, a cowboy, who was with Buffalo Bill at the world's fair, was discovered by a party of hunters early Monday morning dead under his horse. At Anadarko two Indian pupils were found Sunday evening buried under a snowbank. Upon being taken to a house one of the children immediately expired. The other, however, showed signs of recovery. A report has reached here that a family named Sears, residing on a claim near Woodward, was found frozen to death, but no particulars can be obtained.

A Missing Schoolma'am.

Miss Jennie Johnston, a young Indian teacher, who came to Alva recently from Scranton, Pa., left her school Saturday for her boarding house. She has not been seen since. No reports have been received from other west side towns, but it is certain the suffering is great, as the west side people are living mostly in tents. All trains are delayed.

Miss Johnston's case is rather a romantic one. She recently fell heir to $20,000 at her old Pennsylvania home, and was immediately surrounded by a score of admirers. Miss Johnston, of course, thought all of her lovers were mercenary, and, feeling piqued, gathered up her effects and came west, where she secured a school.

A courier just in from Alva, another strip town, reports great suffering among the homesteaders near the river. One hundred head of horses and cattle were frozen and volunteer relief committees are now scouring the country gathering together the people and caring for them in the schoolhouses.

Worst Ever Known in Kansas.

EMPORIA, Kan., Feb. 14.—The worst storm ever known here began Sunday and lasted through the night. Not less than 2 feet of snow has fallen, and it has drifted so that in places it is 20 feet deep. Railroad traffic is stopped, trains being snowed in at numerous points. Thousands of head of cattle are endangered and a great portion of them will die of cold and lack of food. Wheat raisers see a gleam of hope in that the snow covers their crops and protects them.

Trains Snowed In.

WICHITA, Kan., Feb. 14.—Train service in this section of the state has been abandoned since Sunday. The Missouri Pacific and St. Louis & San Francisco trains stuck in the flint hill and are still there. The storm has been extremely severe, and by reason of high winds the snow varies from 1 to 15 feet in depth.

Worst Since 1885.

RACINE, Wis., Feb. 14.—The worst blizzard that has struck Racine since the memorable winter of 1885 has raged here with terrible fury. A fierce gale has swept over the city and vicinity from the lake, driving ice like snow particles, so that pedestrians were nearly blinded. Street car traffic is paralyzed and since 6 o'clock Monday night no car has been running. Great banks of snow nearly as high as the doors block the entrance to many business houses, while on the other side the walks are swept clean. The steeple of the First Baptist church, one of the handsomest structures in the city, was blown down, involving a loss of $3,000. John Janaschauck, 48 years old, while intoxicated, undressed upon the public street and lay down in a snowbank to sleep. He was discovered and taken to a hospital, where he died inside of an hour.

In Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—The storm which raged here all day Monday was the worst ever known in the line of blizzards in this vicinity. The wind blew at a rate of from 50 to 70 miles an hour. Business came to a standstill, while the wild storm tossed mountains of snow across deserted streets and boulevards. It swept the city during the early hours of morning, heaping white mounds across car tracks, filling basement stores and swirling up heaps along the sidewalks. By 8 o'clock nearly all the street car lines and many suburban trains had been choked to a standstill. The oldest inhabitant could not recollect when street traffic was blocked as it was on Monday. Horses and drivers suffered equally, and not a wagon more than was absolutely necessary was sent out. Express companies delivered only perishable freight and valuable packages yesterday and most of the wagons were drawn by four horses. Hundreds of wholesale and retail stores did not send out a wagon. A number of persons were blown off their feet by the high wind and seriously injured. By 11 o'clock p. m. the storm had died and a cold wave enveloped the city.

Other Points in Illinois.

Dispatches from various points in this state tell of the effects of the great storm. Street car and other modes of transportation were paralyzed and business completely blockaded.

Indiana Snowed Under.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 14.—A blizzard, the worst Indianapolis has experienced for years, raged for eighteen hours. It sleeted, rained and snowed alternately. The snow is over 1 foot deep. Street cars have been running only occasionally and traffic is practically suspended. What is true of Indianapolis applies to all points in this state.

In Ohio.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 14.—The blizzard which raged with such severity throughout the west Sunday night reached this city at 7 a. m. Monday. A fierce gale, accompanied by a heavy fall of fine, cutting snow, is in progress, and the storm promises to be a severe one. At noon the street car service was demoralized, only an occasional car managing to get through the heavy snowdrifts. On the Lake Shore road trains were reported as more or less delayed from the west, with a prospect of serious blockades.

Four Men Killed.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 14.—A special to the Blade from Bellevue, O., says: Two freight trains collided on the Wheeling & Lake Erie road in the storm 2 miles west of this place. Three men were killed. The trains were running at full speed, the blinding snow preventing the engineers from seeing the danger. The collision was terrific, both engines being smashed into scrap iron. The freight cars were broken into splinters and piled up in utter confusion. A wrecking train with physicians was sent from Norwalk. When it arrived the trainmen were still in the wreck, and were extricated one by one. The following were either killed outright or have died since the collision: Engineer Connell, Fireman McMullen, Engineer Sam Stowell and Brakeman Johnson.

Iowa Gets Her Share.

BURLINGTON, Ia., Feb. 1.—The worst snowstorm of the season began here Sunday evening. Eight inches of snow covers the ground and is drifting badly. The weather is very cold and all trains are delayed.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Feb. 14.—The worst blizzard experienced here for some years struck this city and raged furiously all day. Railroad people are looking for serious trouble unless the storm abates, as the wind is rapidly filling the cuts. One of the street car lines is abandoned.

In Michigan.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 14.—The blizzard which arrived here early Monday morning was the worst in several seasons. It was accompanied by much snow, deep drifts and high wind. Railroad traffic is much delayed and business was practically suspended.

In Great Britain.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—A heavy gale has prevailed in some sections, much damage resulting. At Teignmouth, in Devonshire, a church in course of erection was entirely destroyed. The spire of St. Mary's church at Shrewsbury, county of Salop, was blown down. At Peterborough, county of Northampton, the pinnacle of the parish Church of St. John was blown over and the glass roof of the Great Eastern railway station was destroyed. The English Presbyterian church at Holywell, Flintshire, Wales, was also among the buildings wrecked. A boarding school and many dwelling houses in the town were also blown down. At Newport, in South Wales, the roofs were blown off a number of houses. Several vessels have gone ashore off Margate and Ramsgate, Isle of Thanet, Devonshire. At Dudley, in Worcestershire, a number of factory chimney-stacks were blown down. In two or three instances the falling chimneys struck the factories, causing great damage. In this town many persons were injured. Scores of houses were unroofed. Communication between London and the continent is completely cut off.

A WOMAN HANGED.

Scene at an Execution in Australia—The Hangman Kills Himself.

VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 14.—The last chapter in the Brunswick baby-farming case, which stirred all Melbourne a few months ago, and for which the Makins, man and wife, were executed, is told in advices from Australia to-day. Francis Knuarr, the guilty woman, was hanged at Melbourne January 15. Anticipating trouble, three hangmen were in attendance, but the prisoner walked composedly to the scaffold, supported by the warden and medical officer. When asked if she had anything to say, she replied; "Yes; the Lord is with me. I do not fear what men can do unto me, for I have peace—perfect peace." When the bolt was drawn death was instantaneous. As the body dropped a piercing shriek for a moment appalled the witnesses of the execution until they learned that the cry was that of the matron who had attended Mrs Knuarr, and whose overwrought nerves gave way when she heard the fatal drop of her unfortunate charge. The two executions of women coming so close together appear to have checked for a time what had almost become the open business of infant murder by mercenary fiends.

Despite the plain proof that the condemned woman was guilty of the unnatural crimes, there was considerable public feeling against the execution, and this so affected the public hangman that a week before the date of execution he committed suicide by cutting his throat immediately after taking up his residence in the jail as is customary before executions. His name was William Berrino, but he was publicly known as "Jones" the hangman. He had complained to the governor of the jail that if he hanged Mrs. Knuarr he would not be able to live in Melbourne afterward, and had begged for a sufficient sum of money to enable him to leave the colony. He said even the "spirits" had combined to annoy him. He had held his office ten years and executed fifteen criminals.

LET PECKHAM DOWN EASY

Senate Committee on Judiciary to Report Without Recommendation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The senate committee on judiciary has decided to report the Peckham nomination to the senate without recommendation. Senator Hoar was absent and the committee divided evenly in its vote, Senators George, Vilas, Lindsay, Platt and Mitchell voting for confirmation and Senators Pugh, Coke, Hill, Teller and Wilson against.

Liabilities of $150,000.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 14.—The Gibson Heights Land Improvement company has filed deeds of assignment in court. It is estimated that the liabilities will approximate $150,000 and the assets will reach nearly $75,000. The company was engaged in buying real estate and erecting buildings in the western portion of the city.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Insane.

The board of trustees of the state hospital for the insane met in St. Paul for the purpose of receiving and considering the opinion of the attorney general as to the effect of the decision of the supreme court declaring the insanity laws of 1893 unconstitutional. As was expected, the attorney general decides that all the patients who have been committed to the insane asylums under the new law are entitled to their liberty and cannot be lawfully detained. This does not mean that the insane patients at present in the hospitals are at once to be set free, as such a course would be as unjust to the patients and their friends as to the general public. Steps must at once be taken, however, to secure their recommitment under the old law, either by action taken by the friends of the patients, the probate court of the county from which they were committed, or by proceedings instituted by the hospital authorities in the probate court of the county where the hospital is situated. The number of inmates at the several asylums of the state who will have to be recommitted is as follows: Rochester, 178; Fergus Falls, 50; St. Peter, 137; total, 365.

Teachers' Certificates.

The department of public instruction has given the following opinion in regard to the validity of teachers' certificates:

First—No board of education has a legal right to employ a teacher not possessed of a certificate of qualification.

Second—A verbal statement of a certifying authority that a person is entitled to or that he will have or that he has a certificate is not valid as a certificate of qualification.

Third—A certificate cannot legally be dated back of the date on which it is actually issued.

Fourth—The members of a board of education, however, could be held liable for payment that has been made to a teacher not holding a certificate of qualification.

Railway Earnings.

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway company filed statements of its gross earnings for six months ending Dec. 31 with the state auditor yesterday, the amount being $1,875,705.32, with a 3 per cent tax amounting to $56,271.07, and $17,687.01 with a 2 per cent tax of $353.74. The Duluth, Red Wing & Southern Railway company also filed a statement for 1893 of $68,762.10, the tax at 2 per cent being $1,375.24. The Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern filed statements of gross earnings for the year as follows: State line to Ellsworth, $4,913.12, tax at 2 per cent $98.26; state line to South Dakota, $117,612.40, tax at 2 per cent $2,352.25; state line to Albert Lea and Worthington, $94,048.78, tax at 3 per cent $2,821.46.

Powers of School Trustees.

Attorney General Childs has given an opinion in the department of public instruction on the authority of school trustees. The question arose in Mower county, in a district near Austin, where a popular vote had decided that schools should be held three months in winter and two months in summer. The trustees, however, settled the matter to suit themselves, and held the term for five consecutive months. The people appealed to Supt. Pendergast, who referred the matter to the attorney general. Gen. Childs holds that as five months' school is the legal term, the trustees had a right to hold it as they chose.

The Coal Combine Case.

In the case of J. J. Rhodes against R. A. Walsh and the other members of the coal combine committee, Judge Otis of Ramsey county has filed an order setting aside the judgment and granting leave to answer upon the payment of $10 costs and of all the expenses of reference and entry, including the referee's fees, within five days.

MY RIVAL.

Her heart was all mine until he came along,
My rival, the hero of this little song.
With so much against him I marvel that he
For even a moment can dispossess me.
He is not so tall by some inches (my height
For a number of years has been her delight),
Has never a sign of a beard on his chin,
And the hair on his head is decidedly thin;
Yet, the very first time she saw him she said:
"The darling, I love him!" and tears for joy shed.

His eyes they are blue and blue eyes in a man
She detests as only a good woman can;
Regarding his teeth—about them the less said
The better—he has not a tooth in his head!
He not only chews gum, but chews gums, which is worse;
A sin she abhors as a positive curse.
My rival? I smiled—a ridiculous thought!—
And into her presence the strange prince brought
And, the very first moment she saw him she said:
"The darling, I love him!" and tears for joy shed.

My rival! Believe me, I love him full well
Or defects in his make-up I never would tell.
The place he has taken I want him to keep Close, close to her heart! Hear her sing him to sleep?
And yet—notwithstanding—I want you to know
He's a rival unrivaled. Go search high and low
(Don't look in your cradle for any such joy)
And find if you can such a sweet baby boy
No wonder the moment she saw him she said:
"The darling, I love him!" and tears for joy shed.

MERCEDES.

The Story of a Brave Little Mexican Girl.

It is midwinter, yet the sun blazes down upon Santa Catalina with Junetime warmth, and lush grasses stand tall by every water course.

The soft air scarce stirs the leaves of the stately eucalyptus; no sound breaks the silence save the humming of bright-winged insects darting hither and thither and the murmur of breakers along the shore.

Across the restless expanse of waters the Californian coast line is dimly seen, like a gray cloud upon the horizon, and nearer gleams the white sail of a ship outward bound.

Down where the sand has formed in drifts, high heaped by the action of the tide, a child, stretched prone in the sunshine, is watching the course of a fishing smack that is making for the harbor below. At her feet lies a basket filled with treasures that the incoming tide has brought.

This is one of Mercedes' daily tasks, to roam the beach, gathering up feathery sea mosses and the curious, many-tinted shells, to be carried with Pacheco's catch of fish or load of game snared in the canyons to the distant mainland.

When she is so fortunate as to find rare specimens the tourists at San Pedro are often pleased to give her a "bit" for the pretty souvenirs.

"Keep it, Carita, and buy a bright ribbon for yourself," the father says when she would tender him her mite.

She is the only daughter among seven lusty lads, but that alone is not the reason they are so gentle with her.

Dowered richly with beauty of the dark, Spanish type, eyes soft, velvety, appealing, cheeks the vivid hue of the pomegranate blossom, a form slenderly graceful—the halting step alone betrays her pitiful condition, for she is a cripple.

During the summer months Santa Catalina is astir with merry campers, but at this season the island is seldom visited, except now and then by a stray tourist, who, intent on viewing the beauties of this picturesque retreat, braves the discomforts of a rough passage in the unwieldy fishing boats.

It was in this manner that we—a party of five, including myself—made the voyage from San Pedro, landing at Avalon, a hamlet on the eastern coast of the island, the latter part of December.

I had just recovered from a lingering illness, and having received "marching orders" from the good old doctor, joined a gang of surveyors bound for the islands. The crisp, salt air seemed to put new life into me at once, and when during our passage the wind died out of our sails, I took my turn at the oar with the rest of them.

"That was a toughish pull," said Boyce, the foreman, as our boat keel grated on the shingle. "'Twould 'most give a fellow an appetite for a tomale, eh, boys?"

"There may be a hotel in the place," I hazarded. "Perhaps we can get a bite to stay our stomachs before we begin unloading"—a proposition enthusiastically received. At this moment a little Mexican girl who had been watching our awkward management of the boat with wondering eyes drew near, and shyly proffered the desired information in pretty, broken English.

"The hotel, senor? You have only to walk a very short way beyond," pointing where, rising above an intervening bluff, the steep roof of that building was visible. "Shall I show the senor the path?"

So, falling in her wake, we scrambled up the sloping, pebble-strewn beach, our arms weighted with fishing tackle and sundry portions of a camping outfit, for we were going to explore the length and breadth of this rocky islet, formerly the possession of a powerful Indian tribe and the rendezvous of smugglers in olden time.

The latter fact I learned in subsequent chats with our new-found friend, the Mexican girl Mercedes, who was versed in island lore, as her father was born and bred in the place, and Mercedes herself had never left it save on rare visits to the mainland.

As the days passed and we became more familiar to her, the little maiden lost much of her shyness and constantly accompanied her brothers, who often went with us in our inland expeditions.

From the first she had shown a decided preference for my society, following me about like a shadow.

I had found it a simple matter to win her childish regard—a handful of shells, picked up during my rambles and added to her store; the gift of a gaudy scarf, at which she had gazed longingly as it hung in the window of the single shop the place boasted—these secured ready passport to her favor. I afterward had cause to be thankful that I did these trifling acts of kindness—that I made her my friend.

One morning my wife and nine-year-old daughter, Lillian, arrived unexpectedly via the small steamer Falcon, that made occasional trips from San Pedro to the island.

"What foolish freak brought you to Catalina, my dear?" I asked, as we watched from the hotel veranda the antics of Lily and Mercedes, who were already fast friends.

"Why foolish?" she queried, demurely.

"A woman's answer, truly! To-morrow I am to leave these snug quarters and go into camp a dozen miles away; what then is to become of your ladyship?"

"My ladyship will go likewise," she replied, smiling.

"Remember," I argued, "that the burro is the only means of inland transportation, the trail is dangerous if one is not used to riding, and you will find these cool nights very uncomfortable in camp." But the spirit of adventure was rife. Lily clamored to go, and I finally gave in.

During our conversation Mercedes had remained silent, but I noted the wistful look in her eyes.

"I think Mercedes would like to go with us," said I.

"No doubt it would be a treat for her, poor girl," my wife responded. "Come here, little one!" beckoning the child to a seat by her side. "Do you never get lonely here by yourself?"

"Ah, no, senora! I have always this," stretching out her hands with a tender gesture toward the sea. It had murmured her cradle lullaby, and she knew and loved its varying moods.

"Then there are many people here in summer, and often they speak with me; when they come no more I gather my shells and help mend the nets."

"Have you no playmates?"

"I had a sister once—she died," softly.

"I will be your sister, Mercedes," cried Lily, impulsively.

"So you shall, dear," said I. "Ah! there is Pacheco homeward-bound with a fine string of fish," and waylaying the child's father, I told him our plans respecting Mercedes, to which he gave ready consent.

There was quite a gathering of natives about the hotel in the morning to wish us "Buenos dias" as our cavalcade set out, led by Mexican Joe, a venerable islander, who was to act in the capacity of cook and general utility man.

We were to make the trip by easy stages, stopping over night at the Indian mounds, a place I had long contemplated visiting.

Joe assured me that he knew the mound locality well, and confident that a rich harvest would reward the diligent explorer—for stone implements, beads, bits of wampum, and even the skulls and bones of departed warriors had been unearthed by the islanders—I added pick and shovel to our camping outfit.

The trail, following the coast, was ascending and sometimes wound perilously near the edge of the cliff. Looking down a hundred feet or more, one could see the foaming breakers dashing on the rocks below. Everything delighted the children; they laughed and chatted and sang until we caught their merry mood, and a gay party we were, indeed.

The sun was high in the heavens when we arrived at the mounds, so, with appetites made keen by the long ride in the bracing morning air, we set about preparing the mid-day meal. Old Joe limped away to gather firewood; my wife summoned the children, who were culling the golden poppies that grew in profusion along the cliff's edge, to help unpack the lunch, while I, jug in hand, made for a canyon near by in search of water. I found a trickling stream dripping from the moss-clad bowlders, and the jug was soon filled. It might have been fifteen minutes before I left the canyon; as soon as I came in sight of camp I knew that something was amiss. Old Joe ran toward me, shouting and motioning wildly; on the verge of the cliff I saw my wife kneeling, Mercedes beside her, but—where was Lily?

In an instant I realized the worst—Lily had fallen from the cliff. My brain reeled with the horror of the thought, and I called to my wife beseeching her to leave that awful place. Why did she still kneel and gaze down upon the mangled form lying on the cruel rocks?

"Senor," the old Mexican was saying, "the child not hurt—she cling to the ledge. We must have ropes!"

Alive! I grasped a sturdy root and swung myself over the abyss. Far below, upon a narrow, crumbling ledge, Lily lay, her fall arrested by a dense growth of brush.

"Quick! the ropes!" I shouted to Joe.

Those used in lashing the burro's pack in place were all we had. Joe was rapidly knotting them together. "Pray God they may not be too short!" gasped the child's mother.

"Ah!" the Mexican exclaimed, "the rope too old. If the senor go down it break."

"Listen!" cried Mercedes. "The rope will hold me. I will go to her."

Even as she spoke we slipped the noose under her arms, and, as we grasped the rope, swung off the rock.

I would not live those moments again for wealth untold.

Would the rope reach Lily? Would it bear the weight of both?

These were the thoughts that almost stopped my heart-beats, while inch by inch was lowered the brave child, perhaps to her death.

At length the strain on the rope ceased.

"She has reached the ledge," breathed the trembling mother. "She slips the noose from her body and fastens it under Lily's arms. Pull! Pull!"

And we pulled, slowly, steadily, until loving mother arms reached out and drew the unconscious child from the very brink of death, her tiny hand still clenched about the brilliant-hued poppies that had so nearly proved her destruction.

And now for one more effort! Would the frayed strands part under the heavier weight? In breathless silence the rope was lowered, and we waited the signal to pull up.

I remember how, even at that moment, the beauty of the scene appealed to me.

The golden sunshine flooded sea and land.

Above us bent the cloudless blue of a tropic sky; and I could but wonder if our Father, who made all things so fair, would suffer the sun to shine and the birds to sing if that brave young life was to be sacrificed.

That of which I write occurred many years ago. As I pen these closing lines my eyes fall upon a missive received this morning from an eastern convent school.

"Mercedes and I will soon be with you," it reads. "We have passed our examination and graduate in June."

The father and mother have long been dead, the brothers are scattered, and Mercedes fills a daughter's place in our hearts and home.—Home Magazine.

Royal Buckwheats.

For generations it has been the custom to mix the batter for buckwheat cakes with yeast or emptyings, retaining a portion of the batter left over from one morning to raise the cakes for the following day.

If kept too warm, or not used promptly, this batter becomes excessively sour and objectionable. Buckwheat cakes raised by this means are more often sour or heavy than light and sweet. If eaten daily they distress the stomach and cause skin eruptions and itching.

Instead of the old-fashioned way we have been making buckwheat cakes this winter with Royal Baking Powder, mixing the batter fresh daily, and find the result wonderfully satisfactory. They are uniformly light and sweet, more palatable and wholesome, and can be eaten continuously without the slightest digestive inconvenience. Besides they are mixed and baked in a moment, requiring no time to rise. Following is the receipt used:

Two cups of pure buckwheat flour (not "prepared" or mixed); one cup of wheat flour, two tablespoons of Royal Baking Powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt, all sifted well together. Mix with milk into a thin batter and bake at once on a hot griddle. Once properly tested from this receipt, no other buckwheat will find its way to your table.—Domestic Cookery.

STORY OF A GRIZZLY'S SKIN.

A Tale of Slaughter and Superstition Among the Eskimos of Alaska.

While in Alaska last summer Dr. I. F. Everhart, the amateur ornithologist and taxidermist, of Franklin avenue, Scranton, Pa., heard a story that set him to hustling like a professional animal collector. This was what he heard from the natives:

Last February five members of the Eagle tribe of Eskimo Indians wounded a deer near the mouth of a narrow canon that extended into the side of a high mountain. The deer ran up the canon, and the five native hunters followed it in single file. Three of the hunters had spears, and the other two carried almost worthless old Danish muskets. The wounded deer held out until it reached the perpendicular head of the canon in the face of the mountain, where the Eskimos overtook and killed it with their spears. No sooner had the hunters loaded up their game and started back than they saw a huge grizzly bear striding up the canon through the snow. The canon was so narrow that the hunters couldn't pass the ferocious grizzly; they were unable to make him turn back, and to flee from him was impossible. The Eskimos were completely hemmed in, and when the grizzly undertook to get possession of the deer they fought him off with their rude weapons. One of the hunters fired a musket ball at the bear, but that only stung him to madness, for the bullet didn't penetrate his thick hide, and he sprang at the men and disemboweled two of them at one stroke of his mammoth claws. The other three made great efforts to stab the grizzly with their spears, and in the brave fight for life all but one fell dead under the monster's powerful strokes. The only one that escaped injury finally laid the murderous brute low by piercing his heart with the point of a spear.

The tribe became wild with anguish when the single survivor of the tragedy in the canon carried the sad news to them. After they had taken care of the dead bodies of their companions they skinned the gigantic grizzly and preserved the hide as a precious relic. Out of the bear's bones the members of the Eagle band erected a crude monument on the spot where the four Eskimos had met death while fighting the grizzly, placing the bones in such a form that the spirits of their dead comrades when they returned from the happy hunting grounds for a season might rest there in peace and view the scene of their final struggle on earth.

This was the story Dr. Everhart heard, and after he had ascertained that it was true in every detail he got an interpreter and set out to visit the tribe for the purpose of buying the skin of the big grizzly. His first offer for the skin was $15. The chief of the tribe and all of his underlings spurned the offer, telling the doctor through his interpreter that no amount of money could buy the grizzly's hide, for the reason that, in the first place, it was too precious a souvenir to part with, and in the second place, because the tribe were keeping the colossal skin in order that the spirits of their dead comrades might find warmth and comfort in the fur whenever they returned from the happy hunting grounds on occasion. It was an easy resting place for the spirits, they said, and the long and short of it was that no man in Alaska had money enough to buy the skin. Dr. Everhart raised the offer to $30, but the chief wouldn't listen, and it looked as though the hide couldn't be got at any price. Finally, Dr. Everhart recalled the fact that he had heard that the Eskimo Indians held a medicine man in great awe and reverence, and so he requested the interpreter to tell the chief that the man who desired to purchase the great bear skin was a physician; that he could cure all human ills; that he had come direct from the great white father down in Washington, and that he would so arrange and protect the grizzly's skin at his home in Pennsylvania that the spirits of the dead Eskimos might nestle in its fur as often and as long as they cared to. The doctor also raised the bid to $50.

As soon as the interpreter had conveyed the doctor's statement to the chief the latter held a long consultation with his principal lieutenants, and in the debate the avarice of the tribe got the best of their superstition for the chief told the interpreter to inform the great and good medicine man from the high and mighty white father in Washington that he might have the bear's hide for $55. Dr. Everhart could hardly get out the money soon enough to suit himself, he was so afraid the Eskimos would change their minds, but they didn't, and he thus secured the finest hide that has ever been brought to Scranton. The grizzly's skin has been lined with heavy felt, and is now used as a rug on the floor of Dr. Everhart's office, where the enthusiastic amateur has also a fine collection of stuffed animals and birds for the free inspection of the public at all times. The great bear's hide measures nearly eight feet from paw to paw, the claws are three inches long and perfect, the nose and head are lifelike and the longest fur measures seven inches. The lucky collector values the skin at more than $500, and you couldn't buy it of him for twice that sum.—N. Y. Sun.

Obliging.

Under ordinary conditions he was a man of prominence—but as he ascended the steps of his residence, very early in the morning, it was evident that he desired to be as much otherwise as possible. The cabby was lingering near to see that his charge was safely disposed of for the night. The door opened before the man on the steps could get his key to work, and he was met with the question:

"John, where have you been?"

(Silence.)

"John, where have you been?"

He turned to descend the steps.

"Are you going to answer my question?"

"Yesh, my dear, I am. From my pers'nal knowledge I can't give the desired inf'mation, 'n I'm goin' to ask the man that drives the hack."—Life.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Baked Cranberry Pudding.—Place a quart of berries in an earthen bake dish. Add two cupfuls of sugar. Cover with a light crust. Bake in moderate oven one-half hour. Serve with hard sauce.—Good Housekeeping.

—Stewed Prunes.—Wash the prunes in cold water. Soak them in tepid water about two hours, and set the whole on the fire and boil gently. When half done, add sugar to taste. If the water boils away too much add more.—Boston Budget.

—Batter Pudding.—Twelve tablespoonfuls of flour, nine eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, and one quart of milk. Beat the yolks of the eggs, stir in the flour, and add the milk slowly. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, and add just before putting in the oven. Bake one hour.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

—Chocolate Caramels.—Dissolve over a fire one cupful of molasses and two teacupfuls of sugar; add one-quarter of a pound of grated chocolate and a piece of butter the size of an egg; boil for fifteen or twenty minutes; pour into flat, buttered dishes to the depth of a quarter inch, and when cold cut into squares an inch in size.—N. Y. World.

—Layer Nut Cake.—One-fourth pound butter, one pound sugar, one teacupful sweet milk, three-fourths pound of flour, whites of seven eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful extract of lemon, one-half teacupful of cornstarch. Cream butter and sugar, add milk with cornstarch, flavoring, flour, and lastly, the eggs beaten stiff. Bake in layers. Frosting: Beat the whites of two eggs stiff with four ounces of sugar, one and one-half teacupfuls hickory nut meats.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Beef Stew.—Procure a five or ten-cent soup bone, which is usually half meat. Cover with boiling water and place where it will simmer for several hours until the bone can be removed, leaving the meat. Cut this in small pieces, add salt, pepper, a few raw potatoes sliced, sliced onions if one likes, if not a small pinch of celery seed, thyme or other flavoring. Boil for half an hour or longer, then add dumplings made as for biscuit, only stirred stiff instead of rolled. Cover closely and boil for fifteen minutes, when it is ready to serve.—Housekeeper.

—Small Almond Cakes.—Chop half a pound of citron and mix with it three-quarters of a pound of shelled almonds which have been blanched and sliced into halves. Beat six eggs thoroughly and cream into them three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Add the nuts and citron, and, after thoroughly mixing, sift gradually into the mixture half a pound of flour. Pour the batter into long, shallow tins, which have been well buttered. Bake in a quick oven. When done roll in powdered almonds and sugar. Packed carefully in tin these cakes will keep almost indefinitely.—N. Y. World.

—Fried Hasty Pudding.—Put one quart of water on to boil. Mix one pint of corn meal, one heaping tablespoonful of flour and one teaspoonful of salt, with one pint of cold milk. Stir this gradually into the boiling water and boil three-quarters of an hour, stirring often. Fill a bread pan with cold water and let it stand a few minutes. Throw out the water and pour in the mush. When cold turn out on a platter, cut in slices three-quarters of an inch thick, roll them in flour and brown each side in hot fat in a frying pan. Or roll the slices in crumbs, dip in egg, roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat.—Boston Budget.

ENGLISH PHEASANT SHOOTING.

The Farce of Hunting the Birds as a Sport.

Why does anybody go to the expense and bother of hatching out birds and keeping them on the premises—whether by means of coops or "non-straying mixtures"—until they are ready for shooting, when they can be bought ready-made for the purpose? One enterprising tradesman was advertising the other day:

"Two thousand full-wing young cock pheasants for shooting. Also two thousand last season's pheasants; price low this season."

"Cock pheasants for shooting" means, I take it, birds properly bred and fattened, and educated up to the business. And a great convenience it must be to those who have to entertain royal and noble sportsmen, to be able to lay in the raw material for big bags at a few days' notice.

What I want to know is, why the shooting of beasts cannot be brought up to date, as the shooting of birds has been? Why does not the Zoological society undertake to send out lions, tigers, and big game generally, properly fattened up, and not too fresh to be "battued" in the parks of the aristocracy and plutocracy? Why should it be necessary to travel all the way to South Africa, and undergo all sorts of fatigue and inconveniences—possibly even personal danger—in the pursuit of sport?"

At the German imperial hunts it is now the practice to keep a careful record of the names of the sportsmen and of the game killed by each of them. A guest may get possession of the antlers of a stag, the horns of a buck, or the tusks of a wild boar, if he wants to carry any such mementoes of the sport; but the body of an animal cannot be obtained unless its full market value is paid to the treasury of the court hunting office. Even the emperor is subject to the rule, and the whole of the game which is killed is sold en bloc to dealers, under the superintendence of the chief forester in whose district the hunt has taken place.—London Truth.

Flesh-Eaters of the Ocean.

Such fierce carnivorous fishes as exist in the depths of the ocean are unknown at the surface. There is a "black swallower," which devours other finny creatures ten times as big as itself, literally climbing over its victim first with one jaw and then with the other. Another species is nearly all mouth and has no power of locomotion. It lies buried in the soft ooze at the bottom, its head alone protruding, ready to ingulf any prey that may wander into its cavernous jaws. There is a ferocious kind of shark, resembling a huge eel. All of these monsters are black as ink. Some of them are perfectly blind, while others have enormous goggling eyes. No ray of sunshine ever pierces the dark, unfathomed caves in which they dwell. Each species is gobbled by the species next bigger, for there is no vegetable life to feed on.—Spare Moments.

EDUCATION AND LOVE.

He Decided to Let One Go to Get the Other.

Riding along in a valley of the Cumberland mountains one afternoon I came to a schoolhouse built of logs. It was evidently for summer scholars only, as there were wide cracks between the logs, and the doors and windows were merely holes of varying size sawed out of the solid. The scholars were having a recess and the teacher was sitting on a stump by the roadside, evidently in trouble. I greeted him and stopped a moment to ask the way. He answered so gloomily that I was alarmed.

"What's wrong?" I asked; "are you sick?"

"I reckon I am, mister," he replied; "but it can't be cured with medicines, leastways no doctor medicine."

"You must be in love," I ventured with a half-laugh.

He looked up quickly and his face flushed.

"How j'ou know?" he asked. "Is thar signs uv it on me?"

"Some few," I answered confidently, for I knew by the telltale flush what hurt him.

"You've guessed it, mister," he confessed. "I knowed it 'ud begin to show through purty soon."

"How long have you had it?"

"Oh, fer nigh onto six months, but it only broke out about four days ago."

"And the girl wouldn't have you?"

"You guess closeter enough to make me kinder reckon you've had it yourself," he said.

"We all do some time," I told him as an encourager.

"Tain't ketchin', is it?" he asked nervously.

"Well, I should say it was, after a fashion."

"Gals don't seem to ketch it."

"They do, just the same."

"Well, by gosh, this one I'm talkin' 'bout ain't cotch it; anyhow not from me."

"What's the matter? Why doesn't she?"

"I'll be dinged ef I know. I reckon it's eddication what does it."

"Education?" I inquired, slightly astonished.

"Yes, you see I'm a school teacher, an' have got eddication, an' she ain't got enough to know a 'rithmetic from a joggerfy."

"But that shouldn't make any difference."

"Reckon it does, though, mister. Leastaways, when I fust sot in, we got along mighty peart, an' then I got kinder stuck up and began to sling adjectives an' pronouns an' verbs an' conjunctions an' adverbs an' participles into my language, an' four nights ago I let her have a lot of syntax an' a participial adverb, an' dog my cats ef she didn't git on a high hoss an' ain't spoke to me sence, I reckon that participial adverb was the hound that skeered the rabbit. Mister," said he, coming up to me, "hadn't I better drap the eddication?"

"Why not drop the girl?" I asked.

"Thunder, mister, she's drapped me," he exclaimed, "an' it hurts."

"But there are other girls," I suggested, "and there is only one education."

"No, mister," he said solemnly, "ther's only one gal in these mountains fer me, an' ef ther's only one eddication it's got to git out of the way fer the gal. That's what was troublin' me when you rid up, an' it's settled. It's time to take up from recess now. Good-by," and he started toward the schoolhouse shouting "Books, books!" in a strong exultant voice.—Detroit Free Press.

Early Corn Over One Foot Long. [K]

Salzer illustrates in a colored plate a new early corn, a giant of its kind and offers $300 in gold for the largest ear in 1894. In addition to this early Giant corn, which yielded in 1893 110 bushels per acre, he has over twenty other prolific field corns. He has the best fodder corn in the world. He is the largest grower of farm seeds, oats, barley, wheat, millet, potatoes, etc., in America. Fifty kinds of grasses and clovers.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND IT with 15c to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive a large package of above Giant corn and his mammoth catalogue. ]K]

Ugly Tempers

Are a product of bad digestion. Your dyspeptic is almost invariably a cross-patch. The way to renew cheerfulness of disposition and an equable temper soured by indigestion, is to take a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which not only banishes dyspepsia, but also relieves biliousness, constipation, chills and fever, rheumatism and kidney trouble. Use it with persistence three times a day.

DELANO DIARY

—Read J R. Elliots ad in another column and note the new place of business.

—The Watertown stage has changed hands Mort Mallsed is now proprietor, having bought out the former owners.

—J. D. Young is having some very fine ice put up at his ice house on his farm adjoining town. The river furnishes the ice.

—When in Minneapolis don't forget to call on J. R. Elliot at his new Jewelry store: finest in the city, 428 and 430 Nicollet Avenue.

—Read Superintedent Lindsley's notice of teachers examinations in another column. Be prompt and get all the good of the quizz.

—The Woodland Creamery is being moved to Watertown, by its owners, Ray and Burk, who expect to run it in good shape this summer.

—The M. E sociable held at Peter Church's last Friday evening was well attended, there being about 100 persons present, most of them from Delano. Quite an enjoyable time was had.

—Mr. Arthur Powell, of the State University is engaged in forming a Company of Epworth Guards at this place. He has already secured a goodly number and present prospects are for a full company.

—Hicks weather seems to be hooping it up all along the line from Oklahoma to Chicago, Boston and even England, but Delano basks in the balmy sunshine a good share of the time. So far Delanoites have no cause for complaint against the weather this winter.

—Mrs. Hellen Bain was doing business in town Wednesday, She disclaims any knowledge of her pension having been increased as announced some time since. Our local pension agent must not take more credit unto himself in getting pension claims allowed then really belongs to him.

—If you want to keep up with the times, subscribe for the Weekly St. Paul Globe and the BUFFALO GAZETTE for one year for $1 30. This offer wont last long. Now is your time. Old subscribers paying one year in advance can avail themselves of the opportunity.

—Evangelistic meetings are being held in the Presbyterian church this week. Rev. Powell postponed the intended services at the M. E church on this account.

Since writing the above we learn that the meetings have been indifinitely postponed.

—Charley Franzen has so far recovered from his injuries as to have been out of doors a few days since. Feeling pretty well he tried to go from the sitting room to the kitchen after returning to the house, when he slipped and bursted the end of his amputated leg open, requiring a few more days of laying up for repairs.

—Several farmers in this neighborhood have been loudly denouncing a Minneapolis seed firm's actions in not, as they claim, fulfilling their end of the contracts entered, promptly, into concerning raising seed corn. It is claimed the firm instead of taking the corn as they did last year waited to dry it and in other ways reduce the farmer's profits for raising it. Be fair gentlemen.

—Some of the young folks who attended the sociable at Peter Church's tell a good story on a couple of boys with their girls: they were not acquainted with the road and concluded to let the horses find it in the dark on the way home. After awhile they came to the end of the road and found they had arrived at a farmer's barn, a mile or so out of the way. It is safe to look out for the road and not trust too much to animal instincts.

—Coasting on White's hill is all the rage now nights, and is enjoyed by many of the older people as well as the children.

--The ladies of the Presbyterian church held a sociable at the residence of M. A. O'Hair last evening. A very pleasant time was reported.

--A party of young people from Delano attended a very plesant sociable at the residents of Wm. Sturman, about three miles out of town, last evening.

—We are requested to announce that the Criterian Comedy, will present after Lent. A two-act comedy drama, entitled, "Under a Cloud." Particulars later.

—Wednesday last was Valentine's day, but, owing to the financial stringency of the money market, very few were sent, especially around Delano. We did not get any (?)

—We can furnish subscribers for the GAZETTE who pay in advance the GAZETTE and the St Paul Weekly Globe for $1 30 for a year. Subscriptions for the Daily Globe will also be received at this office. Now is your chance.

—Many patrons of saloons even, are becoming so disgusted with the continued serving out of liquors to old drunkards by some of our saloon keepers as to threaten to vote for no license at the coming spring election if the opportunity presents. A saloon that continually has hanging about waiting for a drink from one to half a dozen old topers is certainly not a very elevating place in any community.

—One of our Hennepin county subscribers asked us some time since which was the county paper of that county. We informed him that we did not know, in rather a shamed faced way; but would try to find out, we enquired of persons we thought ought to know, only to lean that they were as ignorant about the matter as ourselves. The enquirer was in the office since and tells us that for two years he has been trying to find out; has enquired of business men in Minneapolis but has not yet learned which paper claims that honor. Perhaps the County Auditor of Hennepin will kindly enlighten us on the subject? Every county ought to have a paper to which people could refer as authority on county affairs.

—Some of our readers have, we understand, engaged in warm discussions over Mr. Donnelly's advice to the farmers to borrow all the money they can get" for 10 per cent interest with 5 per cent bonus reserved to the owner, "as the mortgages are not worth the paper they are written on." One of our Republican readers tackled an Alliance man, also a reader of the GAZETTE. The only defense the Alliance man offered we are told is that Mr. Donnelly never meant it the way people take it. Does he expect people to believe Mr. D. unable to express himself? When I. D. adds as a part of the advice "If possible have the testimony of a third party to help prove the facts" does he not mean exactly what he says? If the Sage has arrived at that condition where he does not mean what he says perhaps it would be wise for farmers and others to find another leader.

Personals.

Mrs. M. J. Mulford spent Sunday at Elbow Lake.

Dr. N. W Chaney, of Elbow Lake, was in town last Saturday.

Rockford's station agent smiled on his many Delano friends Wednesday.

Misses Tresler and Barbary Bauman returned from a visit to St. Peter Tuesday.

Miss Tillie Buckman, of Howard Lake, was the guest of Miss Mable Young yesterday.

William Douglas, of Montrose with his son, made Delano a business visit on Wednesday.

Mrs. Beede, principal of the Howard Lake schools, passed through town on Friday evening.

H. E. Grafft left Monday for a trip of about five weeks in the interest of the Eagle Paper House.

Rev. Frank R. Millspaugh held Episcopal services at the Presbyterian church on Monday evening.

Frank Barth, Watertown's prosperous merchant passed through town enroute for the cities on Wednesday.

Mrs. T S Kerr and Mr Wright came over from Buffalo on Monday. Mrs. K. Was on her way home to Minneapolis.

Editors Buckley and Catlin are attending the meeting of the State Editorial Association in Minneapolis today.

"Happy Frank" Revell, of Litchfield, representing the Pearsons Implement Company of New York, was in Delano yesterday.

Miss Belle VanEman, of Dassel, spent the latter part of last week and the fore part of this week, visiting Delano and Watertown friends.

Miss Nanny Conroy, who has been visiting with Editor Buckley and family for the past two weeks, left for her home at White Bear on Wednesday afternoon.

Sam Pape passed through Delano last night on his return to Hancock. He was called East a few weeks ago by a telegram, announcing the illness of his father, who died. Sam has the heartfelt sympathy of his numerous friends around Delano.

County Cullings.

The Boards of Supervisors of Franklin and Rockford township are to meet at the Sampsel bridge next Monday and examine into the condition of that structure with a view to repairing it or building a new bridge as the case calls for.

Talk about Democrats being "hungry for office!" The Princeton Union of this week prints the names of 22 Republicans, "good and true," who are in the ring for nomination at the next State convention, and this is only the first week in February.—St. Cloud Times.

Of course it is right to notify all parties interested in order that they may take the action most agreeable to them; but it is not right, it is not just, it is not human to try to force them to take the most expensive course—the most impractial course—by threatening them with the worst that can be done.

Considerable complaint is being heard about the irregularity of mails now-a-days. Things don't get around in time and some are said to never be received. About the worst case is the loss of a lady's dress, in two packages, put up at Delano for Waverly and never heard of afterwards. Perhaps it has gone to Waverly, Iowa, or some other state. What can a mail clerk want with a dress?

From the Cokato Herald we learn that John Tracy, of that village has "got $200 State reward for the capture of a horse thief, in his inside pocket." John is said to have passed the train in his pony team on the road to Minneapolis to overtake the fellow with the horse. He was in a hurry so long as the man wasn't captured. But it seems as if he is a good hand to hang on to rewards: or that the authorities were not so lively in paying it as John was in earning it.

At the meeting of the Board of County Commissioners commencing Feb 1, at Buffalo the full board was present. The following requests for abatement of taxes were approved and recommended to the state auditor: John Prohl, Andrew Bronstrom, John Schefchek, M. B Bryant, Otto Ueker, Mary Lindsley, Henry Bud, Peter Dietrich, Henry Luderbach, O. O. Sassg, Anthony Nee, Jennie Gardner, Gotlieb Martie, and Rosseau rothers. The request of John Dynan was rejected.

The following school petitions were granted: Martin Hackbert, Geo A. Bridges and John Pribyl; Rejected Wm Schuman.

H T. Moland reported earnings for year $410.10, as County Surveyor.

Geo. C. Carpenter reported year's fee's as sheriff. $1600 37.

E O Brewster's bonds for $500 for careful handling of county records in making abstracts were accepted J. T. Alley and W. E. Culkin being surities.

The County Attorney gave an opinion adverse to changing the designation of the paper to print the delinquent tax list. The bonds of H. S. Saylor, for $1500, with Carl Luhman and E. Y Chilton as surities were accepted and the Howard Lake Herald will do that work. An Auctioneers license was granted to C. A. Cummings upon his filing bonds according to statutes.

Louis W. Haefer was authorized to rebank the Hanover bridge not to cost more than $150. Charles Bugbee to rebank the Rockford bridge not to cost more than $200.

The bills of Carlton county for burying James Taggart, an alleged Wright county pauper were rejected.

The usual number of bills were allowed.

A special session to be held Feb. 6.

The calamity howling protectionists don't want things to pick up. Disaster is the only safeguard.--Bede's Budget.

"I want every Catholic during this holy season of Lent to practice self-denial to the extent of refraining from the drink habit. It was with these words that Archbishop Ireland concluded his remarks yesterday at the Cathedral.—St. Paul Globe.

The Annandale Post, will appear next week under new management, new head letter etc, under the editorial Supervision of Mr. J N. Rickerson. Mr. Rickerson is well known in this part of the country, having spent several years on the county papers.--Annandale Post.

The outcome of the Merritt Rockefeller combination is that the Merritt boys come out penniless and Rockefeller owns the railroad, ore docks and mines and has the quarter million dollars voted by the county in his vest pocket for spending money. While scientists are looking around for an absorbent, they musn't overlook the standard oil man.--Bede's Budget.

Dr. Owens, the latest cipher artist on the authorship of the Shakespeare plays, agrees with Donnelly that Bacon wrote them. He also admits that Bacon wrote the works of Marlowe, Green, Spenser, Peele, Burton and others who have heretofore enjoyed the copyright on their own remaks. It is not charged, however, that he wrote the Congressional Record. —Minneapolis Times.

Candidates for state auditor are daily being sprung in almost every county in the state. By the time the convention convenes it is hoped by this means to have Bob Dunn thoroughly done up. If the country districts would also trot out local candidates for governor, lieuten ant-governor, secretary of state, attorney general and state treasurer, to say nothing of United States Senator, turn out to the caucuses and retire the local politicians who but do time service for the state bosses, there would be less dissatisfaction with the party, less kicking, less abuse of power. Bring out your candidates freely from every county for every office and see the bosses kick.- Midway News.

Hill Would't Be In It.

Senator Hill, it is reported, hints of resigning if Peckham is confirmed. If the matters were submitted to a popular vote with this proviso Peckham would go in by a tremendous majority. —Indianapolis News.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

GROVER knocked the stuffing out of Hill's "Senatorial Courtesy" when he nominated Senator White for the Supreme Court vacancy.

SAM JONES lectured to St. Paul and Minneapolis people this week. Sam is a drawing card as alecturer and entertains his audiences.

J. ADAM BEDE, is loosing no opportunity to let folks know who he is. There will be no trouble on this score by the time he is able to secure his office and move in. Everybody will be congratulating him as if they always knew him.

SEPERINTENDENT GREGG, is holding a Farmer's institute in Minneapolis this week. Perhaps some of the surplus inhabitants of that city may be induced to become tillers of the soil, after being made acquainted with some of the advantages of farm life.

ONE by one the laws passed by the last legislature, a majority of the members of which were elected for the sole purpose of electing C. K Davis to the United States Senate, and without a single thought as to to their fitness to make laws for our own state, are being declared by the Supreme Court of the State, unconstitutional.

REED, McKinley, and other leading republicans are already engaging in a rough and tumble fight for the nomination for President in 1896. The Democrats are not saying much as yet but when the time comes we apprehend there will be no scarcity of available timber, in fact any good man is better than half a dozen or so, to quarrel over.

THE vacancy occasioned by the death of Judge Blatchford on the Supreme Court bench, has finally been filled President Cleveland, after having his two New York men, Hornblower and Packham rejected, surprised the country by going to Louisiana after a man, Edward Douglass White who was immediately confirmed by the Senate.

SOME of the city papers are claiming that our two United States Senators Davis and Washburn dont know who J. Adam Bede is, they can't be very well acquainted with the reconstituency if they have escaped all knowledge of him this long, and J. Adam Bede has been to Washington himself Possibly he didn't stop at their hotel, or had other business than hunting them up.

WHEN a breach of trust has become so well established as has the failure of enough Congressmen to appear at the Legislative halls at Washington, to form a quorum to do business it is about time the people were taking a hand in the business. Keep your eye on the records of the Congressional proceedings, such as you can get hold of and any man found continually absent from his proper place, vote him out if possible, at the next election. We don't have any use for Legislators in Washington or in St. Paul who are continually absent from their post without sufficient excuse.

TEMPERANCE seems to be growing daily more fashionable. This is a good sign for our country. Nearly every politician, even in our great cities, says publicly, that so far as he is concerned he wishes there was not a saloon in existence; but does he act as he talks? Does he not leave the stage for the back door of the nearest saloon? Total abstinance is the best thing and the surest way to annihilate saloons. Don't drink yourself, and don't go into a saloon and invite the crowd up to drink and then you can be sure that you are doing something for temperance; something that will tell on public opinion in your neighborhood. But you may preach temperance and patronize the backdoors of saloons where you think the public won't know about it as long as you please, and you will do little to establish it.

NO WONDER Col. Bob Ingersoll got off the expression that when he lived through February he was good for another year, after his remarks to the Editorial Association. We expect he thought if he lived through his experience there he would be wise enough not to repeat it for at least one 12 months. He started out to please everybody and failed to do it. He said a great mission of the newspaper was to break down barriers between people and nations; to do away with provincialism; that commerce was a great and in this direction, the better acquainted we became with other nations the better we liked them and the more friendly we grow toward them. And then he said Americans should make all their own articles, and use none but American made goods. If we send $30 to England for goods we get the goods and England gets the $30. If we buy American goods we get the goods and Americans gets the $30. But he did not tell us that if a farmer sells his wheat English money is paid for it, even the great mills or Minneapolis being owned by English capitalists. And that if we buy $30 worth of goods from England the same vessel that brings them over carries back $30 worth of wheat for a bigger price than we can get for it at home. We have gotten rid of $30 worth of wheat at a better price than we could have attained at home, and which our English cousins were as glad to get as we were to get rid of it. Some ocean steamer has had a job carrying goods both ways and commerce, and interchange of goods and good feeling as Col. Bob started out to say has taken place and more people are made happy than could possibly have been the case had everything been kept at home.

Minnesota Editor's and Publisher's Association.

The 28th Annual convention was held at Minneapolis last week and proved to be the largest convention of Minnesota newspaper men yet held. The country press seemed to have things about their own way. A committee was appointed to further the idea of incorporating the association, and a hundred dollars appropriated for their use. H. G. Day, of the Albert Lea Standard was elected President for the ensuing year.

Minneapolis entertained the members and visitors in grand style with a banquet and a "smoke sociable," everything supposed to be of interest in the two cities that could be had was pressed into service for the amusement of those present. Mayor Eustice presided at the banquet which began with blue points and wound up with Bob Ingersoll. A. J. Blethen occupied a chair on the stage at the "Smoke sociable" and the variety of entertainment furnished from presenting H. P. Hall with a pair of $15 drawers to the liveliest dancing, tragedy Primrose Minstrels, singing by Taylor, the Masonic and Temple quartettes, Mandolin club, elocution, etc., etc., was simply astounding to the average country editor; now fully initiated to the enjoyments of city life.

On Saturday an excursion over the Duluth road and dinner at the States prison were accepted by about a hundred and ten people, and the trip was enjoyed by all.

Minnesota State Prison. As Seen on the Editorial Excursion.

The penitentiary at Stillwater is located on a small piece of ground from which the dirt has apparently been removed from the base of a high hill leaving a wall on three sides which has been stoned up to the distance of thirty or forty feet, and on top of which guards with guns continually patroll and keep an eye out for those who may desire to escape. There are workshops where the prisoners put in their days. We were shown through the binding twine building, the machine shops, and the hospital. Dr. Merrill is the prison doctor, and has quite a number of patients under his care. The Association was arrayed in front of the hospital and a photograph taken. A dinner was then served which would do credit to any hotel. An opportunity was then given to watch the prisoners march out to dinner and back after they had finished. This is done with the precision of military drill. Every fellow seems to know his place and at the tapping of the bell, the cell doors open and out comes the occupant, and starts for the dinning hall, where they are seated in seats something like those in a church without a center isle The food is then carried around them and passed in from one hand to another. The prisoners look well seem to be well fed, and neat in appearance, in good working condition. After dinner they were marched out and formed in lines facing the wall untill all had taken their places when they marched out two by two lock step, to the work shops. Te cells are arranged in two tows with the backs together four stories high some are quite bare of comforts, while others have a chair, a small table or desk, piece of carpet or rug on the floor, timepiece a few books, etc, etc.

We are informed by the officials that at present the population is 487 prisoners; 150 of these are U S. prisoners sent up from the South, some negroes from Texas 17 are in for life; 5 are females. The women were allowed to hide themselves from the editorial party by going into a closet, while the visitors inspected their rooms. Cards hung on the wall announcing that visitors should not speak to nor point out prisoners as the crowd viewed them, yet everybody took pains to learn, in someway, which were a few of the best known ones.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb 16, 1894.

Democratic Senators are satisfied with the progress made by the sub-committee on the Wilson tariff bill, although they would, of course, have been glad to have had the time spent in getting the bill reported to the full committee this week. However, the time spent in getting the bill in proper condition is not time lost. Every democratic member of the finance committee, except Senator Vance who is away on account of his health, has been in almost constant conference with Senators Jones, Vest and Mills, who compose the sub-committee, and when the bill is reported to the full committee (Senator Jones thinks it will not be later than next Tuesday) it will in reality be reported to the Senate, as all the changes made will have received the approval of all of the democrats on the Finance committee. Sugar seems to be the principal stumbling block, although there are several other articles upon which there are differances in opinion. But all of the democratic Senators agree in saying that the indications all point to a harmonious agreement.

It looked early in the week as though Representative Bland's bill for the coinage of the seigniorage would go through without any serious trouble, but he made several ineffectual attempts to secure the unanimous consent necessary in the absence of an order from the committee on Rules to set a time for closing the debate. The opposition not only refused to consent to set a time to vote, but it notified Mr. Bland that the friends of the bill must make their own quorum when they did vote. Ex-Speaker Reed became so nagging in his opposition to Mr. Bland's attempts to close the debate that Mr. Hatch, who was in the chair, had to call for the Sergant-at-Arms before he could get order. Mr. Bland was thoroughly mad.

Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, is going on a tariff reform and silver speech making tour. His first speech will be made on the 21st inst., to the students of the Normal school at Valparaiso, Indiana. The next evening he is scheduled for a speech at the Chicago Union League banquet. From there he goes to Lincoln, Neb., and then to Denver, where on the 28th inst., he is to speak at the banquet of the Graystone Club on "Tariff Reform and Bimetallism—Not one but Both."

Senator Gray never poses as an orator. When he has anything to say he proceeds in a straightforward, businesslike way to say it, and what he says is always carefully and respectfully listened to. His two day speech on the Hawaiian question, this week, was a complete and unbiased history of the relations between this country and the little islands, of which he truly said, if an earthquake or a convulsion in those southern seas were to swallow them up tomorrow, there would not be, except from feelings of humanity for the loss of life, a ripple on the surface of the world's affairs." It is because the question involved is one of international moment that this Hawaiian business becomes important. Senator Gray's remarks about the flag incident are worthy of careful perusal—"A good deal has been said about the hauling down of the American flag in Honolulu. When the American flag is hauled up by the order of a democratic President it will be hauled up under circumstances that will keep it where it is, until the winds of heaven have beaten it into rags. It will never be hauled up in dishonor. It will never be hauled up so as to put the great people whose symbol of power and authority it is to the blush. It will never misrepresent the magnanimity, the greatness, the courage of the people of the United States, as it did when it was hauled up at the request of this revolutionary junta in the Hawaiian Islands on the 1st day of February, 1893. What are we to say in condemnation of the President, who unhesitatingly, when he found that a wrong had been done, ordered the flag to be hauled down? The American people will always condemn a President who does the right thing and who is not governed by the mere clamor and jingoism that is sought to be injected into this government."

The Post Office department has declared the Honduras Lottery Company, understood to be the successor of the defunct Louisiana concern, to be fraudulent, and instructed postmasters not to deliver registered mail to it or any of the men known to be connected with it. The issuing of money orders, payable outside of the United States, to the same parties has also been prohibited.

President Cleveland has resumed the tri-weekly public receptions at the White House, which a pressure of public business compelled him to temporarily abandon last summer.

Representative Boatner, of La., has a substitute for the present civil service law in his mind which he intends to push in Congress. It does away with life-tenure in office and makes 12 years the longest time any person can remain in office.

Washington's Birthday Association of Delano Holds its Second Celebration.

Frank N. Stacy the Speaker.

Washington's Birthday Association of Delano was called to order soon after 11 o'clock, A M on Thursday, by President O'Hair. Mayor Vorse made an address of welcome, after which a bountiful dinner rapidly disappeared from view; tables were hustled out of the way and to some lively music, by the Hoisington orchestra, chairs were arranged and as fine an audience as you find anywhere listened to toasts, music by the band, instrumental and vocal by several who kindly assisted in making the day enjoyable to all. The speach of the day was made by the already famous young orator a former Wright county boy and now editorial writer on the Minneapolis Tribune Frank N. Stacy, and was a masterly effort. We give a portion of it as follows:

It was a gala day in Paris, Feburary 1 1800, the closing year of the century and the 8th of the French Republic. Napoleon had decreed a triumphal procession. A military ceremony was performed in the Champs de Mars. The trophies of his conquests were displayed It was a day of pomp and glitter. But why were the flags and standards hung with crape? Why did a solemn procession move to the Temple de Mars? Why this funeral oration by the eloquent De Fontane? And who was the subject of the funeral eulogy? Why should France be in morning in the midst of its greatest triumphs? Had any of of its eminent leaders passed away? Had it suffered a calamity? No. France had heard the news from across the sea, that Washington, an American citizen who had never visited Europe,—Washington an American Pioneer an Indian fighter who had never done an act for France in his life, except to whip their armies and Indian allies—that Washington was dead. France mourning for George Washington in the midst of its triumphs, pouring its tributes upon the the bier of a plain citizen a stranger of a hostile nation, separated from it by thousands of miles of stormy sea, is one of the most significant events in history.

Over in the British channel the English squadron lay with flags at half mast, although it was only a few years since this same Washington had deprived England of its greatest province, and after eight years of strife driven the British regulars from the American shores, whipped and crest-fallen.

Such is the man whom we honor here today. He had won not only the love and confidence of every section of his own country, but he compelled the worship of his enemies abroad. Talleyrand, Napoleon's great prime minister, in delivering to the people the decree of Napoleon for a statue of Washington, stated in an elaborate report;

"France, I repeat, should depart from established usages and do honor to one whose fame is beyond comparison with that of others. Himself one of the greatest statesmen and diplomats in the World's history, Talleyrand speaks of Washington as. "The man who amid the decadence of modern ages, first dared believe that he could inspire degenerate nations with courage to rise to the level of republican virtues, lived for all nations and for all centuries. Lord Brougham, the eminent English leader, declared: "The test of the progress of mankind will be in the appreciation of the character of Washington."

Hero-worship has done much damage to the name of Washington. The attempt of the early biographers to give him a saintly perfection of character has resulted in a reaction of sentiment which denies him the possession of great human powers. His genius has been denied, and even his Americanism. Skeptical critics have call d him an English country gentleman, and a commonplace "goody-goody." Carlisle calls him a "bloodless Cromwell."

Recent investigations, however, prove Washington to have been a man of powerful passions as well as of rare powers of observation, sound judgment, unflinching courage and a keen reader of the times and prophet of the future his accuracy of observation and knowledge of details was equal to that of Napoleon, and his judgement was sounder. When a boy of 16 he did such exact work as a surveyor that his surveys stand unquestioned to this day. No commander knew the character and habits of the Indians so well as Washington, or was so successful in coping with them. The British officers, in spite of their contempt of the colonies, were compelled to rely upon Washington for their victories over the French and Indians, and whenever they failed to follow his advice they were wofully whipped. The same thorough mastery of details which made him master of the Indians in their native wilds gave him conquest over the invading British army. He familiarized himself with every item which entered into army life and action, was a tireless disciplinarian and organizer, and not only knew how everything should be done but was able to do it better than anyone else. He was the best surveyor the best Indian fighter, and the greatest commander in the colonies, and he was also the best horseman and the best farmer in Virginia.

He possessed as a rule, strong control of his passions and speech, and was not demonstrative or a man of talk. But far from being "bloodless," he was a man of naturally keen sympathies and fiery temper. When his troops played the coward and attempted to run from the field, he could curse them and kick them down with his sword. Likewise he could weep to see brave men shot down by British bullets and gave from his own purse to relieve their wants. Congress and the british commanders never heard or read such sarcastic roastings as they got from Washington. When on one occasion an officer who was instructed to carry dispatches at night across the river came back and reported that the ice was so thick that he would have to wait until morning. Washington stopped in his meditation long enough to hurl an anathema at the officers head and shout "Get out, and bring me a man." Catching a poacher shooting his ducks, Washington plunged into the pond after the poacher's canoe, in the face of a shotgun leveled at his head, seized the poacher and gave him a threshing and ducking. He was as cool and "bloodless" under fire as in the drawingroom. When Braddock's army was done up so brown by the Indian ambuscade, Washington lay half reclining from a siege of fever. But when he saw brave men shot down through the ignorance and helplessness of the British officers, he mounted his horse, tore up and down the ranks in the thickest of the fight, had two horses shot under him and four bullets shot through his coat, and was the only officer on the field who had the nerve to marshal the men in the midst of panic and slaughter.

Napoleon was more brilliant and was quicker in expedient than Washington, but his brilliant audacity did not avail so much in the end as Washington's thorough and exact judgement. In the final outcome the result achieved by Washington and by Napoleon would bear a similar comparison. And yet Washington was by no means devoid of brilliant strategy, as witness his final sudden coup in swooping down on Cornwallis at Yorktown, before Clinton in New York could bring his heavy reserves upon the field or even was aware that Washington had changed his position. Grant achieved more numerous victories, but he nearly always had a force superior in numbers and equipment to that of the enemy; while Washington had a ragged and half-starved little band of farmers whom no one else but he would have thought of pitting against the formidable British regulars. Both Cæsar and Alexander waged easy conquests barbarians. Washington met those who were superior to himself in military experience and equipment. His success and his greatness lay in this—he relied upon moral and patriotic resources which few generals in history have had the genius and force of character to inspire.

In statesmanship, Hamilton and Jefferson were more brilliant and were better read; but if the fate of the young nation had rested with those two, it would have gone to pieces. Washington knew the American people, read aright the times and its requirements, knew men and things as against theories, as all times subordinated his own views and ambitions to the needs of the country, raised patriotism above partisanship, and kept the government in the middle of the king's highway, clear of the breakers of section, faction and party and of French and English influences.

Washington was the first American to rise above state and sectional lines. "The man who unites all hearts," was the tribute which his times paid him, and it fitted him. A Virginian, he was the choice of Massachusetts as commander of the American forces. Jackson, Clay, and Blaine were more aggressive and brilliant as public leaders; but they were leaders of parties rather than exponents of pure American patriotism. In pureness and elevation of motive, in patriotic zeal, in practical, commonsense understanding of a given situation in its bearings, in depth of fervor and force of character, none of the great men named would to their lives have sought comparison with Washington.

THE population of Minneapolis is said to be getting considerably Riley lately. A family by that name has triplets: One is named for the Doctor, one for the Minister, and the other for the Mayor.

THE mayoralty contest in St. Paul seems to be narrowing down to Hon. O. O. Cullen and Robert G Smith, on the Democratic ticket, with A. R. McGill on the Republican ticket.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Hon. B. F. Christlieb is Getting Acquainted.

As the sun advances northward the temperature becomes warmer but not unpleasantly so. The most unpleasant part of this climate are certain breezes from the ocean which at times are chilly somewhat similar to our Minnesota southerly winds which seems even to effect people fresh from northerly countries. The temperature is much affected by rainfall which seems to be accompanied by a deposit of snow on the mountains and cooler weather and frosts in the valleys. The apprehensions here as to the effect of frost on the growing crops of fruit at this season of the year reminds one of the apprehension of the Minnesota farmer about August and September as to when "Old Jack" will put in his appearance, what effect his presence will have on corn, potatoes and other vegetables. There has not as yet in the opinion of old settlers, been a sufficient fall of rain to supply this country with the necessary moisture for agricultural purposes for the coming year. Southern California does not usually have so large a supply of moisture or rainfall as Central or Northern California. The present indications are, however, for more rain in the near future.

In the rambles of people in distant parts of the broad land of our migratory nation amongst unfamiliar scenes and faces, the new acquaintances and friendships made prove not only to be agreeable but interesting as the enquiries as to your present home, former residence and place of birth are followed by others as to whether you know certain parties who emigrated from the enquirers present or former home to the country in which you reside and you find the subject of the edquiry to be within the circle of your acquaintanceship. Such was the experience of your correspondent in making the acquaintance of Mr. J. M. Davies of Los Angeles, who is now an elderly gentleman of considerable wealth, owning large interests in the street car corporations of Los Angeles. The fact of his possessing wealth has not blunted his recollection and appreciation of old time associations and experiences pioneering in the Mississippi Valley. Mr. Davies on learning that your correspondent was from Minnesota enquired of him whether he knew Charles Conzet, the Sturman's, naming Thomas Sturman as father and William, John and and Riley as sons who emigrated from Greenup, Illinois to Minnesota nearly 40 years ago and was much gratified with the information that your correspondent was able to give concerning, and desired that his kind regards be conveyed to those parties. He recollects those Minnesota pioneers, and names "Big Woods," "Crow River," and descriptions of the timber, soil, etc., given by them in their correspondence with Greenup, Ill He was known in Illinois as Squire Davies.

Besides Mr. Davies and wife there are many excursionists from the East sojourning at the Grand View Hotel, Monrovia, Cal., and among them is "Cousin Ben," Benjamin Folsom, the cousin of Mrs. Grover Cleveland. He is a gentleman of about 40 years of age and possesses qualifications besides that of being related to the family of the President of the United States to commend him to public notice. In politics he is a straight Democrat. He entertains comprehensive views as to what should be the policy of our Government on the questions of the day and is outspoken in his political convictions which are not always in line with those of our worthy chief magistrate.

Congressman Baldwin's Speech.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, I appear before this committee under peculiar conditions. I am the first democratic Representative ever elected from one of the greatest industrial districts of the Northwest. It so happens that I have placed before me two paths, each of them broadly open to me the one leading toward the fruitful fields and pleasant pastures of democratic reform, but beset by scandals, slanders, and personal misrepresentations, the other holding out seducing offers of immediate benefit to my people, but ending, as I believe, in the slough of despond where so many political sinners lie buried. One of the chief industries of my district is the production of high grade iron ore. The pressure upon me from friends, neighbors and men for whose opinions I have the greatest respect and consideration has been simply terrific.

Mr. Chairman one consideration, and one alone, has kept me steadfast in my action as the needle to the pole. I have felt that the good of the people of my district, my state, my section and my country is bound up in the success or failure of tariff reform. As to my own future political fortunes, those, if considered at all, have been secondary. I have followed my ideal for the future welfare of the whole people. I have striven to lay aside all personal consideration, all selfish intrests of my own or those of my friends, looking only to the greatest number. My course will provoke criticism; I will be assailed from every redoubt of the fortress of protection; my motives will be impugned; my former statements distorted. No matter. I stand here for the rights of the great, struggling masses, for the interests of the men and women of Minnesota who toil in the fields, the mines the workshops. They and they alone are my masters. In great part by their suffrages I am permitted to stand in this House to plead for their rights, and when I shall forget their claims, their toils, their struggles, and their sacrifices, then shall I be unworthy to stand here as their Representative; And in their interest I stand for tariff reform, for the taxing of incomes, and for retrenchment and reform in every department of our Government. (Applause.)

AT THE recent banquet in Minneapolis we had the pleasure of hearing two of our neighbors at the table, strangers to us, remark when one dish was served, "the name's enough for me" and several others acted as if they agreed with that suggestion. The name was "Roman Punch." To the credit of the city this was the nearest approach, at table, to intemperance we saw, although one of our neighbors kept a weather eye out for "something to drink" it did not come on the table. The "Roman Punch had to be eaten with a spoon.

Accompanying them is the claim made that this executive clemency would probably have been shown her sooner but for the impertinent intermeddling of her volunteer American friends. They do not raise a question as to the right of intercession by such friends, but do deprecate their methods. The English authorities who control the fate of the unfortunate Mrs. Maybrick are not proof against appeals to their sympathy, but attempts to browbeat and coerce them delayed executive clemency.

THE cow is a very important factor in this country. According to statistics recently compiled by the government there is $2,000,000,000 in this country in the industry of which the bovine is the basis. In the enumeration there are 15,000,000 cows to give milk and 60,000,000 acres of land to give them food. Seven hundred and fifty thousand men are employed in the various departments of the industry, and 1,000,000 horses to haul the food and the products. The industry is of imposing proportions and still is not large enough to supply the demands, for millions of pounds of imitation butter are sold every year.

A BOMB was exploded the morning of the 20th in a small hotel in Paris. The proprietress, a woman named Calaboesi, and two lodgers were injured.

THERE was a demonstration of the unemployed in Boston, Mass., the 20th, which threatened to end in a riot. Five thousand men, hungry, ragged and ugly, crowded into the state house and the adjoining grounds and vociferously demanded immediate aid in their distress. Squads of police were summoned and the crowd finally dispersed.

THE president the 20th sent to the senate the following nominations: Martin J. Russel, to be collector of customs, port of Chicago; Frank G. Hoyne, appraiser, port of Chicago, and Delos P. Phelps, United States sub-treasurer at Chicago.

A WILD man, who had been terrorizing citizens, was captured near Tacoma, Wash., the 20th. He was almost naked and carried a large club. He cannot talk.

THE residence of Simon Jacobson, a money lender of San Francisco, Cal., was entered early the morning of the 20th and robbed of $12,000 in coin and jewelry.

THE available cash balance in the U. S. treasury the 20th was $139,192,349.

THE supreme court of Michigan the 20th declared unconstitutional the law authorizing the administration of the gold cure to drunkards.

THE election in Pennsylvania the 20th, for congressman-at-large to succeed the late Gen. Lilly, resulted in favor of Galusha A. Graw, the republican nominee, by a majority of nearly 150,000, the largest ever known in the state.

WHILE the members of a ward club in Philadelphia were celebrating the election the night of the 20th, a frame annex to the club house collapsed and a large number of men were thrown a distance of 15 feet to the ground.

AN unruly horse kicked over a large can of gasoline in the blacksmith shop of Patrick Ryan, in Chicago, the 20th. Frank Baur was fatally burned.

CHRIS EVANS, the California bandit, was taken to prison at Folsom, Cal., the 20th, to which he was sentenced for life.

MADE A JUSTICE.

Senator White of Louisiana, the Recipient of a High Honor.

President Cleveland Nominates Him as Justice Blatchford's Successor on the Supreme Bench, and the Senate Immediately Confirms Him.

A SOUTHERN MAN SELECTED.

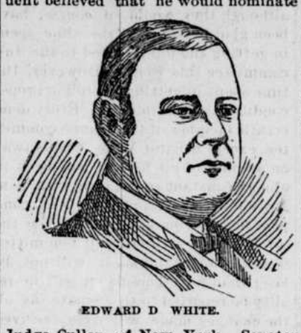
WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Senator White, of Louisiana, was nominated for associate justice of the supreme court. The senate upon receiving the nomination immediately went into executive session, and confirmed it at once, without opposition.

The nomination was a complete surprise. No one had the slightest intimation of it. Those nearest the president believed that he would nominate



EDWARD D WHITE.

Judge Cullen, of New York. Senator White called on the president this morning by special invitation. His colleague, Senator Caffery, went with him. Upon entering the executive room the president tendered Senator White the nomination. Both senators were profoundly astonished. When they recovered their composure the president expressed the hope that the senator would accept the offer. He spoke of his legal attainments and his manifest qualifications. When he finished the senators conferred together for a few minutes. A long talk between them followed and ended with Senator White's accepting the high honor.

When Assistant Private Secretary Pruden appeared at the capital there was a rush of anxious ones for him. The assistant private secretary was as much in the dark about Senator White's nomination as anyone The first person besides the president and the two senators to learn of it was when one of the senate clerks opened the official envelope brought by Mr. Pruden and laid a paper before Senator Vilas, who was presiding, and Senator Manderson, who was standing by. Their faces betrayed their astonishment.

It is the usual custom in the senate when a senator is nominated to confirm him without waiting to refer the nomination to a committee. A single objection to confirmation without reference would carry the nomination over. At 3:05 p. m. the senate went into executive session on a motion of Senator Caffery (dem., La.), with a view to confirming Senator White at once. The motion to confirm the nomination of Senator White as associate justice was made by Senator Pugh (dem., Ala.), who made a speech eulogistic of the nomination and was followed by Senators Hoar, Teller, Hill and Cafferty, all except the latter members of the judiciary committee. Senator Hill said that while he regretted that the president had in his wisdom seen fit to go outside of New York for a man for the office he was pleased that the choice had been made so wisely.

The injunction of secrecy was removed from the confirmation of White and the fact was made known officially. The new justice, it is supposed, will receive his commission and be ready to take his seat on the bench when the supreme court reassembles the first Monday in March.

The nomination is considered a splendid one from a standpoint of personal fitness. Senator White, though serving his first term in the senate, is regarded by his colleagues as one of the foremost lawyers of the upper house. He is a fine orator and his speech last session against the anti-option bill placed him at once in the front ranks of the senate. He is a large man of imposing presence and will make a good appearance on the bench. He was not in the senate when the nomination came in. He is a courteous gentleman and a very popular member of the senate.

[Mr. White was born in the parish of Lafourche, La., in November, 1845. He was educated at Mount St. Mary's, near Emmettsburg, Md., at the Jesuit college in New Orleans and at Georgetown college, District of Columbia. He served in the confederate army. After the war he began studying law and was admitted to practice by the supreme court of Louisiana in 1868. Six years later he was elected to the state senate. He was appointed associate justice of the supreme court of Louisiana in 1878. He was elected to the United States senate as a democrat to succeed James B. Eustis, taking his seat March 4, 1891. His term will expire March 3, 1897.]

WILLIS EXPLAINS.

He Enlightens President Dole on Many Important Points.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. — President Cleveland has sent to congress the dispatches which arrived February 10 at San Francisco from Hawaii. Among the papers is Minister Willis' reply to Provisional President Dole's letter in regard to the minister's attitude showing an intention to use force. In part it is:

"In view of the above a reply to your last communication may not be necessary, nor would one be made, except from the desire of my government to have the good will and friendship of the people for whom you speak, which result will, in my opinion, be advanced by an explanation of several matters herein referred to.

"November 15 S. M. Damon, minister of finance, notified me in person that there were rumors of an attack that night or the ensuing night upon the executive building. I remarked:

"The Japanese consul general, the English minister and other foreign representatives have already called to say that their people are apprehensive of mob violence and asked me, as the only representative whose government has war vessels now in port, to protect their people. The friends of the queen are also apprehensive as to her safety. I do not wish to interfere in any way with your domestic affairs, except with your approval. If you do not object, however, I will publicly announce that the United States will cooperate to prevent mob violence. I will also state that there will be no communication to your government from the president of the United States for several weeks.'

"Mr. Damon replied thanking me for the offer and saying that he could see no objection whatever, that such an announcement would go very far toward allaying excitement and relieving general anxiety. The following morning you called at this legation, and on being informed of the preceding facts you expressed your satisfaction and approval of what had occurred. The representatives of the foreign governments and many prominent citizens expressed themselves to the same effect. The action taken was meant and understood at the time as in the interest of peace, humanity and good order, and will after this explanation no longer, I hope, be considered an evidence of hostility.

"In this connection it may not be improper to mention the conduct of our naval forces during the trying circumstances succeeding the 24th of last November. The many rumors as to their purpose of landing and attacking your people, the feeling of resentment naturally resulting from the honest belief by a large part of the community that such was their intention, the opprobious epithets that were freely employed brought about such a dangerous and critical condition that for a time, as Admiral Irwin states, it became necessary for all our officers going ashore to wear their service uniforms as a protection against insult and attack. During the whole of this unfortunate and regretable situation the demeanor of both officers and men was one of forbearance and self-control.

"My government, one month prior to the time referred to, had given you information negativing the idea of using force, and had authorized the publication of such information 'to allay any such apprehension,' furthermore, as frankly admitted by you in this correspondence, 'your government did not itself entertain this apprehension.

"I desire to state that the only communications of a political character which I have had with the queen were limited to three occasions. The sole purpose of these negotiations were, as you know, to secure proper guarantees from the queen as to life and property of all connected with the overthrow of the monarchy. These having been assured I then, under the instructions of the president of the United States, presented his decisions, setting forth the reasons therefor and submitting to your government for its voluntary action.

"Touching the statement that your government was refused permission to forward 'Hawaiian government dispatches' by the dispatch boat Corwin, it is only necessary to remind you that the naval officers of the United States and the public generally were denied such privilege, and that no inference of unfriendly feeling should therefore be drawn. Moreover, at the time your letter was written you were aware of the fact that for the accommodation of your government the Corwin had been delayed over half a week.

"As to the requests of the British minister and Japanese consul general for permission to land troops, they were, I am informed, precautionary measures against possible mob violence. This permission is still outstanding, and is not now and was not then, in my judgment, proper evidence of a hostile purpose on the part of our government."

EVANS GIVES UP.

The Famous Bandit and His Partner in Crime, Morrell, Captured.

VISALIA, Cal., Feb. 21. — Bandits Evans and Morrell are now safely lodged behind the bars in the county jail here having surrendered to Sheriff Kay. A posse under the direction of Marshal Gard and Sheriff Kay went to Evans' house at 8 a. m. Monday and lost no time in surrounding it. It was learned that a woman named Mrs. Brighton was in the house together with Evans' children, and an effort was made to get them out before making an attack to capture the outlaws.

It was evident that the bandits were thoroughly frightened at the large force that had surrounded them. All varieties of firearms were brought into use and the posse was well prepared for the attack. Negotiations between the officers and Evans were carried on by letters delivered by the bandit's youngest son. Half the population of the town stood about the house at a safe distance while the proceedings were going on. Matters having been thoroughly arranged, Sheriff Kay paid a young man named Beeson to go into the house to get Evans' children out. Beeson was admitted and it was some time before he came out. His presence, doubtless, had some influence with Evans, for it was not long afterward before he surrendered to the sheriff.

Evans exhibited signs of his long confinement, and looked very rough. Morrell showed no signs of fear, yet he seemed serious, and appeared to appreciate the condition of affairs. The citizens here feel greatly relieved since the capture of the two men. The capture of the bandits will occasion much rejoicing throughout the state, for so long as they were at large the officers of the law knew that their robberies and murders would continue.

LOST THEIR JOBS.

Gov. Rich, of Michigan, Removes Three State Officers.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 21.—Gov. Rich has done what he had threatened to do. He has dismissed from his cabinet Secretary of State Jochim, State Treasurer Hambitzer and Land Commissioner Berry. When Gov. Rich called court to order Monday the attorneys for the three state officials waived arguments and submitted their case as it stood, so that it might go to the supreme court at once. Gov. Rich said: "The defendants are found guilty and are hereby formally removed."

MINNESOTA G. A. R.

The 14th Annual Session Held in Minneapolis.

It Was One of the Most Successful Ever Held in the State—Commander Smith Delivers His Annual Address—A Rousing Camp Fire.

The 14th annual encampment of the Minnesota department of the Grand Army of the Republic was one of the most successful gatherings that the old veterans have ever held in the state. As soon as the gathering was called to order in Harmonia hall, the roll call commenced. Representatives from 183 posts responded. One of the first things in order was the annual address of Commander Smith. Among the more important points in his remarks were the following:

Dec. 31, 1892, there were 7,976 comrades in good standing in the department and on June 30, 1893, the number had increased to 8,148. Minnesota had made a gain, while the surrounding states of Wisconsin, Iowa and North Dakota had lost in numbers. The financial depression, low prices for farm products and the poverty of many of the comrades had contributed to prevent the acquisition of any large number of recruits. The gain by muster, notwithstanding, had been nearly 400 comrades. The list of suspensions during the year was larger than usual. The number of comrades in good standing at the present time was 8,037, a net gain of 61 over a year ago. There are no posts delinquent or on the suspended list. There have been five posts organized during the year, with a total membership at the present time of 97.

There have been 625 comrades lost by reason of suspension for non-payment of dues. The Woman's Relief Corps now number 97 corps, with a membership of 2,971. The ladies have expended for relief work nearly $3,000, besides turning over to the posts about $1,000. The Sons of Veterans have about 60 camps, with a membership of nearly 1,500.

Department Commander—Capt. S. R. Van Sant, Winona.

Junior Vice Commander—Charles W. McKay, Fergus Falls.

Chaplain—H. G. Bilbie, Duluth.

Medical Director—J. M. Tucker, Hastings.

Council of Administration—Thomas Montgomery, St. Peter; R. C. Livingston, Spring Valley; J. M. D. Craft, Farmington; Perry Starkweather, Minneapolis; L. W. Collins, St. Cloud.

Delegates to the National Encampment at Pittsburg:

Fifth District—Delegate, B. M. Hicks, Minneapolis; alternate, William Leits, Minneapolis.

Sixth District—Delegate, L. W. Collins, St. Cloud; alternate, N. R. Gearhart, Duluth.

Seventh District—Delegate, M. S Counse, Detroit; alternate, A. B. Ackerman, Ada.

In the evening of the last day an enthusiastic camp fire was held at the Lyceum theater, at which responses were made by Mayor Eustis, Gov. Nelson, Commander Van Sant and others.

Southern Minnesota Fair.

The board of directors of the Southern Minnesota Fair association has elected officers and fixed upon a date for holding the next fair—Sept. 3 to 8. It was decided that the association open up stakes for aged horses in 2:40 pace and 2:45 trot, with purses of $400 each, and stake races for 2-year-olds, 3-year-olds and 4-year-olds, with purses of $300 and $400.

A New County.

A proposal is seriously made for a new county with Fairfax as the county seat. The villages of Wellington, Bandon and Cairo in Renville county, with Grafton, Molke, Severance, Bismarck and Alfsborg in Sibley county will be included. As things stand, many have to travel 40 or 50 miles to a county seat.

News in Brief.

The Northern Granite company of St. Cloud has secured the contract for all the curbing and catch basins of granite which will be used in Minneapolis the coming season. The contract will aggregate a large amount.

John Nelson, a trusted employe of the Minnesota mine at Tower, was killed by falling rock in shaft No. 5. He was a single man and 36 years old. He had worked for the Minnesota for years.

The postoffice, store and dwelling house owned by J. W. Sullivan at Swanville, was destroyed by fire. Seven hundred dollars in money besides a large amount of postage stamps was also burned. Loss, $3,600; no insurance.

Ira C. Brainerd, a switchman in the yards of the Chicago & Northwestern railway at Winona, was fatally injured by falling from a moving freight car.

Mrs. R. W. Rockwell, of Plainview, was given a teaspoonful of tincture of iodine by mistake. Her life was saved with difficulty.

A woman named Krala, living near St. Cloud, was arrested for shooting five times at a neighbor. She was a poor shot and hit nothing but the atmosphere.

D. S. Sullivan, a deaf mute from Minneapolis, was held up and robbed at St. Cloud. This is the fourth time Sullivan has been held up and robbed.

Gustave Truhn, who killed his wife and child, was released from the hospital at Fergus Falls. He was committed under the law declared unconstitutional, and his friends wished to take him, so the authorities were obliged to let him go.

A. W. Wright, of Dexter, has been appointed receiver of the affairs of A. Van Hemert. Mr. Van Hemert was a prominent farmer and hay dealer of Mower county.

J. Adam Bede, the well known newspaper man of Duluth, has been nominated United States marshal for Minnesota.

CLIP. SAVE AND SEND TO US

A completetest of our 12 advertisements, of which this is No. 1. The set is worth $25, and we will show you that amount for it in the following way: If sent in all at one time by a regular subscriber to this paper immediately after the last one appears, together with the name and address of both subscriber and paper, and dates of papers from which they are clipped, WE WILL ALLOW YOU $25 TOWARD THE PURCHASE OF ONE OF OUR NEW, LARGE SIZE, ALL STEEL FEED CUTTERS WORTH $40. Only one Feed Cutter to any one person.

This makes the cash payment only $15 for this Feed Cutter, which will be found as superior to any now in use as the Aermotor was to anything in existence when it first appeared, and will drive from the field all competitors and take and hold the trade in Feed Cutters as the Aermotor, the former Steel Fixed and Steel Tilting Tower have in Windmills and Towers.

The talent which the Aermotor Company has shown in revolving, revolutionizing, setting and holding the windmill business of the world, can be turned to many fields in the agricultural implement line and it proposes to show what it can do by taking up a number of articles, making them of steel and putting them in their final shape at a single stroke, as was done in the case of the Windmill and Steel Tower, and it proposes to furnish them at a greatly reduced price.

This Feed Cutter, for the present, will only be furnished on the above terms. THESE TERMS GIVE TO THIS SERIES OF 12 ADVERTISEMENTS A CASH VALUE OF $25. We shall offer other articles for which we will accept these advertisements or single copies of them, in part payment. One will be a Steel Hand Truck, in which we feel a special pride in showing our skill as revisers and improvers of staple articles. The cash requirement with this will be ridiculously small.

The third advertisement in this series will show a Steel Circular Saw and Frame, for farm and sawyers' use. It is a PERFECT POLE SAW WITH PERFECT SAFETY GUARDS, and runs with very much less power than ordinary hand saws and has a better saw. THIS $40 SAW AND FRAME WILL BE GIVEN FOR $16 AND FIVE COPIES CLIPPED AS ABOVE OF ADVERTISEMENT No. 2.

In localities where we can we are going to make liberal offers to accept copies of these advertisements in part payment for Windmills. If you have any thought of using a windmill this year write us at once, stating what you think you will need, whether Pumping or Geared, and if possible we will make you a liberal offer.

The past year, though one of unparalleled financial disturbance and business depression was one of great prosperity to the Aermotor Co. The fact that the Aermotor Co. in the past six years has Lessened the Cost of Wind Power to the Consumers to One-Sixth of its former Price has redounded greatly to its benefit and has brought to its factory an enormous volume of business. Even at the very low prices at which we sell Steel Windmills and Steel Towers, made in the most perfect manner, of the most perfect material, and GALVANIZED AFTER COMPLETION, THUS PERFECTLY PROTECTING EVERY PORTION OF THE METAL, it is possible to save a few cents on each outfit, and these few cents on the enormous number of outfits are wholly satisfactory to the Aermotor Co., which has always derived more pleasure from the service it has rendered a great number of people and from the pride it takes in doing well whatever it puts its hands to, than from the money it makes from its enterprise.

This year, because it buys its material more cheaply and expects an enormous increase in its ever growing business, it offers its patrons a vast increase in the quantity and quality of material employed in the construction of its Steel Towers. The accompanying diagram, 2 1-2 x 2 1-2 plate shows the smallest angle that will be used by it in the corner posts of Towers, even for the 8-ft. wheel. For the 16-ft. we use 4x4. Thousands of tons of Angles for Towers, cold-rolled and very straight and perfect are now being delivered at our works. Others who have but a few tons, and therefore a year's supply, of 2 x 2 angle which they are using for 8-ft., 10-ft., and even for 12-ft. wheels, will read this paragraph with surprise and sorrow, since we have not previously given them any information concerning what we will use for '94.

The Aermotor Co. proposes to distribute $500 IN CASH IN PRIZES for the best essays written by the wife, son or daughter of a farmer or user of a windmill, answering the question, "WHY SHOULD I USE AN AERMOTOR?" For conditions of competition and amounts and numbers of prizes send for particulars to the Aermotor Co., Chicago, or to its branches, at San Francisco, Kansas City, Lincoln, Neb., Sioux City, Iowa, Minneapolis, Buffalo, or 65 Park Place, New York City. Aermotors, Pumping and Geared same price, All Steel, all Galvanized-after-Completion, delivered free on cars at Chicago and shipped to any one, anywhere, at the following prices:

8-ft. $25. 12-ft. $50. 16-ft. $125.

TO CURE TOOTHACHE.

Prescription for Emergency Treatment That Is Convenient to Know.

Toothache is a little thing in the books, but many physicians would rather meet a burglar at the door on a dark night than a call to cure a bad toothache of several days' continuance. A hypodermic of morphine only postpones the evil day, and usually the patient is respectfully referred to the dentist. The tooth should not be extracted while the jaw and gums are inflamed and the latter swollen, and it is the physician's duty to treat the case until the above conditions are removed. Always keep a small phial containing the following mixture: Chloroform, gtt. x.; glycerine, gtt. x.; sat. sol. ac. carbol., gtt. x.; morphine, gr. j., with a small wad of absorbent cotton. If the offending tooth has a cavity or decayed surface, saturate a small pellet of cotton with the above mixture and put into the cavity or against the decayed surface, as the case may be—never pack the cotton in, or the more is the trouble, but have the pellet small enough to enter without crowding. In most cases this will end the trouble.

When the gums are swoolen and tender paint two or three times, two minutes apart, with a four per cent. solution of cocaine. This time of year your patient may have been eating a good deal of fruit. The tongue and mucous membrane of the mouth are pale, he has a sour stomach, and next day the toothach will return. Give ten grains of sub-carbonate of bismuth and ten grains of phenacetin at once, and a similar dose before each of the three following meals, with a laxative if needed, and stop all fruit for a few days, and it will not return. The same powder every two hours with cessation of fruit-eating will stop the persistent, tormenting neuralgias so prevalent at this season.—Medical Record.

STUDIO POINTS.

WITHIN a year Eleanor E. Greatorex has become one of the best-known of American illustrators.

ROSCOE CONKLING'S statue is to be placed in Madison square, New York. This is finally settled, and Sculptor Ward's plans for its erection have been accepted by the park board.

MRS. CAROLINE S. BROOKS, the sculptor, is modeling a grand Columbian memorial, detached groups of which were completed in butter and exhibited in the Arkansas building at the fair.

MARY HUGHITT HALLIDAY, a Cairo (Ill.) girl, educated at Vassar and Packer, has been elected president of the Woman's Art Club of Sculptors and Painters in Paris. Since she went to Paris she has been thrice honored by the art authorities there, twice by special mention and once with a bronze medal for work done. She has been in Paris only a year and is still very young.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

ORLANDO BOGGS' CHEEK.

BY J. J. FULLER.

ORLANDO BOGGS wanted to go around the world and he had nothing on earth to go with but time and cheek. It has been said that time is money, but for some reason Mr. Boggs found it impossible to convert his time into any collateral for bread and meat and steamboat fare and railroad riding and other necessaries incident to living or traveling. In taking stock of his resources one day, it suddenly occurred to Boggs that his cheek might be more available and he put himself into a deep thinking trance. Results followed and Orlando Boggs went abroad; in fact he went all around the world; and yet he left home without the ghost of a penny.

The ocean steamship Orpheus was advertised to sail on Saturday night at twelve o'clock. Capt. Findley, one of the jolliest and most sociable of old sea dogs, was the master, and just on time the planks were pulled in and all was made snug on board for the ocean voyage, and no one suspected there was an extra passenger hanging to the rudder post. The Orpheus was a first-class passenger liner and she plowed through the water at a lively rate, having made about two hundred miles at breakfast time on Sunday morning. Capt. Findley was about the deck taking a survey of the weather and looking after things in general, before going below to eat, when a commotion at the stern of the vessel attracted his attention. Going aft he found that a man without shoes, hat or coat had just clambered over the rail of the ship and stood there dripping wet. The first mate was there and had asked the stranger who he was and how he came on board, and to these questions the dripping man's reply was merely an inquiry as to where he could find the captain.

PLANNING THE TRIP.

"I am the captain, sir," said that jolly old fellow, all in amaze at the spectacle before him; "now who on earth, or rather on water, are you?"

"Glad to see you, captain," replied the visitor; "sorry I haven't a card with me, but you have doubtless heard of Orlando Boggs? I am he."

"Well, Mr. Boggs," said the captain, in still greater wonderment at the easy affability of the man, "I am not sure whether I am glad to see you or not; I must confess too that I never heard of you in my life; out with it, man, and tell me who you are and how you happen to be on board my ship?"

"Captain, I am Orlando Boggs, the swimmer; how I happen to be here is simple enough; last evening I came down to the beach, as is my usual custom, to take a swim; my system must be out of gear in some way, for when I was out thirty or forty miles I went to sleep and evidently kept right on swimming. It was just daylight when I awoke, and looking about me I espied your ship; knowing my average speed and judging by the rising sun what time it was, I inwardly roasted myself for going to sleep and getting so far from land without any preparations or supplies. I began to feel the gnawings of hunger, and realizing it would take me several hours to return to the city, I determined to overhaul you and ask your hospitality for a meal, and here I am; that's all there is to it, captain."

"Why, confound it, man, you don't mean to tell me that you—why, man, are you crazy?"

"No, captain, I am not crazy, but I am very hungry."

"You swam all the way out here and then overhauled my ship going twenty miles an hour?" stammered the captain; "you did this?"

"Why, certainly; you don't know my record, captain, or you wouldn't be so incredulous; that is nothing for me, sir."

"You come right down to my stateroom, Mr. Boggs; you can have anything you want on this ship."

Mr. Boggs, for sure enough it was that same individual, with plenty of time and cheek, was soon fitted out with dry garments and was enjoying a hearty breakfast with the captain. During the meal he related to the captain numberless performances in which he had been engaged and altogether proved decidedly entertaining; his wonderful swimming experiences entertained the captain hugely.

"OUT WITH IT, MAN."

"And now, Capt. Findley, allow me to thank you for your kindness and your hospitality," said Mr. Boggs, as he finished his coffee; "if you will have the steward tie me up a couple of sandwiches and let me have my wet clothes I will start back. I want to reach home by supper time, at least."

"Now, see here, Mr. Boggs, I like you, and as you have intimated once or twice you have nothing particular on hand just now, I want to invite you to stay aboard with me for the round trip; I shall take it as a favor if you will come now, say yes."

Mr. Boggs declared he would be delighted, but called the captain's attention to the fact that he had come away from home without money or luggage.

"How can I, captain," said he, "with only a pair of pants, a pair of suspenders and a negligee shirt?"

"Don't you worry about these things," replied the captain; "you can have all the clothes and money you need while you are with me; you are my guest as long as you will stay."

And so it was arranged. Cheek had succeeded in taking Mr. Boggs across the ocean in first-class style without a cent. It was a jolly trip, both for Mr. Boggs and the captain, and the former made himself very entertaining to all the passengers; there was nothing too good for Boggs on the Orpheus. On arrival at Liverpool the captain and his guest went ashore for a little change. One of the first things that struck their notice was the advertisements of a great swimming contest to take place that same afternoon. A great champion had challenged the world to swim for a stake of one thousand dollars, the test being both speed and distance.

"Why, here, Boggs," exclaimed the captain, "this is just in your line; you ought to enter this and win that money; will you, if the entries are not closed?"

The question for a moment staggered Boggs, but he quickly braced up and replied that he would be only too glad to do so. The captain went to make inquiries and presently returned saying he had made all the arrangements and had put up the money. Boggs told him he would be obliged to draw on him for a little money to get some necessaries for the match, and his friend gave him the cash without the least hesitation. Boggs then disappeared, but just about fifteen minutes before the time set for the start he showed up. He was a sight. He was dressed in tights and on his shoulders and arms were numberless bundles and packages, among them being a small oil stove and some utensils for cooking. The captain greeted him warmly.

"All right, Boggs, my boy? Got everything you want?" he asked.

"Yes, I guess so," replied that cheeky individual; "only I don't know anything about my opponent, and I am in doubt whether or not I ought to take along another ham and a few dozen eggs."

"What's that," said the champion, coming up; "ham and eggs; you don't mean to say you are going swimming with all that truck on you; what is it all, anyway?"

"What is it," replied Boggs, as if surprised at the question; "what is it? Why supplies for the trip, of course."

"Supplies!" yelled the champion. "Why, how long do you expect to be gone?"

"That depends entirely on you, sir," replied Boggs, with dignity; "all I have to do to win the money is to swim longer and faster than you do; I only intend to keep just ahead of you, and if you should keep me out in the ocean for a month or two I don't want to starve, do I? Where are your supplies, sir? It strikes me it is time for us to start."

"Say, see here, mister, is that the way you always swim; do you mean to say you go out and stay two and three months at a time?"

"Certainly," said Boggs; "two or three months are nothing; I swam one match with a native Malay which lasted twenty-one months; come on, let us start."

"Say, mister, I don't think I want to swim with you; you are out of my class; I give it up and you can have the money; I am willing to give it up just to have a look at a man rigged out for a three months' swimming match; you beat me, you do."

Orlando Boggs now had plenty of money for his trip abroad, for the captain insisted on his taking the two thousand dollars. They went up to London together, and after seeing the English capital Mr. Boggs went over to the continent and spent several months in keen enjoyment encircling the globe, seeing all the sights, and he did it all on his cheek.—Chicago Herald.

A Long Memory.

Old people often take great delight in reverting to the scenes of childhood, and vie with each other in early recollections. Sometimes they assert confidently that they can remember things that occurred in their infancy. One remarkable instance of this sort of memory is recorded in an old family Bible in a New England household. The Bible was published in 1825, and on one of its family record pages there may be read the following entry, made in a trembling hand: "Nancy Ann Sparks, born on the 4th January, 1752, according to the best of her recollection."—Youth's Companion.

THE OLD PIANO.

Other and Better Days Had Been Seen by Both It and the Performer.

It stood in the show window of a large music store on a much frequented avenue, and as its extreme old age and ugliness were accentuated by a price mark some of the passers-by paused to inspect the valuable ruin.

"Papa, did they make ugly little frights of pianos like that for people to play on?" asked a happy child of her young father.

"Not in my day, child," answered the father, gently amused.

"Is that the thing my grandmother played when she was young?" asked a graceless youngster of a white-haired man beside him.

"Your grandmother was not born when that thing was made, boy," retorted the grandfather disdainfully.

No one admired the ancient outlawed thing that was jeered at for its awkwardness, and it stood there alone of its kind, stiff and clumsy, showing through its cracked coat of veneer all the landmarks of time, the pitiful helplessness of age.

Presently a quaint old woman with a basket on her arm hobbled up to the window. In earlier days she had been known as a "character," now she was shunned as a crank. Her dress—if such it could be called—was the rags of a gentlewoman. Her face resembled those porcelain lamps in which a rose light burns. But her light had gone out, leaving an ash color. When she saw the old piano with its yellow keys set far apart like the sentinel teeth of age, she clasped her shriveled hands and gave a great cry.

"Where did they find it? and how dare they exhibit it here? When I saw it last 'twas in grandfather's room with the tall clock and the old harmonium. It was old, old then. I used to play for the poor old man when I was home from school—that was before I ran away with handsome Harry. Ah, me, ah, me, there is something wrong here"—she tapped her head lightly—"it's all wrong—a mad world, my masters."

Then she laughed shrilly, and the crowd cheered her good-humoredly.

"It won't speak for you, but I can make it sing—listen!" she shrilled.

The crowd made way for her to enter the store and the dealer, thinking to advertise his antique possession, helped the little old woman up into the window and seated her before the old piano as if she had been a prima donna.

Selfishness, my brothers. It is at the root of many a kindly action in this world, but then——

Tinkle-tinkle-tinkle. The sounds produced from those yellow keys were not as musical as a sheep bell's jangle, but the crowd laughed and cheered, and the frail old fingers—it was said they had done the business for handsome Harry, but that was when she was mad—struck a chord, and "Auld Lang Syne" floated out in a weird melody that was full of passion and pain, and the sobbing of the loneliness of life. Then a pause, and the accustomed fingers struck an air of the past, and a mournfully sweet voice sung the words of an old love song:

"Once you said you loved me dearly."

The people whispered to each other that she had been a great musician in her day, and pressed forward to hear her and—no one smiled.

"I'll buy that old piano," said a gruff voice; "it's got more music to the square inch than any of your newfangled instruments—it's got a soul in it, so it has!"

"Did they tell you I was false, Harry darling?"

She sang the old song through, and broke off to give them "Bonaparte Crossing the Alps." They could hear the very tramp of the martial feet as her fingers struck the loose keys that responded with their last thrill of harmony to her compelling touch.

"It's a trick to sell the piano—the music-dealer stands in with her—but she and the old instrument are mates," said a man in the crowd.

"Aye," answered his friend; "like those bird-whistles the street fakirs sell—no one ever can make such music out of them as those fellows do. It's one of the tricks of the trade."

The old woman turned a white, tired face on them.

"Ghosts, ghosts, all of ye; but this is real," and she touched the keys, that answered with a plaintive air.

"Mad," they whispered to each other. But the music she played held them spell-bound. It was the cry of the homeless, the desolate, voiced like a prayer. Men took off their hats and bowed their heads; women sobbed. The music became a chant—a requiem:

"There's no place like home,
There's no place like home,
Home, sweet, sweet home."

As the last note died away, the singer laid her head on the keys, and—did not lift it again.

"This piano is sold," said the dealer, as he stepped to his show-window and dropped the curtain.—Detroit Free Press.

THE OLDEST TOWN.

St. Augustine's Claim to Preeminence Among Our Noted Cities.

The city of St. Augustine, on the eastern coast of Florida, stands in one respect preeminent among all the cities of the United States—it is truly an old city. It has many other claims to consideration, but these are shared with other cities. But in regard to age it is the one member of its class.

Compared with the cities of the old world, St. Augustine would be called young; but in the United States a city whose buildings and monuments connect the middle ages with the present time may be considered to have a good claim to be called ancient.

After visiting some of our great towns, where the noise and bustle of traffic, the fire and din of manufactures, the long lines of buildings stretching out in every direction, with all the other evidences of active enterprise, proclaim these cities creations of the present day and hour, it is refreshing and restful to go down to quiet St. Augustine, where one may gaze into the dry moat of a fort of mediæval architecture, walk over its drawbridges, pass under its portcullis, and go down into its dungeons; and where in soft semi-tropical air the visitor may wander through narrow streets resembling those of Spain and Italy, where the houses on each side lean over toward one another so that neighbors might almost shake hands from their upper windows, and are surrounded by orange-groves and rose-gardens which blossom all the year.—Frank R. Stockton, in St. Nicholas.

—In 1835 the rate of wages in Europe was very low. Day laborers in Italy received 8c per day; in Russia, 12c; in Holland, 18c; in France, 30c; in England, 40c; in the United States, 84c.

1,410 Bushels Potatoes Per Acre. [K]

This astonishing yield was reported by Abr. Hahn, of Wisconsin, but Salzer's potatoes always get there. The editor of the Rural New Yorker reports a yield of 736 bushels and 8 pounds per acre from one of Salzer's early potatoes. Above 1,410 bushels are from Salzer's new seedling Hundredfold. His new early potato, Lightning Express, has a record of 803 bushels per acre. He offers potatoes as low as $2.50 a barrel, and the best potato planter in the world for but $3.

PAT'S Reply.—The butcher was shoveling a big drift of snow from the walk in front of his shop when Pat came along and asked for a job. The butcher refused. Pat persisted. "No," said the butcher. "How will I get exercise if I let you shovel it?" "Eating your meat," rejoined Pat, as he shouldered his shovel and marched on.—Utica Observer.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

To Seed Buyers.

THE Northrup, Braslan, Goodwin Company, the growers of garden and field seeds, Minneapolis, have now ready for distribution their catalogue for 1894. This they send free to seed buyers who apply for it, something unusual with seed houses. Very few have an idea of the amount of business done by this firm. As an example, during the past year they sold alone of onion seeds 54,635 pounds. Their seeds have all been cultivated for special use in this section and have invariably given the best results. Their catalogue is particularly strong in farm seeds, and is a very attractive book in other respects, giving much valuable information and suggestions to the farmer, gardener and housewife. Remember, the catalogue is free to any seed buyer.

DELANO DIARY

—Monday was about as disagreeable a day as we have had for a month. It seemed almost impossible to keep warm in the house.

—Sociables are getting to be quite popular with our young people. One was held at Tom Roder's on Saturday evening and one at Olof Peterson's on Monday evening.

—A little girl of John Masoltik's who is attending the sisters' school at this place had the misfortune to get a pin fast in her throat where it remained for a couple of days. Dr. Ames succeeded in removing it yesterday. The mouth makes a poor pin cushion at best and may at times even prove fatal to its owner.

—Our lumber yards are already receiving a spring stock of lumber. It looks as if they expected people to go right on building notwithstanding the cry of hard times. People in this section of country have a greater variety of products to dispose of than do their prairie neighbors, consequently do not feel the hard times like wheat raisers alone do.

—Rev. J. W. Powell requests us to announce that services will be held on Sunday night; also preaching every night next week. He expects his son Rev. J. W. Powell Jr., of Kimball, to be with him all week. J W. Jr. is a graduate of the State University and is a rising young minister, walking in the way his father trod and still treads. Everybody come out to church.

—Prof. Geo. B. Aiton, State Inspector of High schools, is in Virginia attending a Superintendent's meeting. After his return he promises to make us another visit, and speaks favorably of our school as a candidate for the High school class. The Prof. has a lecture which he has delivered in the southern part of the State and which would, doubtless, be interesting to our citizens if we can arrange for its delivery. His subject is "Modern Germany." Let's hear him the next time we catch him here.

—The Public school is quite full at present. A large number of the pupils from the St. Peter's school are now attending. This is as it should be. There seems to be a good chance of having the Delano school among the first of the High schools of the State in the near future. When pupils can be given certificates to the effect that they have graduated at the high school there will be some inducement for them to try to get through their studies. Under the old regeme it seems there was no end, but to repeat year after year what had been gone over.

—Some one seems to have been too fast in announcing that the Rev. John Doran was dead, and called forth several obituary notices from papers in different parts of the country the GAZETTE among the rest. On Saturday we met his son Wesley on the train on our way to Minneapolis, and condoling the loss of his father he replied, "Oh! he's not dead." "I took him home to my house in St. Paul," of course we were greatly surprised, but told Wes to tell him he had better keep away from this part of the country as he probably would never get any better send-off."

—From the Minneapolis evening Tribune we learn that Rev. Frank R. Millspaugh has accepted the call to go to Grace Cathedral, Topeka, Ka. It also says that on his trial trip, after regular Lenten services were gone through with, the new preacher appeared but made the awful discovery that while donning his gown he had doffed his sermon; an extra hymn was sung while the lost was found. The Delano people are sorry to have to miss the Frank smile each month but congratulate the congregation at Topeka on their ability to select an earnest worker and an able minister —Rev. E. S. Darling, of Dakota, contemplates locating here, soon. He is to preach at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and evening.

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor.
ARTHUR E. POWELL, Ass't.

The High school of Delano have organized into a U. S. Senate for the purpose of learning parliamentary practice and extemporaneous speaking. Each pupil is assigned a state. Mr. Dewey acting as Senator, President Protem and Clerk.

At a meeting held Friday Feb. 16, the first bill acted upon was that providing for the prohibition of immigration for a period of ten years, afterward amending so as to read, "for a period of twenty five years." After some discussion, the bill was passed.

The next bill brought before the Senate was a bill asking that the Delano High School be granted five million dollars. A short debate ensued and the bill was lost.

Then a bill, requiring that the disabled soldiers of the Confederate army be given a pension of one hundred dollars per month until death, was discussed for a very few minutes and lost.

After this the Senate adjourned.

A very interesting experiment in chemistry was tried a few days ago. Hydrogen and oxygen were collected in a gas bag and, turning the gases through a tube into a pan of soap suds, caused bubbles to form, then touching the bubbles with a lighted piece of pine, an explosion was the result.

The other play which is to be given the same night as "A Box of Monkeys" has arrived and practice will soon begin.

The prohibition of communication in the halls seems to be a cause of great sorrow for one of of our seniors.

The Pickwick club meets at the home of Frances Bauman, Friday evening. The Club have been reading "Pickwick Papers" at their meetings this winter and find it both instructive and amusing.

The class in chemistry have been having a good deal of trouble on account of breaking so many pieces of glassware. They hope for better things, however, after they have had a little more experience.

We notice that the rubber ruler of Prof. Dewey is often called into use lately. What can be the matter with the children?

For some reason our Senate which is supposed to be a democratic one, always has a republican majority at its meetings. If this continues to be the case we believe there will soon be better times.

The Ass't reporter must have been asleep during the last meeting of the Senate, to write such an article as the preceeding one.

One of the students, who has become a resident here very recently, seems to think it necessary for his health to take a drive immediately after school, every evening, and it is a peculiar fact that he seems to care little for change of scenery, but takes the same road each time.

A Flag on Every School.

DES MOINES, Io., Feb 20.—The state senate today passed the house bill requiring the American flag to be displayed on every Iowa school house during the sessions of school.

County Cullings.

The Buffalo Journal think too many bills came before the Senate Judiciary committee at the close of the term and that a "sifting" committee would be of use.

From the last week's Wayerly Tribune we clip the following extract concerning a former Wright County Commissioner; well known here as an honerable, honest man:

We met S. E. Farnham, a former resident of this place, on the train, a few days ago on his way to Alexandria to take charge of a paper which is to be started there. He said he had given up his electric job at Little Falls

Uncle Joe Bland is one of the truest Democrats that ever stepped into shoe leather. "What do you think of the times, Mr. Bland?" said a reporter of the TRIBUNE to him while in town Wednesday. "Times," he replied, "I never saw better times in my life. The times are well enough."

The Woodland People's Club has had several interesting meetings at town hall in Woodland; and are to meet tomorrow Feb. 24th at 2 P. M. Everyone is invited to come regardless of political affiliations. That is the way to get at the bottom facts, don't believe all you hear until you get the other side and form your own opinion. Your conscience is as safe a guide as some one elses is for you at least.

Don't be sitting around and let the caucuses be called and the tickets for village and township officers placed in the field and you know nothing of it. Turn out and help nominate a good men and then get your neighbors to come to the polls with you on election day and place them in office. By this means you will be spared, the troubles and trials of bad roads, big taxes, and often times money foolishly wasted by incompetent men in office right at home, and whom, perhaps your vote would have kept out by electing a suitable man had you discharged your duty as an American citizen and watched affairs of interest to you and your neighbors from the primary meetings to the qualifications for office. See to it that the best men in your community hold the offices of trust.

District Court Cases.

Motion for new trial was argued before Judge Russell, on Saturday, in the case of Erickson against Pomeranuk, a ditch case—Cutting for Pfaff., Culkin for Dft.

Judge Russell rendered his decision in Rhoer vs. Buback against Bey, Dft., and Longwort, garnishee; being an appeal from Justice court by the garnishee on law alone.

The Judgment of the Justice is reversed and the garnishee discharged.

This case was tried at the last term and submitted on briefs. Cutting for garnishee and Culkin for plaintiff.

Julius Bursch vs. Paulina Bursch, of Burschville, Hennepin county, an action for divorce on grounds of desertion was heard by Judge Smith on Saturday. Divorce granted. M. A. O'Hair attorney for plaintiff.

G. A. R. Encampment and a Few Other Things.

INDEPENDENCE, Feburary 19.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE: Feeling just a little the worse of wear at present, of body and brain from the effect of neuralgia in the face, contracted while at Minneapolis, or coming from there, I am not much in shape for writing a letter for the press. But can say this much, during the last three or four days, I have been well entertained.

According to previous arrangements your correspondent took in the State G. A. R. Encampment at Harmonia Hall, Minneapolis on the 13th and 14th of the month, found to be a large and enthusiastic convention composed of Delegates from all parts of the State. To a casual observer one might think all the American patriotism was in the G. A. R. The convention was called to order by Department commander John Day Smith, at 10 oclock in the forenoon 13th present month.

First business in order was reading of reports by Department officers; also reports of committe and committee's reports on Resolutions, then the election of department officers for the ensuing year and the election of delegates to the national encampment at Pittsburg this fall. this included the principal business of the convention, except the campfire at the Lyceum Theater. Wednesday evening this your correspondent did not stay to see, and so ended the 14th annual encampment of the G. A. R.

Knowing that James Duganwas on trial for the Harris murder, at Minneapolis, I called at the Court House to see how the trial was progressing; found every avenue leading to large Court room guarded by policemen, but at last I gained entrance, and in thirty minutes the large Court room was full, every available seat and all the standing room being occupied. Court was called to order at 9:30 and James Dugan put on the stand and I thought while there, how is it that people take so much interest in seeing a man going through the death struggle, though he may rightly deserve it? Business seems to be quite lively around the Court House, quite a number paying taxes and doing other business. As yet the people of Hennepin county have only a pile of stone and masonry for a new Court House, and no one knows when it will materalize, perhaps sometime during the present century.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

A String of Bede's.

We again repeat: Let us love one another. —Bede's Budget.

Bede is a bright fellow, small of body but big of intelligence. * * The appointment is all right.—Norwood Times.

J. Adam Bede, of Tower, has been appointed U. S. matshal for the district of Minnesota. A better appointment could not have been made. Mr. Bede will make a very efficient officier.—Brainerd Journal.

The news of the appointment of J. Adam Bede, of Duluth, to be U. S. marshal of this state has excited no enthusiasm whatever. It was the price Maj. Baldwin received for supporting free iron.—Waverly Tribune.

If Baldwin had not been burned in effegy, J. Adam Bede would most likely, never have been U. S. marshal.—Brainerd Journal.

Tally one for Congressman Baldwin—on his recommendation. J. Adam Bede has been appointed U. S. marshal for the state of Minnesota, to succeed Danahower.—Mille Lac County Times.

Mr. Bede is a popular and able newspaper man, and the president is to be congratulated upon the selection which was no doubt the result of Major Baldwin's efforts and the worth of the man.—Mille Lacs County Times.

Independent Inklings.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know I am still thinking. I saw in the Minneapolis Tribune, daily, that the great oil king, Rockefeller, had got control of about all the iron mines in this country, as well as Cuba. Now isn't that nice for one man to control so much industry and the products thereof in this grand America? Is it not a grand thing for other nations to come to America with their money and send their profits back to their native land? When we wish to do anything in this country that requires a large amount of money all we have to do is to send over to the great Baron Rothchild, in London, England, and get the money we want at 2 or 3 per cent; but mind he will require a controling interest in all the stock as a surity for the interest on the money. Hence the Rothchilds have their money in every nook and corner of the globe, and at present it looks like we in this land will soon be under the dominion of some other government. If this country's property gets into some other nation's hand who will control it. It is stated by good authority, that all the mines of every character, railroads, factories, mills, breweries and many other industries are controled by foreign capital. It is also a known fact that foreign nations own in fee simple 21 millions of acres of land in this country; enough to make several of the United States. Where are we drifting to? How long at this rate will America be called the United States? I look with wonder at the way people are doing here. From the way things appear at this time it seems as if our country wants to do anything or know anything, we must first consult John Bull. Well she is a cunning old fox and knows how to dupe other nations as well as make them open up their ports for their trade. She starved 5 millions of India people to death through her greed. When the British Lion roads the nations know what it means.

Now in regard to our tariff legislation in this country, J. B looks on and says we must have free trade if we would prosper but she is all the time laughing in her sleeve to see what fools we are. She don't care a fig whether the tariff is voted up or down so long as she is protected in her money and can come over here with her gold and go to manufacturing here where all her raw material comes from for the same. She has so much money she can get all into her hands, and being protected she can make all the shoddy goods she pleases and sell them to us at a big profit. What fools we mortals are. Now here we are down on our hands and knees begging of J. B. a chance to live, eating free soup. INDEPENDENT TINKER.

A Generous Deed.

Here is a story illustrative of the kind nature of Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia: A compositor on the Ledger fell into the habit of neglecting his work on account of intoxication and was discharged. His wife came and pleaded with the philanthropist to give him another trial, but Mr. Childs said it was business, not sentiment, and he could not take him back. When she had gone, however, he sent a man to learn the circumstances of the family, and found that she was a hard-working milliner, struggling to keep up appearances. The next day a millinery establishment was offered for sale, and Mr. Childs bought, presented it to the compositor's wife, and told her although he could not employ her husband, he could give her the means of living. The husband was so overwhelmed that he signed a pledge and has kept it ever since, and is once more a faithful workman.—Traveler, The Rams Horn.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I never pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

CLEAR THE WAY.

Men of thought! be up, and stirring night and day:
Sow the seed—withdraw the curtain—CLEAR THE WAY!
Men of action, aid and cheer them, as ye may!
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a flower about to blow:
There's a midnight blackness changing into gray,
Men of thought and men of action, CLEAR THE WAY!

Once the welcome light has broken, who shall say
What the unimagined glories of the day?
What the evil that shall perish in its ray?
Aid the dawning, tongue and pen;
Aid it, hopes of honest men;
Aid it, paper; aid it, type:
Aid it, for the hour is ripe,
And our earnest must not slacken into play.
Men of thought and men of action, CLEAR THE WAY!

Lo! a cloud's about to vanish from the day;
And a brazen wrong to crumble into clay.
Lo! the right's about to conquer: CLEAR THE WAY!
With the right shall many more
Enter smiling at the door;
With the giant wrong shall fall
Many others, great and small,
That for ages long have held us for their prey.
Men of thought and men of action, CLEAR THE WAY!

CHAS. MACKAY.

STEELE Mackaye, of "Spectatorum" fame died on board a Santa Fee train on Sunday, Feb. 25.

LALEST reports from Mexico say that Congressman Wilson, who has been very sick is improving.

SOME of the politicians think Grover should appoint an older man for Marshal. Whose older than Adam?

HARRY HAWKINS has become a goldbug, according to his spokesman J. Adam, who says he is opening up a gold diggings in Carleton county.

BISHOP ZARDATTI, of St. Cloud has been made Archbishop of Bucharest Roumania. He is said to be a fine speaker.

MAJ. H. B. STRAIT died on a train at El Paso, Texas, on Sunday Feb. 25. He was an ex-member of Congress from Minnesota.

DULUTH'S great Republican victory is being laid to the A. P. A's and to the naturalizing of a large number of new voters by the Republicans.

SENATORIAL COURTESY among some of Minnesota's proinment Republican Senators seems to mean to pull hair in the newspapers over an insane law.

WHEN a city doctor sends out advertisements into country towns, claiming 27 years experience, and to be well known, and offering 25 per cent commission for all cases sent him, it looks as if the better he became know, the slacker his business.

THE Supreme Court has decided that the Court House bonds of Hennepin County can be sold and now the Court House commission propose to have a million dollars in the cource of six weeks and begin the work. Judge Fish gets the credit of prevailing on the Supreme Court to reverse itself.

BOB DUNN at the Editorial Association's annual meeting surprised some of the editors by desiring them to elect men to the Legislature next fall who would be favorable to newspapers, and help make laws in their interest, regardless of politics. Wonder if he expects all the Democratic editors to boom him for Auditor? Whats the matter with nominating a democratic editor against him or Hunt?

THERE should be some law against the naturalizing of a lot of voters on the eve of an election, the expenses to be paid by any political party, with the understanding that the new voters shall cast their first ballot for the party paving for their papers. A man without patriotism enough to secure his own papers is apt to be rather a poor citizen. And a party that depends upon carrying an election by such means is not doing the correct thing from a patriotic standpoint.

THE Midway News has something to say about a man who we think would make Minnesota a good governor. It is said, that unlike the wicked, whose name shall rot, his appellation has been from time to time lengthened out; until he was once known to his neighbors as Isan-tanka-hanskat-ark ho-teepee--chunka- tokacha--wa-pa--ha. Since then his constituency has adapted another language and he has become Major, Judge, Charles E. Flandrau, of St. Paul. His name after election would, of course soon be changed to the best Governor Minnesota nas ever had. If the democrats wish to make a showing this season they must put up a straight clean ticket and stand by it.

FROM the tone of our exchanges, we think they are about a unit in agreeing that Bob Ingersoll was a little out of his latitude when he got up before the Minnesota Editorial Association recently.

FROM Bede's Budget, we learn that Jeff Hildreth, of Minneapolis, an experienced gold miner, is making arrangements for placing a stamp mill at the site of the future Rainy Lake City, claiming that the gold discoveries there, are the best in the country today. J. Adam advises people to go slow and to be sure and stop at Tower a couple of weeks, on their way. The Middle of April he says is soon enough to find navigation open.

THE Stillwater prison authorities claim to have on hand about two million pounds of binding twine, made from hemp. The hemp comes mostly from Iowa and Kentucky, we are told; only a small portion being grown in Minnesota. The Kentucky hemp is longer in fiber and has to be mixed with the Iowa ane Minnesota grown article in order to make good, strong, smooth twine. This twine is to be sold next fall to who ever sees fit to buy, and unless some one brings a better article for less price, into the market, it will be extensively used.

THE Minneapolis Tribune says:
"The canal craze is on and a great deal of canal legislation is talked of. While the subject is up, congress should endeavor to do something for the famous old canal, the alimentary, which has been causing a great many constituents a great deal of worry and discomfort by reason of its emptiness since the advent of the clover administration.

It does look as if the canal craze was on, and as if each particular congressman who is found wanting when a quorum is needed had taken a job on the branch of the alimentary canal from his district and was doing his best to relieve the emptiness thereof, while he allows the other fellows to do the worrying.

WE are aware that we live in a large Congressional district; extending from Delano to Duluth, but it seems kind of strange at this end of the district to read of people at the other end advocating a tariff on iron ore, and stranger still to read that "a spirited meeting of the borrd of trade members was held." That board that Maj. Baldwin pronounced the "deadest thing in Minnesota." This "spirited" meeting we are told, favored the passage of a resolution asking Congress to put WHEAT on the free list! Why single out the one article? Wonder if they can get Congressman Tawney to present the bill to Congress and make a "spirited" speech in favor of it as he did on the free iron ore clause?

Tariff Tinkering.

Mankato Republicans are said to have passed resolutiong to aid in taking tariff question from the political platforms, by having a tariff commission appointed to adjust the matter; to fix the tariff on all goods or put them on the free list at their own sweet will. What a field for corruption that would be. If it would be as partisan as other boards and commissions have been people would never be satisfied and there would be in a constant turnmoil concerning the schedules of taxation liable to be made. The Mankato republicans have become aware that Minnesota has had enough protection and they desire to leave that question entirely out of politics for political reasons doubtless. The people have spoken for as near free trade as it is possible to get and run the government. They have decided by their ballots that they are of the opinions; or are thoroughly satisfied that our industries no longer need protection. The question has already been settled. As James G. Blaine said five years ago, as it is decided now so will it remain for a generation. It was then shown that a majority of the voters of the U. S. were opposed to protection, and at every election since it has been still more conclusively shown. No wonder these Minnesota politicians of the republican persuasion want it dropped. They know when they have been beaten and want to make the most of it by having a commission appointed. We don't believe in delegating the duties of a democratic Congress to non-partisan commissions. Experience should have learned democracy a lesson.

Three Bills By Baldwin.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Maj. Baldwin today introduced bills providing for public buildings in Brainerd and St. Cloud: also a bill appropriating $5,000 to make a preliminary survey and report as to the feasibility of constructing a ship canal from the Georgian bay through Canada to Lake Huron.—Globe.

If our Congressman's constituents at those places have sent in petitions asking for public buildings of course he would be expected to present them to Congress for their action: but it does not necessarily follow that he need support them. Just what Brainerd and St. Cloud need public buildings built with money taken out of the United States treasury for, is what every body don't know. If they need post offices, and the government is going to build them, of course the government must do the same for the balance of the villages in the country. It is not exactly Democratic to raise taxes from the people for the purpose of building fine $150,000 or $300,000 buildings in all the cities, towns and villages throughout this broad country. Uncle Sam can make better investments than that, if he has so much money to spare these hard times. As for building a canal from "Georgian bay through Canada to Lake Huron." we dont see how it could be of any interest to the United States. If the proposed canal is to connect Georgian bay with Lake Ontario it may be of benefit to the Zenith city by shortening the distance to the ocean. Even then it is questionable whether this country wants to invest in a canal scheme in Canada unless Canada is to first become a part of the United States. We are of opinion that this Congresss will not appropriate much, if any money for public buildings or other things that can be done without.

Statesmen Wanted.

Never before in the history of this grand old Republic has the need of Statesmanship been more felt than at the present time. The country is well supplied with individuals who grasp one idea; who can give a solution of one question in a manner satisfactory to a majority of the citizens of the United States; but they are ignorant of, or unwise in their plans for solving other problems of equal importance. What we need most is to send to the halls of Congress men who will give their time and attention to the business of the country; to the interests of the whole country. Men who are noted for their brains rather than their money. Men who can live on their salaries, and not complain that they have to spend more than they receive to keep up with their neighbors. Men not open to the charge of working for their individual interests. But who are paid enough to live comfortably on and lay by a little for use when they get home; and who fearlessly do what in their best judgment is the very best thing for the American people upon every question that comes up. Some people seem to look at Congressmen as something different from ordinary men; as if they could go on in the way they have been going for years to come without hindrance, the voters at home looking helplessly on. Not so, if voters will start out right and attend the primary meeting, and caucuses, and send as delegates to conventions, only the best men in each community then will they soon be surprised that no man receives a nomination for Congress, or is sent to the United States Senate that will not be above doing any jobbery; making any trades degrading to the law making body of our country. And only wise laws; laws for the betterment of the whole country, and all the people in it will be passed. Statesmanship will be again honored as in the days of Washington, Adams, Jefferson Hamilton, Lincoln, Douglass, and others, and honest men will not shrink from being sent to fill the highest offices in the gift of an honest people. The evils begun at home; trickery and dishonest means are used, and trades are made between parties and a ticket picked out to be elected, some of its men on one ticket some on another; the schemes are successful in towns. Enough towns are in the bargain to make it successful in the county, then in the Congressional and State Conventions; and thus the very head of our Government may become corrupt; may be given into the hands of tricksters. Keep the fountain heads pure. If you are a good man yourself don't neglect your duty. Don't sit idly by and see political trickery pick your candidate for office; and make your laws for you; but do well your part to purify these things. One vote lacking in one township or village caucus may result in sending a set of delegates to the county convention who will turn the scale between honesty and dishonesty, that delegation may be the power that sends the tricksters on their course to the state convention where they succeed in delegating men to the National Convention who are the privotal power in making the platform represent honor and the people: or dishonor and the tricksters: and for which there is nothing left but to submit. In order to avert this, at every election, impending catastrophe, let us like the minute men of '76, be ever on the alert; let us each and every one discharge our right, our duty by aiding in keeping the vermin out of the spring at our own home by attending and taking an intelligent and active part in the primaries. And then may we enjoy the blessings of pointing to our honest statesmen and wise laws as a model for all.

Religous Revivals.

Revivals are reported in different parts of the state. Little falls Minnesota. Rev. Geer is said to have had 63 accessions to his flock in the few months of his pastorate there. Evangelistic workers are at Brainerd in the Presbyterian church, a religious feeling seems to permeate the air all over the state, even Delano in where the Presbyterians and Methodists are both getting ready to do their best to awaken souls to their need of salvation.

Sugar on the Free List.

Sugar has been put on the free list by the republicans most likely the principal reason for doing so was to capture the southern vote by placing an undemocratic bounty on the home made article, and at the same time get the good will of the western man who now uses more sweetning than ever before. For policy, democrats would do well to allow sugar to remain on the free list so far as the western man is concerned. And they have also done right in removing the bounty for the home product. Sugar deserves no more bounty than does wheat, corn or oats. As sugar is cheap more is used and consequently more people are engaged in its manufacture than was previously the case, thereby making a home market for other things in proportion.

CENTRALIZATION OF WEALTH.

Income Tax a Remedy.

The following dissertation on "Centralizatien" was read before the regular meeting of the People's Club at the Woodland town hall, by W. Sidney Belt:

If the record of these, the closing hours of this great nineteenth century are to form a glittering page in the history of modern civilization, the immediate and practical solution of the most stupendous problems that have confronted man since the dawn of history, is the mighty task which the exigencies of the times impose on the people of today; indeed the perpetuity of our present magnificent civilization rests on man's ability and willingness to devise measures and inaugurate such sweeping reforms as will serve to strengthen the already weakened foundations. But if man shall be guilty of dereliction of duty and shall fail to devise a remedy for existent, palpable evils, it is obious that our modern civilization, the result of centuries of man's indomitable perseverance, must suffer a retrograde movement, or must plunge headlong to destruction; then, perchance, after ages of darkness and barbarism a new and perhaps more sublime civilization will be slowly builded on the ruins and brought to a state of seeming perfection only to be hurled from its foundations in its turn throught the consumate villainy of obdurate machinators.

The history of the world is but a history of the rise and fall of nations; of the gradual development of sublime civilizations followed by a rapid decadeance which eventuates in a plunge into the realms of darkness and barbarism. Glancing through the checkered pages of history we discern the records of the rise, from the mists of obscurity, of multitudes of people who have gradually developed until they have become mighty among the nations of the earth, then have come periods of rapid advancement in civilization and eras of great prosperity, diverse industries are evolved and apparently stable institutions builded up, until it becomes evident that the governments are to be perpetual. But doing the greater portion of this time mighty and apparently inscrutable powers are at work slowly but surely undermining the foundations; there is a warning but unheeded cry from the ever watchful patriot; the governments totter; a wild shriek of despair goes up from multitudinous throats and nations sink or plunge back into the misty realms from which they originated. This has been the history of nearly, if not quite all of the governments of bygone days; and similar will be the history of our own mighty republic unless our people take up the study of self-government and set about working out the momentous problems which demand their immediate attention; for the same powers which have overthrown the mighty nations of history are at work today consummating the subversion of this government, which we are told, is the admiration of the world.

Exhaustive research through the realms of history demonstrates the fact that the primary cause of the downfall of all nations, is the centralization of wealth. As soon as the wealth of a nation begins to concentrate in the hands of the few its institutions begin to degenerate; there is essentially a graual impoverishment of the masses; the producing classes sink to the level of serfs; homes are encumbered with mortgages; markets are controled; inexorable lobbyists corrupt legislators and secure the enactment of vicious laws and so add to the distress of the already over burdened masses; the medium of exchange is controlled; the land passes into the ownership of the "favored" few; business becomes paralized; and an ominous cloud hangs over the land. It is obvious that the direst consequence must result from such a condition, unless men are brought to a realizing sense of their duty to posterity. It matters not how rapidly the wealth of nation increases if there be not an equal distributation. Distributation is a vaster question by far, than production.

A traveler through England in 1700 tells us that there was not a bogger or idle person to be found along the rural highways. Taking the country as a whole the wealth was not great, but it was so evenly distributed that there was, comparatively speaking, general comfort among the industrialists. A century later when the wealth, under the influence of free competition and improved machinery, had increased enormously, there had been such an increase of poverty as to cause wise statesmen to pause and ask, "Can civilization long endure when man has degenerated to such conditions?"

The workingman once happy and contented is forced by the inhumanity of his fellowmen, to wear the galling chains of slavery. Hope has long since fled and gaunt despair hovers in the breast of degenerate man; his ambitions are stifled and his energies paralized; and he sends forth a despairing cry that it is useless to struggle against fate; that every chapter of history is darkened by the record of man's inhumanity to man; that the strong have ever oppressed the weak and will continue so to do till the end of time.

But what has he done to drag himself out of this dismal Slough of Despond into which he has been lured? Comparatively nothing; but portentious environments indicate that he must soon arouse from the lethargy into which he has fallen or he must soon be numbered among the subjects of monsters in human form who have usurped the prerogatives of governments.

That wealth has centralized in our own country with frightful rapidity is too obvious to need proof. Men are there in our midst, the magnitude of whose fortunes surpasses the comprehension of ordinary minds. The vastness of these accumulations precludes all possibility of their having been acquired honestly. That they were purloined from the pockets of the producers is axiomatic; for, assuming $20 per day as the maximum average wages a man can honestly earn, we find that had a person born three thousand years ago, lived until the present time, subsisting on nothing but the free air of Heaven and donning naught but the frail garb given him by Nature, he could not have amassed a fortune equal to that generally accredited to John D. Rockefeller. It is estimated that there are eight men in America who own one billion dollars of our wealth and 11,000 persons own 36 billions or one-half the entire wealth of the nation, while the remaining 36 billions are distributed unequally among 65,000,000 of people. In our cities the unequal distribution of wealth is, of course, vastly greater. Statistics prove the fact that in New York City the titles to all real estate are divided among only 13,000 men, while in Chicago but 2½ per cent of the population own every foot of real estate within the city limits. All this demonstrates the fact that while our national wealth has augmented enormously during the last three decades the greater portion, by far, has concentrated into the hands of the few.

Fifteen hundred years ago, when the wealth of the whole civilized world was in the hands of seventeen hundred families of the Roman Empire, Alaric, the barbarian Goth, climed the rugged Alps, swept down across the plains of Dombardy and Central Italy and thundered at the gates of the Eternal City. The aristocrats seeing that the people made no effort to prevent his gaining a imission, cried out: "Defend your city; why don't you defend your homes?" "We have nothing to defend," they replied, "you own it all."

And in parts of our own fair country how much better off are we? The last twenty-five years has witnessed a centralization of wealth that is appalling, and today millions of men driven to the verge of despair at the sight of pale starving children, indulge in pessimistic forebodings and cry out in their agony that the nation is doomed—and this in a land capable of supporting a population of 250 millions.

In the year 1867, when the nation was prospering as it had never prospered before, the Hon. Hugh McCullough, Sec. of the Treasury in his annual report announced that the country was comparatively out of debt, state, municipal, and individual, and that the national debt was being rapidly liquidated. Less than three decades have rolled by since that time and lo! behold the change. Today the national, state, municipal and private indebtedness amount in the aggregate to 35 billions of dollars—half the wealth of the entire nation. The interest on this vast sum is, alone, equal to six times the amount of money in circulation. The fact is too obvious to need demonstration that while our producers have created wealth with great rapidity a caste, or rather a class of consummate pilferers, has quietly and stealthily appropriated it, yet all the while the deluded people have been, and are still bearing all the burdens of government. Wm. H. Vanderbilt with his millions was taxed only $300,000 personal. A proper tax on this colossal fortune would have relieved many a debt burdened tax payer. Marshall Field's mamonth emporium in Chicago is assessed at one tenth of its value, and scores of others whose fortunes represent millions of appropriated wealth are taxed as lightly.

Various plans have, from time, been formulated for the relief of the people; but while nationalization in apparently the only true remedy, a properly graduated income tax would go a long way toward adjusting these gross inequalities. Had J. Gould's income of $2,000,000,000 per year, as well as the incomes of scores of other well known financers, been subjected to a tax of 50 or 75 per cent, these vast fortunes which are a menace to the liberties of any people, could not have been accumulated.

It is estimated that a properly adjusted tax on all incomes exceeding $5,000 would defray all the expenditures of government—national, state and municipal. This tax should be so graduated that when a person's income has reached a reasonable amount it will act as a brake to ruinous speculation. An income tax prevailed in the U. S. from 1863 to 1871. On incomes exceeding $600 and under $10,000 there was a tax of 3 per cent; over $10,000, 5 per cent. In 1865 this was increased to 5 per cent on all incomes between $5,000 and $10,000, and to 10 per cent on incomes in excess of $10,000. This yielded the government in 1863, $27,000,000; 1864, $20,000,000; in 1865, $52,000,000; in 1866, $73,000,000; and for the eight years a total revenue of $346,000,000. This tax soon became distasteful to the richer classes and was, of course, soon abrogated. Such a tax is essential to the continued prosperity of a nation like our own. It prevents the amassing of enormous fortunes, it discourages the formation of trusts and combines, so inimical to the interests of the producing classes; it precludes the possibility of the formation of a caste; in short it insures the happiness and prosperity of the people by maintaining the equal distribution of wealth.

In a country like our own, blessed as it is with the most stupendous resources, it is impossible to remain stationary; therefore our wealth rapidly augments. It is estimated that on billion dollars is added to our nation's wealth yearly, and yet millions suffer for want of food and raiment.

Reforms mighty and radical must come and come soon if the republic is perpetuated; therefore it behooves every man to rise in his might and drive out those who have usurped the prerogatives of government, so that the rising sun of a new prosperity may shine out in all its refulgency on millions of people thus made happy and contented.

Says Religion Should Cut No Figure in Politics.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 25.—Archbishop Ireland, in a sermon here today in the Cathedral of St. Paul on "The Catholic Church in America." said the church under the constitution had all the rights she desired, and advised Catholics to ignore the enemies of the church.

"Those who refused them their rights were few, and they should not be heeded. The opposition of any existing anti-Catholic party today would soon die out if it were not noticed." Continuing the archcishop said: Catholics belong to all parties, and it is well that this is the case. When American citizens vote, their basis of decision must be, not the religion of the candidate, but his citizenship and his personal fitness for the office. To put a man in office because he is a Catholic is wrong.—Times.

Eggs by the Pound.

If eggs were sold by the pound it would revolutionize the breeds. As we have defore shown, the hen that lays the largest number of eggs may not really be performing as great a service as one that lays fewer eggs but of larger size. Suppose a hen lays 120 eggs in a year, the eggs averaging ten to the pound. Her product would be twelve pounds of eggs in one year. Now let us suppose that another hen in the flock layed 104 eggs, the eggs averaging eight to the pound. In the first case the hen that produced 120 eggs would be more valuable, yet she has not performed as much service as the one which produced 104 eggs, as the eggs of the latter are a pound heavier, and if eggs were sold by weight she would give a larger profit on fewer eggs. Selling eggs by weight gives both the producer and consumer a fair sale and purchase, and farmers would begin to select the breeds that produced large eggs. They would then be compelled to improve their flocks in order to secure the best market prices for their eggs. The black Minorcas and the Black Spanish lay larger eggs than any of the breeds, and the Houdans come next, followed by the Brahmas and Cochins. Of course there are individual hens that will lay eggs far above the size pertaining to the breed, and our selections may not be strictly correct, but it is admitted that the Einorcas and Black Spanish are at the head as layers of large eggs. The two breeds are very closely related, and it is safe to say that one was derived from the other. We have seen whole baskets of eggs from these breeds, of which seven eggs to the pound was the average.—The Poultry Keeper.

A Fair Kleptomaniac.

There lately called upon Professor Cæsar Lombroso, of the University of Turin, a well-dressed, pleasant-mannered young man, who represented that his wife was the victim of an extreme case of kleptomania, public shops, private houses, her own house even being open fields to her in which to lay hands on the belongings of others.

Previous medical treatment had failed; the aid of the great doctor was solicited. By appointment the patient, a beautiful and engagingly frank young woman, was brought to Lombroso's office the next day. But while consultation was in progress between the distressed husband and the doctor they detected the fair patient approaching a gold statute and a photograph framed in brilliants, and fianally in the act of bidding the doctor goodday she relieved him of a valuable scarf-pin.

In an aside the distressed husband said: "You see for yourself how possessed she is with the theiving instinct. I will bring you back all the missing articles to-morrow at any hour you may appoint, when you will kindly give me your opinion of the case and advise me what to do."

The failure of the heart-broken man to appear with the valuables on the morrow, and the fact that a fair proportion of the physicians of the South of France and most of Italy are also patiently waiting to advise him how to treat his afflicted wife, who "borrowed" valuables of them also, leads Dr. Lombroso to the conviction that this was rather the most unique case of kleptomania yet brought to his notice.—Toledo Blade.

Carrying Fire-arms.

Another instance of the harmfulness of carrying fire-arms, is the death of Mr. Stanley and the Wounding of his son, near St. Cloud, a short time ago by August John. The parties are said to have met: with loaded teams, and got into an altercation as to who should turn out, resulting as above with a probable term of inprisonment. Had neither party had fire-arms so sad a sequel would most likely not be.

Who are the most famous writers and artists of both continents? The COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE is endeavoring to answer this enquiry by printing a list from month to month—in its contents pages. This magazine claims that notwithstanding its extraordinary reduction in price, it is bringing the most famous writers and artists of Europe and America to interest its readers, and in proof for this claim, submits the following list of contributors for the five months ending with February: Valdes, Howells, Paul Heyse, Francisque Sarcey, Robert Grant, John J. Ingalls, Lyman Abbott, Frederick Masson, Agnes Repplier, J. G. Whittier, (posthumous,) Walter Besant, Mark Twain, St. George Mivart, Paul Bourget, Louis Chandler Moulton, Flammarrion, Tissandier, F. Dempster Sherman, Adam Badeau, Capt. King Arthur Sherburne Hardy, George Ebers, De. Maupassant, Sir Edwin Arnold, Spielhagen, Andrew Lang, Berthelot, H. H. Boyesen, Hopkinson Smith, Lyman J. Gage, Dan'l C. Gilman, Franz Von Lenbach, Thomas A. Sanvier. And for artists who have illustrated during the same time: Vierge, Reinhart, Marold, F. D, Small, Dan Beard, Jose Cabrinety, Oliver Herford, Remington, Hamilton Gibson, Otto Bacher, H. S. Mowbray, Otto Guillonnet, F. G. Atwood, Hopkinson Smith, Geo. W. Edwards, Paul de Longore, HabertDys, F. H. Schell. How this is done for $1.50 a year, the editors of the Cosmopolitan alone know. The Cosmopolitan and the GAZETTE one year for $2.25

The owner would vote first, then sell his horse to the next, and so on, the poor beast being transferred from one to another till all had voted. Men who were too poor to buy a horse would build a wooden one and then swear that they owned a horse.

HENRY GEORGE has fought to a finish his contest for the estate of George Bowers, of Camden, N. J., who bequeathed it to him for the dissemination of his peculiar doctrines several years ago. The relatives of Bowers contested the will. Now, when the end is reached, only about $200 remains for the advocate of a single tax out of the $20,000 bequeathed. During the litigation Mr. George offered the widow a generous slice of the estate if she would stop legal proceedings. The other heirs refused their consent to this, and recently she died in the poorhouse of a broken heart.

THE fine writers who have described the wreck of the old warship Kearsarge have made much of the alleged throwing overboard of the famous eleven-inch gun with which she sunk the confederate privateer Alabama. Unfortunately for these imaginative gentlemen, one little fact spoils their well-told stories. The old eleven-inch gun was not on board the Kearsarge at the time she she was wrecked. Her armament had been changed several times since the war and not one of the original battery remained. As to the present location of the big guns, they are in the Mare Island navy yard.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 21.—In the senate the Hawaiian resolution was further discussed after a lively debate between several members on the tariff question. In the house Mr. Bland again failed to secure a quorum on his motion for a vote on the seigniorage bill, and after four hours of fruitless roll-calls the house adjourned.

THURSDAY, Feb. 32.—In the senate a resolution was offered to instruct the finance committee to prepare a bill for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. Also a resolution directing the judiciary committee to prepare a joint resolution, providing for the election of senators by a direct vote of the people. Adjourned to the 26th. In the house a bill was introduced to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada and one to repeal that part of the act of 1875 which authorizes the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds. Exciting events growing out of the wholesale arrest of members for being absent led to disorder and tumult, which, after continuing for hours, was suddenly terminated in an adjournment.

FRIDAY, Feb. 23. — There was no session in the senate. In the house the members under arrest were finally discharged from custody by dispensing with further proceedings under the call. Mr. Bland, in another futile effort to secure a vote on the silver seigniorage bill, called the filibusters anarchists, and said: "We were sent here to do our duty, and a time when the cities are thronged with mobs and the people cannot go to bed in peace and comfort is not the time when mob law should obtain here." At the evening session to consider pensions the lack of a quorum prevented the transaction of any business.

SATURDAY, Feb. 24.—There was no session in the senate. In the house roll call followed roll call, the opponents of the seigniorage bill throwing aside all pretense of not filibustering and boldly injecting motions to take a recess and to adjourn in order to prevent a vote on Mr. Bland's motion. Finally Mr. Bland said: "It is quite evident that the bondholders have control over this country and I, therefore, move that the house adjourn." The motion prevailed.

MONDAY, Feb. 26— In the senate the committee on foreign relations presented the report of its investigation of Hawaiian affairs. The report declares emphatically against monarchism; supports Minister Stevens' recognition of the provisional government, but disavows the protectorate; favors annexation without making any direct recommendation; condemns Queen Liliuokalani and finds that she was the aggressor in the revolution that secured her overthrow. In the house Mr. Bland, being unable to secure a quorum on the seigniorage bill, concluded to allow the debate on the bill to proceed for another day.

MORGAN REPORTS.

Views of a Senate Committee on the Hawaiian Muddle.

Ex-Minister Stevens Exonerated, Though He Did Wrong, It Says, in Establishing a Protectorate—The President's Course Commended.

BLAMES NO ONE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Senator Morgan, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, presented the report of the investigation of that committee made under the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the committee on foreign relations shall inquire and report whether any, and, if so, what, irregularities have occurred in the diplomatic or other intercourse between the United States and Hawaii in relation to the recent political revolution in Hawaii, and to this end said committee is authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths to witnesses."

The report prepared by Senator Morgan is concurred in by Senators Sherman, Frye, Dolph and Davis, the republican members of the committee, who also made a supplementary report, taking more positive grounds than the Morgan report, while Senators Butler, Turpie, Daniel and Gray (democrats) submit a minority report. A synopsis of the document is as follows:

Scope of the Investigation.

Senator Morgan in his report says that the inquiry related, first, to the conduct of the government as shown in its official acts and correspondence; and, second, to the conduct of the civil and military officers of the government in the discharge of their public duties and functions.

The report practically begins with a declaration against monarchism in the Hawaiian islands, saying that we exercise at least a moral suzerainty over that country. Hawaii, it says, is an American state and is embraced in the American commercial and military system. In this attitude of the two governments Hawaii must be entitled to demand of the United States an indulgent consideration if not an active sympathy.

Stevens' Course Justified.

Coming to the landing of the troops from the United States steamer Boston, Senator Morgan says that a condition of affairs existed in Honolulu which led naturally to the apprehension that violence or civil commotion would ensue, in which the security of American citizens residing in that city would be put in peril, as had been done on three occasions. There was not in Honolulu at that time any efficient executive power through which the rights of American citizens residing there could be protected. The authority of the queen was not respected by the people. An interregnum existed.

Was Virtually an Abdication.

There is well-settled authority for the position that at the moment when the queen made public her decision to absolve herself from her wish and support the constitution of 1887, her abdication was complete, if the people chose so to regard it. Liliuokalani had only been kept on her throne by the tolerance of the white people, who owned $50,000,000 of the property on the islands. It required nothing but the determined action of what was known as the missionary party to overthrow the queen, and that action had been taken before the troops from the Boston landed. There was no executive head of the government of Hawaii. It had perished. The report then calls attention to the fact that in landing the troops there was no demonstration and that in passing the palace they saluted the queen, who was helpless.

Right of Shelter Under the Flag.

In view of this state of facts the report lays down the following proposition: "In a country were there is no power of the law to protect the citizens of the United States there can be no law of nations nor any rule of comity that can rightfully prevent our flag from giving shelter to them under the protection of our arms."

The committee agrees that such was the condition of the Hawaiian government at the time the troops were landed, and that it was the right of the United States to land troops upon those islands at any place where it was necessary in the opinion of our minister to protect the citizens of our country.

Cogniza nce is taken of the charge that the landing of the troops was intended to overthrow the queen with the purpose of procuring the ultimate annexation of the islands to the United States, but the report declares that the purpose of Minister Stevens and Capt. Wiltz was legitimate and that they acted in good faith and with no interests except protecting American citizens and preserving order. The intensity of the queen's opposition to the missionaries is referred to.

The report speaks of the queen's desire for the banishment or death of those who had opposed her and says that America should not hesitate in the support of a government set up to oppose her.

Willis Did His Best.

Continuing, the report says:

"The president says that on the first intimation of these harsh declarations he at once laid them before congress and abandoned the further exercise of his good offices to bring about a reconciliation. Mr. Willis, however, regarding his instructions as continuing to require his intercession beyond the point where the president considered that it should cease, held a second and third interview with Liliuokalani. Mr. Willis, in what he did, obeyed what he conceived to be his instructions, and being so distant from Washington it is a matter of regret but not of surprise that there was an apparent want of harmony between his action in continuing his interviews with Liliuokalani after the president had determined that the full duty of the government had been performed. When a crown falls in any kingdom of the western hemisphere it is pulverized, and when a scepter departs it departs forever; and American opinion cannot sustain any American ruler in the attempt to restore them, no matter how virtuous and sincere the reasons may be that seem to justify him."

Stevens' Duty Was Plain.

Mr. Stevens' recognition of the new government is justified, the report making the point: "It was his duty at the safest possible period to assist, by his recognition, the termination of the interreguum, so that citizens of the United States might be safely remitted to the care of that government for the care of their rights. Afterward, on February 1, 1893, the American minister caused the flag of the United States to be raised and assumed and declared a protectorate over Hawaii. This act on the part of our minister was without authority and was void for want of power. It was disavowed by Secretary Foster and rebuked by Secretary Gresham, and the order to abandon the protectorate and haul down the flag was in accordance with the duty and honor of the United States."

The matter of annexation is discussed at some length, and while the whole tenor of the report relating to the subject is favorable to annexation no direct statement was made therein.

Effect of Recognition.

Next the report states that recognition of the provisional government was lawful and has contributed to the peace of Hawaii. The report takes the side of the provisional government as respects the counter revolution which the queen provoked and it is exceedingly severe on the ministers of the queen.

Missions of Blount and Willis.

The right of the president to appoint Mr. Blount is discussed, the report stating the conclusions to be that such a right no doubt existed and that the authority given to Mr. Blount and which he exercised was proper. Then Mr Willis' mission is taken up and the position of the president referred to in the following:

"If, in this course of proceedings, the president of the United States had intended to compel obedience to what is termed his 'decision' in the matter, by using the force of the United States to assist the queen in being enthroned, that would have been an act of war, entirely beyond his power. But such was not the intention of the president, as shown by contemporaneous acts, by his declarations and by his subsequent treatment of the subject."

The report then goes on as follows:

"In the public act by which the provisional government of Hawaii was established there was a distinct declaration that that government was to continue until Hawaii was annexed to the United States. That declaration, apart from every other consideration, would have justified the United States in an interference for the protection for the provisional government, which would not have been tolerated under other circumstances."

Views of the Republicans.

Senators Sherman, Frye, Dolph and Davis, the republican members, in their supplemental report say they are in entire accord with the essential findings of the report of the committee as a whole, but add that it is their opinion that the appointment of Commissioner Blount and his gift of authority, without the advice and consent of the senate, was an unconstitutional action; in the second place, that the orders by which the naval force at Honolulu was placed under the authority of Mr. Blount or Mr. Willis was without authority or warrant by law; thirdly, that Mr. Blount's order to lower the United States ensign from the government building in Honolulu was made without lawful authority; fourthly, that the right of the provisional government to exist had been settled conclusively by President Harrison's recognition of it, and that the president of the United States had no authority to reopen determined questions or by any means whatever to attempt to overthrow the provisional governmeut or restore the monarchy which had been displaced, and, finally, the republican members say:

"The avowed opinion of the president of the United States, in substance that it is the duty of the government to make reparation to the queen by endeavoring to reinstate her upon her throne by all constitutional methods, is a clear definition of the policy of the present administration to that end. The instructions to Messrs. Blount and Willis must be construed to be other and more ample forms of expression of that policy."

The Minority Report.

The minority report denies the correctness of the declaration that the only substantial irregularity in the conduct of Mr. Stevens was his declaration of a protectorate by the United States over Hawaii. The right of the United States to interfere with the internal affairs of Hawaii is also questioned. The commander of the Boston is exonerated, but Stevens is criticised as having been controlled by "inopportune" zeal. In concluding, with reference to Stevens, the report, which is signed by M. C. Butler, David Turpie, John M. Daniel and George Gray, says:

"His conduct as the public representative of this government was directly conducive to bring about the condition of affairs which resulted in the overthrow of the queen, the organization of the provisional government, the landing of the United States troops and the attempted scheme of annexation, and upon this conclusion his conduct is seriously reprehensible and deserving of public censure."

Butler and Turpie for Annexation.

In an independent letter Senator Butler says, and his utterance is indorsed by Senator Turpie: "I am heartily in favor of the acquisition of those islands by the government of the United States, and in a proper case and on an appropriate occasion I should earnestly advocate the same. But I am unwilling to take advantage of internal dissensions in those islands, for which I believe we are in a measure responsible, to consummate at this time so desirable an object."

The testimony covers 739 printed pages. The witnesses include Stevens, Blount, many naval officers and residents of Hawaii. Stevens' testimony covers sixty pages and is similar to his public explanations. Mr. Blount said he had no intimation when he went to Hawaii that the ex-queen was to be restored.

MORE OFFICIALS ARRAIGNED.

Michigan's Secretary of State Held in $7,000 Bail—Date of the Trial.

LANSING, Mich, Feb. 27.—John W. Jochim, secretary of state; Marcus Petersen, William May, clerk of Wayne county, and James G. Clark were arraigned at Mason Monday on indictments returned by the grand jury. All stood mute and the court directed the clerk to enter a plea of not guilty in each case. Jochim will have to answer to indictments for making a false public record, willful neglect of duty and conspiracy. His aggregate bail is $7,000, and Mayor A. O. Bement and G. W. Bement, of this city, are his sureties. Patrick Blake and Louis Saveigne, of Detroit, signed May's bond of $1,000 in each of the cases, for conspiracy and destruction of the Wayne county records. Peterson and Clark, having been indicted for conspiracy only, had to give only $1,000 bail. Jacob Stahl and J. M. Skinner, of Lansing, signed Petersen's bond. Adolph Buder and Frank Houpt, of Detroit, did a similar service for Clark. All of the indicted men have now been released on bail. Some of them will be tried during the next term of court, which will convene in this city March 12.

SHE NEVER SAID IT.

Mrs. Lease Denies the Report That She Claimed to Be a Mason.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Mrs. Mary Lease, the famous female politician of Kansas, is in the city. In an interview in response to a question as to the rumor that she had declared herself to be a mason, Mrs. Lease laughed heartily, and said:

"Of course I am not a mason and never said I was, although I wear an emblem of the order. The report originated in my assertion that the time had come when women should bind themselves together for mutual aid and protection in an oath bound organization in line with masonry. And I don't see why women shouldn't be eligible to become masons. The discrimination against the sex in this as in other instances is but an old prejudice which is fast passing away. Equal suffrage is the keynote of human progress."

WIMAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Erastus Wiman appeared in part 1, general sessions, and pleaded not guilty to the indictments against him. He immediately left the courtroom, his bail of $25,000 being continued. No date was set for the trial. His counsel, Mr. Boardman, in a statement Sunday, outlined the defense by declaring that Mr. Wiman was a partner in R. G. Dun & Co., and that what Mr. Nicholl had characterized as a forgery was virtually transfers of money from one account over which he had full control to another account over which he also had full control.

A 13-YEAR-OLD BOY LYNCHED.

An Alabama Mob Takes Summary Vengeance on the Slayer of an Officer.

SHERMAN, Ala., Feb. 28.—Thomas Douglass, aged 13, was hanged Monday by a mob and his body riddled with bullets. The boy shot and killed Deputy Sheriff John Cowlett, who had gone to the boy's home to levy on a cow owned by his mother. She refused to let it go and told the boy to shoot the officer if he attempted to drive the animal away. The officer started and the boy fired with the result noted.

Bad Fire in 'Frisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—The Golden Rule bazaar and contents were destroyed by fire Monday night. The building was a wooden structure, two stories in height. The store was conducted by Davis Bros., and contained a large stock of toys and notions. The entire fire department was called out and succeeded in keeping the fire from spreading. The total loss will be about $200,000 on stock and $30,000 on the buildings.

Heavy Receipts of Gold at Denver.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 28.—The receipts of gold at the Denver mint this month will be larger than any other month in the history of the institution. The amount will be over $218,000, the highest previous recorded being $214,000. It is estimated the receipts are less than 30 per cent. of the gold product in this district.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Insurance Report.

Insurance Commissioner Smith has completed his report of 1893, so far as regards the fire companies. This shows a heavy loss, the percentage of losses to premiums received being 87 against 48 the previous year. It cost the companies 35 per cent to do business, so that their record for 1893 leaves them 22 per cent worse than nothing. The statements of business for 20 years show that the percentage of loss has only twice been higher, once in 1878, when it was 98, and again in 1890, when it was 106. The average ratio of loss has been 62.

The total amount of risks written in 1893 was $107,663,310, against $231,364,587 in 1892. The premiums received amounted to $2,809,321.68, against $3,131,323.85 for 1892. The average premium rate was $1.42 against $1.35 in 1892. The losses incurred were $1,490,915.09 for 1892 and $2,430,342.19 for 1893. These are the figures for the American companies. For foreign companies with branches in the United States there is less difference in the figures for the two years. They run as follows: Risks written, 1892, $63,534,967, 1893, $66,183,667; premiums received, 1892, $1,023,005.20, 1893, $1,055,965; average premium rates, 1892, $1.61, 1893, $1.60; losses incurred, 1892, $533,108, 1893, $913,556.27; ratio of loss to premiums received, 1892, 52, 1893, 87.

The figures of the mutual companies are less complete. The risks for 1892 were $2,527,532, against $2,851,214 for 1893; premiums, 1892, $77,539.22, 1893, $82,747.42; losses incurred, 1892, $53,068.20, 1893, $46,098.56. The year was a bad one for the fire companies, and with the opening of 1894, 15 companies have withdrawn from this state and only one new company has been admitted.

Found Dead.

Mrs. Lizzie Nachtigal was found dead in her bed in her rooms in Minneapolis with her 3-year-old child sleeping quietly by her side. Everything about the room indicated abject poverty. Mrs. Nachtigal has a peculiar history. Some years ago she owned the house and lot where she has recently occupied a wretched room on the second floor, but gradually the property dropped from her possession until, during the past six months, she has been a city charge. While the coroner was making his investigations $375 and a number of fine silk dresses were discovered among her effects. Her husband left her about a year ago, and since that time she has, to all appearances, been in the most wretched circumstances.

Sad Accident.

Jesse F. Maxwell accidentally shot his wife at their home in Wabasha. Maxwell was showing her the proper mode of defense for an attack by footpads and had in the pocket of his short hunting jacket a 38-caliber self-cocking revolver. This was discharged, and the ball struck his wife in the center of the chest, passed through the right lung and lodged near the spinal cord. Medical assistance was summoned and the ball removed. It was flattened somewhat at the point. Mrs. Maxwell's chances for recovery are doubtful. They were married but two months ago. The husband is almost wild with grief. Both are well known young people of that city.

Pine Suits Begun.

One of the long expected and famous pine land suits has been brought at last, and is entitled the State of Minnesota against the Ackley Lumber company.

The suit is filed in Itasca county, in the Fifteenth judicial district, and demands that the permit heretofore issued to the defendant be revoked and that the plaintiff have judgment for the cost of the timber heretofore cut on the premises described. The action is substantially the same as tried in Princeton against C. A. Smith before Judges Baxter and Searles, in which the state recovered judgment and had an order to set the permit aside.

CLIP. SAVE AND SEND TO US

Chief Buchanan of the Dept. of Agriculture wished it put up to cut and grind feed for the stock on exhibition and urged Aermotor Windmill Co. to put up outfits. They would not, and tried to prevent us. They had a regular organization for fighting us, held meetings, and appointed committees and for weeks occupied a great deal of their own time and that of the World's Fair Officials trying to prevent us from erecting one, and our outfit was actually torn down and wrecked one evening after dark, before it was completed, by parties who pulled it over with a rope.

Mr. Buchanan sent Chief of Staff, J. J. Green, with a committee of the kickers to see us, and in his presence, the Pres. of the Aermotor Co. offered to pay freight, or express on Geared outfits that was secured down in the 4 x 4 braces which pass from each foot of the tower to where they were securely bolted to the 10 x 10 timber, 34 ft. long, which extended from the peak of the roof to the floor, so that the entire weight of the tower was transmitted through the mast to the floor. This shows how a high steel tower can be put on a light frame structure. In this case the wheel was far enough above the buildings to be unaffected by the eddies and currents caused by them. The shaft in the Tower is supported by Steel Rods and Braces.

Why buy a Horse Power with which to apply horse power when for the same money you can get a Geared Aermotor which supplies perpetual power and is always harnessed?

In this model outfit no horizontal shaft was used. We belted direct to other machines from the pulley, which is always a part of the Aermotor Grinder, thus greatly economizing in first cost, in power, and in space. It cut feed as rapidly as two men could get it to the cutter and ground 15 to 20 bushels an hour. A great many outfits were sold to those who saw it work. It was a 12-ft. Geared Aermotor on a 40-ft steel tower, put up on a light frame barn, and in a 65 mile wind one could hardly feel the barn shake. The feet of the Steel Tower rested upon two 4x4 timbers laid on the roof. Through these feet and timbers long bolts passed through the roof and were secured down in the 4 x 4 braces which pass from each foot of the tower to where they were securely bolted to the 10 x 10 timber, 34 ft. long, which extended from the peak of the roof to the floor, so that the entire weight of the tower was transmitted through the mast to the floor. This shows how a high steel tower can be put on a light frame structure. In this case the wheel was far enough above the buildings to be unaffected by the eddies and currents caused by them. ## AN AUBURN MIRACLE.

An Act of Heroism Is Followed by Dire Results.

Edward Donnelly Saves a Life Almost at the Cost of His Own—After Years of Suffering He Is Restored to Health—His Story as Told to a Reporter of the Auburn Bulletin.

[Auburn, N. Y., Bulletin.]

It is on record that upon a chilly April day, a few years ago, an eight-year-old boy fell into the East river at the foot of East Eighth street, New York, and when all efforts to rescue him had failed, Edward Donnelly, at risk of his own life, plunged into the water and, when himself nearly exhausted, saved the boy from drowning. It was a humane and self-sacrificing deed, and received deserved commendation in all the newspapers.

There is a sequel to this accident, however, which thus far has not been published. It is to the effect that Donnelly was paralyzed as a result of the cold plunge and came near dying. Auburn people have known the family since his wife was Amanda Grantman and his sister Mrs. S. D. Corry, of 21 Moravia street. Donnelly himself describes the rescue and the result:—

"I was general foreman of the F. A. Mulgrew Saw Mills, foot of Eighth street, N. Y., on the East river. It was on the 20th of April, 1880, that the boy fell into the river and I rescued him from drowning. At that time I was in the water so long that I was taken with a deathly chill, and soon became so stiffened up and weak that I could neither work nor walk. For some time I was under treatment of Dr. George McDonald, who said I had Locomotor Ataxia. He finally gave me up, and on the 1st of June, 1892, my wife and I came up to Auburn.

"When the disease first came upon me the numbness began in my heels, and soon the whole of both my feet became affected. There was a cold feeling across the small of my back and downwards, and a sense of soreness and a tight pressure on the chest. The numbness gradually extended up both legs and into the lower part of my body. I felt that death was creeping up to my vitals. I was still taking the medicine ('It was Iodide of Potassium,' said his wife), and was being rubbed and having plasters put all over my body, but with no benefit.

"I sent to the Chas. H. Sagar Company, the popular Auburn druggists and chemists, at 109 and 111 Genesee street, and got three boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and began taking them. In three weeks' time I was so improved that from being helpless, I was able to help myself and to get up and go to work, and to walk every day from No. 74 Walnut street, where I then lived, to Osborn's New Twine Factory, Seymour and Cottage streets—more than a mile—where I was then employed, but all the while I was taking Pink Pills.

"Then Dr. Patchen, of Wisconsin, uncle of my wife, and who was here on a visit, began to poo-hoo at me for taking Pink Pills, and finally persuaded me to stop taking them and let him treat me. When he returned to the West he left a prescription with Dr. Hyatt, of Auburn, who also treated me. But their treatment did me no good, and after a while the old trouble returned and I was getting bad again. Then I began to take Pink Pills; have taken them ever since, am taking them now; have taken in all nearly 20 boxes at an entire cost of less than $10.00 (my other treatment cost me a pile of money), and again I am well and able to work.

"If I was able, I would at my own expense, publish the virtues of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the whole world and especially in New York City, where I am much better known than I am here."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People without doubt mark the beginning of a more healthful era. They were first compounded by an eminent practitioner, and used as a prescription for many years in general practice with almost incredible success. They are now given to the public as an unfailing blood builder and nerve restorer, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of almost every ill that flesh is heir to. These pills are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

A WOMAN'S YES.

An Incident in the Love Affairs of Miss Bragg.

Miss Louise Bragg's social colleagues were fond of saying of her to one another and to strangers that she was a wonderfully clever young woman. This was meant in no qualified sense; it carried with it no contingencies; the distinction was positive. The fact of her cleverness stood prominently apart, and was a notable item in the general assets of her social set. It became one of the chief facts concerning her interesting personality, and frequently overshadowed less striking ones when she was being conversationally considered.

She was of the slender, willowy type; tall as most men, and graceful after an unconscious, unstudied fashion. Her face had straight, angular lines, and was not essentially pretty. When she smiled it revealed many surprising curves and subtle charms of expression. Wondrous power lay in her brown eyes, power under complete subjection of her will. Her hair was of the bright yellow tint of over-ripe wheat, the tint that somehow suggests artificiality. Little curling wisps defied the imprisonment of the dainty coiffure in which her tresses were fastened.

She was original and clever and, therefore, unconventional and Bohemian. Men she chose to regard in a humorous light, as rather amusing animals, charming under certain circumstances, but ordinarily dull and vulgar. At little social gatherings of her sex, her coming was always awaited as an event which would give breeziness and vigor to the conversation. She was not at all unpopular among her own sex. This was doubtless due to the heartless manner in which she rejected the lovers of a great many of her young lady friends.

Miss Bragg's love experiences had been numerous; but she had managed with her cleverness to give them variety. Every man she had ever known well had attempted to make love to her. She thought it very amusing, and her women friends agreed with her in this view when she told them of her experiences, omitting names. She was not without conscience in the matter, however, and contented herself with believing that all of her admirers would get over their weakness without permanent hurt.

A brief note from one of these admirers received one morning just as she was going out produced marked effect upon Miss Bragg. She gave up her intention to go out and sat down to read a second and a third time the very brief and conventional epistle. It was a very concise note from Mr. Philip Newmann, asking her to walk with him in the afternoon.

These walks, it must be explained, formed one of Miss Bragg's characteristic social institutions. Besides being clever she was peculiar. She went walking with young men much oftener than she went driving or to the theater with them. Mr. Phil Newmann had been one of the first young men to enjoy the pleasure of these walks, and the sight of him promenading with Miss Bragg had inspired countless other young men to aspire to the same privilege. But for three years, although she had walked often, Newmann had not been her companion. She had seen him occasionally at balls, parties, the theater and elsewhere, but had had little communication with him. The day before receiving his note she had passed him on the street and he had bowed in a distantly polite manner.

After reading the note the third time and vainly trying to comprehend its meaning she took from the cabinet, in which she kept all her letters, a letter in the same handwriting, and, putting the two together, studied them. Though totally different in tone and apparent meaning she believed them to be of practically the same import. The first, written by Newmann just after their last walk together three years before, was a timid, half fearful proposal of marriage. It had a tremulous note of fear in it—fear that she would refuse. The last—just four lines—asked her to walk, nothing more. Yet, Miss Bragg's logic gave the two the same meaning.

"Well," said Miss Bragg, as she finished her note of acceptance, "the answer's the same to both letters—'yes.' Before it was a qualified, obscure 'yes'—he didn't recognize in its disguise. This time—I don't like this—I'll make it plain for him."

She tore up what she had written, and penned in scrawling, careless characters: "Yes—Louise Bragg. I like that better," she said. She read Newmann's note again, half smiling. "I wonder if this last phase in the evolution of Mr. Newmann's feelings is as complimentary to me as the first," she speculated. "He's a man of moods, phases and periods. It's hard to make out the meaning of this last. It sounds like a last appeal. He is a human paradox."

Of all her love affairs, this was the most interesting to Miss Bragg. This was due to its novel history and to other reasons. Newmann was a society man of a not remarkable mental caliber. He measured up to the average of his set. He was rather tall and handsome, with a face typically southern. What particular quality of his that drew her toward him, Miss Bragg herself could not say—but she was conscious of liking him. Their walks, as has been said, were frequent, and their talks, while confidential, had never touched upon matrimonial topics.

He reserved the mention of this subject for the letter that has been referred to. Miss Bragg was a bit disappointed at having so important a question treated after the manner of a business negotiation. It seemed a little cowardly to write. Her reply was characteristically worded. To a few men in the world it would have meant "no," but to the generality of men "yes"—a woman's yes.

A call the next day would have accorded with Miss Bragg's idea of what the behavior of a young man in Newmann's place should have been, but he did not call the next day, the next week, the next month or the next year. Indeed, three whole years passed and he neither wrote or spoke to her upon the subject. After a short time she repented of having replied as she had done. Her letter now seemed so hasty, so ill-considered. If she had waited a month to reply it would have been different, she felt. Still she could not understand Newmann's conduct, and it was far from her to ask him for an explanation.

Miss Bragg dressed with great care, and calmly self possessed, she sat awaiting for Newmann. She read his last two letters again, but the reperusal of them left her puzzled still. From her cabinet she fished out a package of letters she had received from him. She had not seen them since first receiving them, but now she read them with peculiar interest. In the package were three or four written while Newmann was away on a business trip, others were written to her at mountain resorts, others still were nothing but mere formal notes asking for an engagement—all breathed the spirit of love. She could understand his actions even less as she read them, which she did with marked eagerness. Out of the confused tangle of odds and ends that filled her cabinet she searched for letters in Newmann's well known handwriting. The letters had been tossed in promiscuously and hidden from view since.

A bright, crisp, new-looking envelope dropped from her fingers as she drew out a bundle, and, picking it up, she examined it curiously. As her glance fell upon it the blood left her face and her heart stood still. It was in her own handwriting addressed to Newmann—her answer to his letter of three years ago.

As she sat there regarding it in bewilderment Mr. Newmann's card was handed to her.

No traces of agitation were visible in Miss Bragg's manner when she smilingly greeted Newmann a minute later. He nervously shook hands. Miss Bragg did not sit down. "I believe we are to walk?" she said, as if the matter was of so little importance that she had almost forgotten. "Yes," he said, getting up hastily.

As they reached the sidewalk they stopped undecided which way to go. "It's a nice walk out in the vicinity of Jefferson Heights," Newmann said, hesitatingly. "We used to walk there often, you remember." "Oh, no, not Jefferson Heights," she said, as if the place was not to be considered, "it's so stupid—I detest the place." She slowly set off in an opposite direction. Newmann walked silently beside her for a few moments. Presently he announced the discovery that it was a fine day for walking. Next he observed that the day was just like that on which they had taken their last walk together. This was followed by another and a longer pause, broke by Newmann's question: "You remember what a fine day it was, Miss Bragg?" She made an effort to remember, knitting her brows and looking thoughtful. Utterly failing to recall it, she excused herself. "You see we walked together more than once and the days were always fine—I knew they were, because I wouldn't have gone otherwise. And then three years is too long to remember such a thing as the state of the weather."

After that Mr. Newman evaded the weather and that last walk as perilous topics. He talked about people, and had the air of a man who wanted badly to talk of something else. He grew nervous when Miss Bragg at last turned round and faced homeward. The walk had grown to be dull. "Miss Bragg," Newman said at last, "I'm going to Europe in a few days, and there's something I want to ask you before I go. If your answer is what I hope it will be I will not go. Why did you not answer my letter three years ago?" Miss Bragg's face assumed the expression of one who has an unpleasant something to say. "Such letters are not easy to answer," she said. "One has to think before replying. I did write a letter to you, but did not send it. I thought I would wait—I thought I could tell you better." "But you did not tell me," Newmann burst out eagerly. "You did not ask me," she said, quite calmly. Newmann looked flushed and disappointed. "What did you write me?" he asked as they walked on. "Can you guess?" she asked. His face showed his disappointment. "Oh, I guess I know what it was," he said, bitterly, "and it has caused me hours of anguish and pain, nights of sleepless unrest. Oh, Miss Bragg, you can't guess how much it has cost me. I have seen no pleasure, no peace, no rest. It will always be the same. You will pardon me for bothering you again, but I had hoped, after waiting three years and seeing that there was no other man, that you might change your answer. I could not go to Europe without asking you."

They walked along in silence. They were already within sight of Miss Bragg's home. At the door he stopped before her and asked, half imploringly: "Am I to accept your answer as final?" She nodded an affirmative. "My answer is final," she said. "Miss Bragg," he said, tremulously, "I can never forget you. I shall think of you constantly while I am abroad. I'm sorry to have caused you the pain of rejecting me a second time. Good-by."

He held out his hand and took hers in a strong grasp. "Good-by, Mr. Newmann," she said. "I trust you will have a pleasant trip abroad." "Thank you," he said. "Good-by." He gave her a last look and turned to go. "Mr. Newmann, stop a moment," she called. He walked back to her, his honest face flushed with pain. "I am awfully sorry," she said. "Believe I esteem you highly and regret that this has occurred. Your letters—I want to return them. Wait a moment till I get them." "You may burn—" he started to say, but she was gone.

She found them just as she had left them in her cabinet. She picked them up and evened their ends so as to make a square bundle. She tied the package with a small satin ribbon. Her own letter lay on the cabinet. She picked it up and held it undecisively for a moment. Impulsively she tucked it beneath the ribbon with the rest.

"I think you will find all of them here," she said, handing him the package. "And I happened to find my answer to your letter of three years ago. You were curious to know what I had written, so I put it in with your letters. Good-by."

They shook hands. "I will read it, even though it gives me pain," he said in a low tone.

He hurried down the walkway, the very image of an unhappy man.

But the steamer for Europe that left a few days later did not number Mr. Newmann among its passengers. He had read in Miss Bragg's answer a "woman's yes."—Robert L. Adamson, in Atlanta Constitution.

EMULATED RIP VAN WINKLE.

How a Maine Man Disappeared from Society and Reappeared After Ten Years.

A faint suggestion of the story of Rip Van Winkle attaches to that of Jim Hayes, a one time resident of a village in western Maine, located near the boundary line between that state and New Hampshire.

While digging out his well one morning the walls caved in, burying him beneath the debris, in such a manner, however, that the stones, instead of crushing him, formed an arch over his prostrate body.

The brilliant idea occurred to Jim, whose aversion to work, by the way, was a neighborhood proverb, that rather than subject himself to the labor of digging his way to the surface it would be a shrewd dodge to remain quietly where he was and let the neighbors dig himself and incidentally his well out for him.

What followed only goes to show that a man may reckon without his neighbors.

The latter, arriving upon the scene, after due deliberation and a discussion of ways and means, expressed their unanimous opinion in the following unsentimental but practical syllogism:

That Jim was at once dead and buried.

That a dead man ought to be buried.

Conclusion—That the best thing to be done was to do nothing—to-wit, leave the well and Jim in such condition as found.

The general consensus of opinion was that the late Jim had been a lazy, good for nothing, shiftless dog, who had conferred a greater benefit upon the village by thus quietly dropping out of its society without putting his neighbors to the trouble of burying him than he had ever done while living.

Remarks to this effect, and other even less complimentary, being born vaguely to the ears of the entombed Jim apprising him of the worth imputed to him by his fellow townsmen, he then and there resolved to reform and mend his ways.

Realizing that a return to his old associates and associations would be a serious bar to these good resolutions, the now reformed Jim set industriously to work to dig himself out; but instead of making his way straight upward he pursued, for a rod or two, a lateral course, which eventually brought him out a few feet the other side of the state boundary line of the state of New Hampshire.

Here, it is averred, a steady adherence to his subterranean resolutions made a new man of him, so that he became of sufficient importance and prominence to be made chairman of the selectmen and a member of the school committee in a little New Hampshire town.

Upon returning to his native village after a lapse of ten years he was greeted with amazement by his old cronies, who had supposed him buried by an act of Providence. Such, however, was the position he had acquired for himself in society that any feelings of incredulity which the story he told may have had aroused in their bosoms were suffered to lie dormant and were given no outward expression.

Finally, it may be said to those who have doubts concerning the truthfulness of the narrative, that the foundation for it, lying, as it does at the bottom of a well, should of itself serve to repel all such unfavorable suspicions.—N. Y. Herald.

UNUSED WISDOM.

Economy in Household Affairs for Other People.

Next to the management of other people's children, the management of other people's incomes is the field in which we best display our genius. There is no doubt, judging from the comments made, that financial embarrassment would disappear from the circle of our friends if only they would expend their incomes in accordance with our wise opinions. It is pitiable to see people who could have the benefit of our wisdom calmly ignore their privilege, and proceed to expend their money in such foolish ways—ways which force them to embarrassment! We could, if only they would listen, show them the lack of proportion in their expenditures. How much our friend could save if only she would discharge one servant and do that servant's work! True, she does not know how to do that kind of work, and she dislikes that particular branch of housework, but we know she ought to learn. She persists in her own way, and must economize in hats. Then the table expenses. How our wisdom would reduce bills here! We would be willing to make out a menu that would be much more economical than the haphazard arrangement that prevails in her household now! The family might not enjoy it; doubtless would prefer the present variety that is the result of want of system; that is, of course, a secondary matter. Wisdom cannot afford attention to such trifling matters as the palate!

Then in dress. It is a question where our wisdom would be worth most, whether concentrated on the larder or the wardrobe. But we are most unselfish. Unasked, we plan the expenses in all departments of our friends' expenditures, and that they are embarrassed is not our fault; at any time the reservoir of our wisdom might have been drawn upon, but they would not turn the faucet. Could they have feared a deluge?

The amount of unused wisdom in this world, especially in the management of other people's affairs, forces us not only to doubt our friends' intelligence, but even, at times, their sanity. How well we know that if we had their opportunity we should most gladly avail ourselves of it! Alas! there is no wise friend to help us in the management of our financial affairs. We must take the entire responsibility because we have no outside superior judgment to aid us.—Outlook.

—Prof. John Tyndall's father was a shoemaker in an Irish village and lived in very humble style, occupying rooms in the rear of his small shop. But like many old-time cobblers he had more than a share of learning and was witty and sarcastic in argument. His son was sent to the local grammar school, and one of his old chums there was M. C. Hennessey, now a Rochester shoe manufacturer. He says that young Tyndall was an effeminate boy, who gave little promise of living to be seventy-three years of age.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

—An Unquestionable Fact.—"Where is the best place for quail in these parts?" asked the stranger who was on a hunting tour. And the man whom he had been regarding as a simple guileless rustic responded briefly: "Toast."—Washington Star.

APPARITIONS IN HISTORY.

BYRON often received visits from a specter, but he knew it to be a creation of imagination.

GOETHE states that he one day saw the exact counterpart of himself coming toward him.

POPE saw an arm apparently come through the wall and made inquiries after its owner.

DR. JOHNSON heard his mother call his name in a clear voice, though she was at that time in another city.

COUNT EMMANUEL SWEDENBERG believed that he had the privilege of interviewing persons in the spirit world.

LOYOLA, lying wounded during the siege of Pampeluna, saw the Virgin, who encouraged him to prosecute his mission.

DESCARTES was followed by an invisible person, whose voice he heard urging him to continue his researches after truth.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, leaving his house, thought the lamps were trees and the men and women bushes agitated by the breeze.

OLIVER CROMWELL, lying sleepless on his couch, saw the curtains open and a gigantic woman appear, who told him he would become the greatest man in England.

BOSTOCK, the physiologist, saw figures and faces, and there was one human face constantly before him for twenty-four hours, the features and headgear as distinct as those of a living person.

WAGES IN EUROPE.

CLERKS in wholesale and retail stores in Dusseldorf receive from $9 to $14 a month; women clerks from $7 to $10.

GERMAN editors receive an average of $6.71 salary per week; proof-readers, $5.23; compositors, $3.96; the devil gets $1.42.

AN Italian miner receives 8 shillings a week; a cotton mill hand, 10; a dyer, 12; a stonecutter, 13; a mason, 14; a tailor, 12.

PLOWMEN and reapers in Bohemia are paid 30 cents a day; females employed at the same labor receive 20 cents, neither board nor lodging being furnished.

THE wages of farm laborers in England in 1850 were 9 shillings a week; in 1880, 17; in Germany, at the same dates, the wages were respectively 8 and 13 shillings.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

DELANO DIARY

--Read the ad of the Alfred A. Ames Company, in another column.

--Fourty-hour devotional services were held at the Catholic church this week.

—Quite a number of prairie chickens have wintered in this neighborhood. They know where the pleasant places are in winter.

—We can furnish the St. Paul Weekly Globe and the GAZETTE to subscribers, old or new, who pay in advance for $1.30 per year.

—The Daughters of Rebekah of this place drove over to Annandale Monday evening to institute a lodge at that place. A very enjoyable time is reported.

--The approaches to the bridge are complained of by farmers and others as being too steep and when the weather is cold they are so icy as to be almost impassable.

—Hi Dyer announces that we must look out for March. That it is written down for a rough month. He says Hicks hit it very well for February in every place but Delano.

—Now is the time to subscribe for the GAZETTE or to pay old subscriptions and one year in advance and get the Weekly St. Paul Globe for an additional 30 cents. This offer is only till May.

—We are in receipt of Vicks Seed Catalogue for 1894. It is a nice one; also as fine a lot of seeds as we have ever seen; both vegetable and flower seeds. Read their ad and send 10 cents for the catalogue.

--Village officers are to be chosen Tuesday, March 13. Some of our citizens would like officers who would use the city funds exclusively for city improvements. That is what the money is for and it should be used for that purpose.

—The Eagle is anxious to have a sinking fund established by the village. If is as successful as our school district sinking fund has been for the past ten years in keeping out of sight it won't place the village in much better condition than at present.

—Arthur Powell had an early ride for nothing on Monday morning he drove to Rockford Station to meet his brother John who was coming from the west on the 6:30 a. m. train. After getting back home he got a letter that his brother would come on the 3:07 p. m. train.

—The I. O. O. F. Lodge of this place will celebrate the 13th anniversary of the organization of their lodge this evening. A reception will be tendered to the wives and best girls of the members at the close of the exercises. A social hop will be a pleasant part of the program.

--Rev. Powell is rejoicing that he has got enough wood sawed, split and piled in his shed to last him till conference time next fall. Eight teams from Montrose, eight men and six women accompanied the wood when it came. They had a good time and made the Parson happy.

—Mrs. M. J. Mulford requests us to inform her friends who are so anxious for her departure as to announce that she is going to move to Hutchinson, that she considers herself one of the fixtures of this place and although snow-bound for a week, at Elbow Lake, she is now doing business at the old stand and, and expects to be.

—Fay Parslow and Alva Catlin have completed a line of telegraph between their respective homes and now send messages to each other at all hours of the day or night. Willie Mowatt requested Alva, a few days since to tell Fay he had some postage stamps to trade, and was very much surprised in a few minutes to have Fay appear in his presence and ask him "Where are your stamps Willie?"

--We are in receipt of "The Columbus Genealogical Tree. Thanks to Alfred A. Ames, of Edicon Park, Ill.

—The Ladies Aid Society will give a five oclock tea this evening at Mrs. Jonas Johnson's, everybody is invited.

--Some of our citizens are anxious to read the village Financial report for the past year. It has not yet appeared in print.

—Uncle Jerry broke M. A. O'Hair's two colts to saddle on Tuesday. The colts are daisies and Uncle Jerry rides like an old cavalry man.

—Monday and Tuesday were very much like spring; we even noticed people beating carpet on the line and washing windows.

--The revival services at the M. E. church are proving successful. They are to be continued next week. Rev. J. W. Powell Jr. will be back then.

—A Democratic caucus will be held at the city hall, at 7:30 p. m. on Saturday March 10, for the purpose of nominating a village ticket and transacting other business.

—Teachers examinations will be held by Superintendent Lindsley or his assistent in Annandale and Buffalo, March 6 and 7; Delano and Monticello, March 9 and 10; Howard Lake March 13 and 14. Teachers should make it a point to be on hand.

—A. E. Powell has organized a company of Epworth Guards with about twenty members. They are drilling and already present quite a soldierly appearance. Part of the officers have been elected as follows: 1st Lieut., John J. Catlin; 2d Lient., Ed. Brown; Orderly Sargent, John Cameron; 2d Sargent, Ray Billings; 1st Corporal, Amil Wiese: 2d Corporal, Claus Johnson.

--At the annual meeting of the Washington's Birthday Association of Delano, officers were elected as follows:

PRESIDENT—John McGary.

VICE-PRESIDENTS—M. A. O'Hair, John Cunningham, Wm. Ziebarth, John Rader, Earl Hoisington, Martin Conzet, D. R. Thompson.

SECRETARY—Miss Rebecca White.

TREASURER—George P. Schaffer.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted, a copy to be spread upon the minutes and a copy sent to the bereaved family:

RESOLVED—That the Washington's Birthday Association of Delano, extend to Mrs. Hooker and family of Minneapolis their heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a loving husband and a kind father. And we assure them that we miss him who was our eloquent orator last year.

Personals.

Conductor Roy Mulford was in town on Monday night.

H. C. Budd, of Maple Plain, made Delano a business trip on Thursday.

Dr. and Mrs. Scheig of Minneapolis, are visiting at Young's hotel.

O. L. Billings and J. B. Plattner visited Long Lake last Monday on business.

Misses Beth Dyer and Margie Steffes expect to spend the summer at Cooney Island?

Rev. J. F. Chaffee is expected to hold Quarterly services at Montrose on March 11.

Dr. J. S. Shrader and wife and J. Brazie and wife drove over to Monticello on Tuesday.

Dick Wilkinson, of Minneapolis, has been visiting relatives near Deleno for the past few weeks.

Miss Mabel Quinn took charge of the primary department at the school house on Friday in the absence of the regular teacher.

Mrs. T. M. Shaw returned home Saturday night from a visit with Rev. Davies family at Brooklyn Center. She reports them as doing nicely.

Mrs. C. G. Halgren and Guy and Lottie, and Miss Peters, Miss St. John and Weiggand of Watertown, attenden church here Tuesday evening.

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor.
ARTHUR E. POWELL, Assis't.

The Senate met last Friday Feb. 23. The first discussion was concerning the time of meeting. It was finally decided that the senate should meet at 3 o'clock p. m, and adjourn promptly at 4 o'clock

The different articles of the tariff bill were then read and each article discussed separately. Most of those read were passed. Those remaining will be discussed at next meeting.

It is a noticable fact that several of our republican senators appear to be dissatisfied with some of the republican measures brought before the Senate last Friday. We are glad to see them becomming more thoughtful and hope they will be entirely reformed.

The members of the Pickwick Club met at Mr. Dewey's last Friday evening to await the arrival of the conveyance which was to take them to Miss Frances Bauman's to hold their meeting, but the vehicle failed to appear so the "club" spent the evening in coasting and report most enjoyable time.

If this weather keeps up, we shall have trouble to recognize the countenances of of our worthy marble players through the mud which they manage to pick up on the play ground.

We are sorry to learn that John Catlin, one of our brightest students of the freshman year, has left school for the remainder of the year. As he is a Senator, the Senate are left to suppose he has passed away and have drawn up a resolution concerning his death.

It has been suggested that we try another lawsuit. It would be a very good plan if we could have as interesting a time as we had at the last one.

Mr. Gutzwiller made us a call the other day.

Having visitors gives a great impetus to study and we are always glad to have them.

Towels should be ordered at once for the chemistry room as those unfortunate enough to have calico aprons must stand and have their aprons undergo a regular bath in acids etc., and are perfectly powerless when besieged by those of the denim aprons.

The past month shows better averages and deportment than any month this winter and it is to be hoped that it will continue to improve.

To those who read the school report we wish to give a pointer or two to guide them. Below class average means very little unless it be low. Any mark over 80 means that the pupil is doing good work.

Some of our scholars are doing extra work, one girl in the freshman class carrying five sthdies while only three are required. Though these may not be at top of the average column, yet they are doing double work and should not be rated with the others.

County Cullings.

Geo. Rice, teacher in district 100 and George Rahn of Marysville, are having trouble about school books. It seems the lately passed text book law has not been entirely settled yet.

Steam heat for the Court House is still being discussed in some quarters. If we are to have steam lets have it and turn off some of the gas. We always were opposed to heating houses with gas.

The Tribune is authority for our saying that nine yery reliable farmers of Middleville have each taken a $100 share in a fine horse, the other eleven shares of $2000, the price of the animal, being held in Minneapolis. Nothing like owning a share in a blooded horse in a large city these hard times.

Don't be fooled by having a few sore head politicians get together and make a ticket for you to vote at the coming town election; but hold your regular party caucus, you have as good men as there is in your town. When you fail to get them nominated, it is soon enough to hunt for another party.

Among Our Exchanges.

Diphtheria has broken out in Shakopee and a number of deaths have already been reported in consequence.--Valley Herald.

That "Pope Bob" was honored by being permitted to adress the editorial association, far more than were the editors who were privileged to listen to him.—St. Peter Herald.

John Y. McKane, the Gavesend boss has been sentenced to six years in the penitentiary of New York for fraud at the ballot box. Although claiming to be a democrat, he boasted in 1888 that he had elected Harrison president --Wabasha Democrat.

Now that there is to be an income tax what a hustling there will be among the country newspaper men to evade that law. It's a shame that the public is onto the fabulous profits of our business.—Litchfield News Ledger.

The bulldozing tactics indulged in by some great criminal lawyers in cross examining witnesses is a reproach on the dignity of our courts, and it is a wonder that it is permitted. No wonder that a respectable citizen dreads to go on the witness stand when he is liable to be brow-beaten and insulted with impunity by some two-by-four lawyer.—Sherburne County Star-News.

The Senate should loose no time in concuring with the House in passing the Wilson bill. The new tariff bill, however bad it may be, is eminently better than this everlasting dilly dally and prevailing uncertainty. When once law its merits and demerits will soon be known. At any rate it cannot be much worse than the so called protective ttriff bill of McKinley, which only protects the capitalsts.—Cokato Commoner.

Our last legislature was a bright one. One by one the laws which they placed upon our statute books are being declared unconstitutional. One of the last to be found defective is the insanity law. The decision that this is unconstitutional makes the commitment of all under the new law illegal. Great heads those legislators had.—Austin Transscript.

Our legislature as a rule, is fairly representative of the people that elect them. When gangs of greedy and designing politicians control party caucuses for individual profit, you may well expect legislation to be shaped by boodle, and not by the constitution.—Midway News.

The killing at the mines last Sunday was the direct result of illegal beer selling and carousing, and the county will now have a good bill of expense for the trial. It would seem to be cheaper to enforce the law. The illegal vending is outside of Tower and comes under the jurisdiction of the sheriff. Such cases are difficult to reach; but surely all liquor selling ought to afford a revenue, and can be made to do so It seems safe to say that more beer is sold in Soudan without license than in the saloons of Tow- which pay a yearly license of $500 apiece. If beer selling is to be on the free list for some, it ought to be for all.--Bede's Budget.

The Waverly Tribune keeps up a terrible wail about the county being obliged to pay the expenses for prosecuting "blind pig" cases at Cokato. If the citizens of Waverly and other license towns including Delano, and even the county seat, should do as well toward having the letter of the law observed as Cokato has we think they would have no trouble in getting their share of county funds. Why don't the Tribune have something to say about the Maple Lake murder trial expenses? Is she more willing to pay county funds for wrongs done by licensed saloons than for the suppression of "blind pigs" besides giving the life of an innocent young girl that all the county funds and saloons in existance can not restore.

The rapidity with which wealth accumulates is exemplified in the case of Wright county's court house. In 1876 it was decided to build a court house costing $25,000, and bonds were issued drawing 8 to 9½ per cent. The debt is now nearly all paid, and it is discovered that the county has paid out in simple interest alone $35,000, so that the actual cash paid for that $25,000 court house by the tax payers of the county is $60,000. If compound interest were figured perhaps $5,000 more could be added as the net cost of that court house. These figures are appalling, and one can readily see how paying interest year after year on debts keeps so many men always poor The moral is, beware of paying interest—get out of debt and stay out. Just how to do this is not so easily demonstrated, but the moral is there nevertheless.—Litchfield Independent.

Vick's Floral Guide, 1894.

It contains descriptions that describe, not mislead; illustrations that instruct, not exaggerate. This year it comes to us in a suit of gold printed in eight different colors besides black. Colored plates of Chrysanthemums, Poppies and Vegetables. On the the front cover is a very exquisite bunch of Vick's New White Branching Aster and on the back is the New Double Anemone; 112 pages filled with many new novelties of value as well as all the old leading varities of flowers and vegetables. We advise our friends who intend doing anything in the garden this year to consult Vick before starting operations. Send 10 cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Vick's Guide, it costs nothing, as you can deduct the 10 cents from the first order. It certainly will pay you. 20-tf

MARSE TOM'S ASLEEP.

Jes' back befo' de cannon's roah
Wuz heard thro'out de lan'
I means by dat, some time befo'
De niggah was free man;
I hain' gwine spick o' slav'ry, kase
It doan' bar' on de case,
But I wuz happy in dem days—
Dat doan' come out o' place.

Along about de early spring,
When plantin' time had come;
When birds begin to chirp an' sing,
An' honey bees tu hum,
Marse Tom would beckon with his han'
An say, "Now, Lud, you keep
De chillun quiet, understan'
I'm gwine tu go tu sleep"'

De couch wuz near de winer whar
De breezes cud tech his face,
An' when Marse Tom wuz sleepin', dar
Wuz quiet 'bout de place;
De little niggahs go 'way down
De holler fur to play,
An' ef dey cum too close aroun'
You heah some o' dem say,
"Marse Tom's asleep."'

When summer come, an' 'long in June,
When all de fields wuz green,
De dinner done, an' afternoon,
Dey all knew what dat mean;
Ole Miss she take her work upstairs,
Miss Jane wid her go,
Marse Tom would drap de farmin' cares,
An' pretty soon you'd know
Marse Tom's asleep.

I'se sottin' here dis summer day,
De same place I wuz bawn,
But forty years have slid away,
An' all de folks is gone,
Mars Paul was kilt at Shiloh, an'
An' all de folks is gone.
Marse Paul was kilt at Shiloh, an'
Miss Janie—I doan' know
Whar she is now—I understan'
She's married long ago;
Dat graveyard in de medder wide
Whar all de Ivies creep,
It holds ole Miss, an' by her side—
Marse Tom's asleep.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THERE'S GOIN' TO BE A THAW.

Last night, afore I went tu bed, my Laighorn rooster crowed,
An' you c'd hear the injines puff down on the valley road.
I seed a flock uv crows today, and heerd 'em haller "Caw"—
You needent talk "cold wave" tu me, there's goin' tu be a thaw.

Them meteerologic chaps what prophesy in schools,
An' claim tu work out weather bits by systematic rools,
All science an' no observate—they say aint wuth a straw;
But I've observed, an' I kin tell—There's goin' to be a thaw.

I don't pertend n'r claim tu be so very weather-wise,
But I kin tell sumthings by the complexion uv the skies.
I've figgered on the shaips uv clouds, and how they hang ye knaw,
An' I kin tell mos' allus when ther's goin' tu be a thaw.

This mornin' when the sun appeared, he got up ruther slow
An' thru the hoar-frest I c'd see he wore a gray hello,
An' then the sky showed mackerell—although the air was raw,
I called to Dobbins, an' sez I, "Ther's goin' to be a thaw."

Now I kin hear the big owls go "tu-who, tu-whit, tu-who!"
The echoes soundin' real like a prognostication, too.
I've prophesed for years, an' gained consid'rable eclaw,
An' you kin bet your salary ther's goin' tu be a thaw.

The signal service poster sez "A blizzard's cumin' down
From Manitoba on the jump, an' soon'll strike the town."
Good skatin' on the river Fluke c'lar down tu Kenosaw;
Thermometer still droppin', but ther's goin' tu be a thaw.

Fur I kin feel in my ole laigs thet bitin' roomatiz;
An' Polly Ann' her corn's jes' aiks like all ge mighty whiz.
John Walter is a howlin' with nooralgy in his jaw;
The house is crackin'—you kin bet ther's goin' to be a thaw.

—Humphrey Krash, in Toledo Blade.

ENGLAND'S grand old man, W. E. Gladstone, has resigned the Premiership of his country. Lord Rosebery has been appointed to the office. Mr. Gladstone will, doubtless, have something to say occasionally concerning public affairs, just the same.

THE editors of the Waverly Tribune and Prison Mirror are having a discussion over whether or not the Grand Jury should be abolished. Editor Tanner supports his theories from the Encyclopaedia Britannica. While Editor Schoonmaker has experience on his side.

D. M. SABIN, of Stillwater, has formally shied his caster into the Senatorial nomination ring, and threatens to make it rather warm for the present incumbent whose term is to expire soon. W. D. Washburn will have a hard fight to get nominated and then there is nothing sure about his being re-elected if he does succeed in getting his party endorsement.

SINCE the law against special legislation passed in our state it seems people have to get together in their respective cities and discuss public questions and agree on what kind of a general law will suit all of them. This looks like coming to the "Referendum" we hear about. Minneapolis is taking the lead in holding public meetings for the purpose of having her say about the new charter law to be passed.

THE proper thing for the democratic party to do is to stand by their principles, and put their best men in all positions of honor and trust, and present a solid phalany for honesty in office and reform, and then ask the voters of the land to support them. So long as they cater to factions, so long will their law making bodies consist of a heterogenious conglameration of ideas and dilly dalling and delaying legislation will be the outcome of the assembling together of men elected on fusion tickets.

SINCE the death of General Jubal Early his comrade in arms, General Longstreet, is said to have given out that General Early was no soldier and had no strategy in him. M. A. O'Hair of this place, differs with Gen. L. by saying that Early made it terribly warm for our boys down in Shenandoah Valley, and upon one occasion succeeded in bringing around a lot of his men in U. S. uniform and relieving guard on one side the union camp and then rushing his forces in, much to the surprise of an Iowa regiment to which M. A. belonged, and most of whom lost their blankets and other things they could not very well spare.

THE graduated income tax will doubtless have one good effect when it becomes a law. It will have a tendency to make the money makers of government take an interest in seeing that the government is run on an economical plan; so that taxes may be made less each year. If the money to pay for running the government must pass through their fingers they will naturally favor keeping down expenses to minimum figures.

EGGS are down to a dime a dozen, notwithstanding the 5cts per dozen tariff. Kind Providence and an early spring can knock McKinley out every time.

IOWA elections are reported as having been pretty evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans. Some cities being governed by one and some by another party.

SEVERAL of the leading republican papers among them the Midway News and the Mearhood News do not take kindly to the formation of a Republican Newspaper Association in the state.

THE Chicago Times figures out that the Wilson bill will be passed through both houses of Congress and receive the President's signature by April 20. If this prediction prove true then may we expect better times. We are told that the present hard times are due to the lack of confidence in the Democratic party to settle the tariff question. If we are to have this lack of confidence and this kind of times on the recurrence of each presidential campaign it would be better to do away with the uncertainty by fixing on tariff for revenue only and placing it on such articles as will bring in revenue and not enrich trusts and wealthy corporations at the expense of poor people.

UNDER the head "Fate of a Political Boss," the Wright County Times gives a half column article exulting over the downfall and imprisonment of John Z. McKane, in Sing Sing penitentiary. Mr. French says, "The election inspectors of both parties were under his thumb. He bought, cajolled and threatened. Early on election dav it was seen by some of his political opponents that the election inspectors their party had placed at the polls were not doing their duty," (what became of them)? "The boss' own party repudiated his methods." He was arrested, six inditements were found against him. "For half a dozen years nine tenths of all the votes of Gravesend, Republican and Democratic, were cast just as the boss wanted them to be. But that was not enough. The next step was repeating and manufacturing votes. Judge Bartlett, a man belonging to his own political party, was the individual who sentenced the fallen boss." Mr. French seems surprised that a Democratic Judge should sentence a democrat for wrong doing. "The moral effect of this judgment will extend all over these United States and give us a better name in Europe." Good.

JUST why a democrat should leave his party for the Populist party is what we don't quite see. Of course the more reformers that pull out of a party the less chance to reform that party, but it looks to us as if a good consciencious reformer could find a better field for his labors inside the ranks than he could in the so called Populist party, made up of all kinds of dissatisfied people; people who know that something is wrong, but some of whom attribute it to one thing and some to another, and who can not agree upon a definite plan of action. One leader wants so many planks that he can't find a crowd to cover the entire platform, and each man finds so many planks against his idea as to find himself favoring but a minority of all. Another leader wants to make the platform so small that he can not accomodate other leaders with standing room and a majority of the members are crowed off. Stay in the party you have lived in and aid in reforming it and you will be better satisfied.

MINNESOTANS have had a taste of free sugar and are very loth to give it up. Even Republicans have been sweetened into a partial belief in free trade. When they come to buy groceries and learn that instead of 14 or 15 pounds of sugar for one dollar they can, since the tariff was removed, get 20 pounds for a dollar, they are more than almost persuaded to think that if taking the tariff off of sugar, which, to a great extent is imported, makes it so much cheaper it would be a good thing for themselves to leave it off; and if it cheapens sugar so much to take off the tariff that it would cheapen other goods in a like measure to remove the iniquitous tariff tax. The sugar tariff has opened the eyes of many who have previously been made to think that we must have a tariff and the higher the better. Some have even been led to believe that a tariff on wheat would aid the western farmer and equalize matters so that he would be enabled to reap a great benefit; so the tariff on wheat which was under the 1883 tariff bill 20 cents per bushel, was raised by the McKinley bill to 25 cents per bushel, and now under this high tariff wheat has been going down instead of up, and most of our farmers would fail to bite at this bait again. And even the Duluth Chamber of Commerce is trying to have the tariff taken off of wheat so that they can bring Canadian wheat to Duluth mills for grinding as it would be easier for them to get it and grind it and make a little something on it than to have the wheat shipped to foreign countries to be ground and sold in competition with Minnesota wheat and flour. It looks as if another sop thrown out to farmers was the tariff on wool, which the McKinley bill has at 11 and 12 cents per pound for 1st and 2d class; and for 3d class 50 per cent; and which is also a rise over the old tariff and which they had learned to believe would send the price of wool up and help make them rich. While as a fact it has not done so; but at this high rate wool has been selling here at home for from 10 cents a pound down to 8 cents a pound which is less than the tariff charged if it were shipped in. It looks as if a tariff on such things as farmers raise and have to sell lowers rather than raises prices, when they have any to sell; and when they have to ship some in they are the ones to pay the tariff as on potatoes which was a short crop this season the tariff is 25 cents per bushel, if a farmer is obliged to bring some from Canada he must pay the tariff. As soon as he raises a crop and has some to sell it don't help him at all. McKinley, who is around working his presidential boom at present also raised the tariff on hay from $2 per ton to $4 per ton and the poor farmer is now hauling what he has left over to market and selling it for the same price the tariff official collects when it comes over the line, and spending his hard earned dimes to go to the city and held yell for McKinley and his bill. Not all the farmers are doing this. A good many have read up, and are posted on tariff, and know that the present tariff under which the people are so much cast down, and under which they can not get what they think they ought for what they sell, and under which they are paying pretty close to old prices for what they buy, except for sugar, the great eye opener in this instance, of the McKinley bill. And with this again brought into power they will be even worse off than now. The only trouble with the Democrats they are obliged to move too slow and too cautiously in order to get any reduction at the hands of a Senate composed largely of millionaires, many of whom are more or less interested in the manufacturing of goods from which they can receive large profits by having tariff legislation favorable to them, and which takes the money to make them rich from the wages of every man who has to use such articles as his establishment may make whether it be to wear, eat, or use in any way. Western people generally have had all the tariff tinkering they want and are ready to have some plan for running the government on a basis that will not take the money out of their pockets and put it into the pockets of others at so rapid a rate; and something that will not bring about hard times.

Appropriations out of the Questions.

For the purpose of showing the feeling of our representatives at the capitol of our country, on the question of making appropriations for various objects, even where it is admitted by them that it would be a good thing, we clip from the Brainerd Journal the following: "We have recieved the following letters from Senator Washburn and Congressman Baldwin in relation to the proposed reservoir dam at the outlet of Gull lake, from which we infer that the outlook for an appropriation by the present congress is not as bright as we had hoped for.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19, 1894.—H. C. Stivers, Esq., Brainerd, Minn.

MY DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of recent date. I understand fully the situation in regard to the proposed government reservoir at the outlet of Gull lake. I have already given the matter a good deal of attention, and consulted frequently with Major Jones on the subject. I regard it as of great importance that this dam should be built in order to supplement effectually the present system of reservoirs I have watched this reservoir system from the earliest inception, and you can rest assured that I shall not flag in my efforts at the present time; but I will say however, that this is an unfavorable time to secure an appropriation. The depleted condition of the treasury and general demoralization in public affairs are not conditions favorable to the securing of appropriations in the present congress.

Yours very truly,
W. D. WASHBURN.

Congressman Baldwin writes:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTITIVES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19, 1894.—H. C. Stivers, Brainerd, Minn.

Dear Sir: Yours regarding construction of a dam at outlet of Gull lake received. I will take this matter up with Senator Washburn and do all that can be done to secure necessary appropriation. I fear we shall not succeed in this congress, as retrenchment is the rule in every branch of the service. However, I will do every thing I can.

Faithfully,
M. R. BALDWIN.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2, 1894.

It is not generally known, but it is the less true, that the remarkable series of caucuses held by the direct result of suggestions from President Cleveland before he went away. Several democratic Senators told Mr. Cleveland that they were dissatisfied with the bill as the sub-committee intended to report it to the finance committee, and to each of them he suggested the idea of holding a caucus in order that the bill might be changed sufficiently to receive the solid vote of the democrats. Senator Voorhees, althouh satisfied with the bill as arranged by the sub-committee, was perfectly willing that a caucus should pass upon it before it was reported to the full committee. That is why the bill was turned over to the caucus, instead of being reported to the full committee.

While there are some regretable circumstances connected with the holding of so many caucuses, it is far preferable, either from a party caucus than that they be forcibly obtained with the aid of republican votes on the floor of the Senate. Whether the bill as finally reported by the Finance committee, to which the caucus returned it, will be a better or a worse measure than was the Wilson bill as passed by the House, may be a debatable question, but that the votes of at least 42 out of the 44 democratic Senators will be necessary to pass any tariff bill is a fact, that admits of no debate, since two of the populists Senators have said that they would not vote for it unless the sugar schedule is pleasing to them. At this writing every indication points to an agreement that will result in a bill that can be passed by democratic votes without any aid from the populist Senators, and President Cleveland being absent from Washington cannot be charged with influencing the Senators, or even trying to do so.

Some republicans in the House—notably Bingham, of Pennsylvania—are wrothy because Postmaster General Bissel gave the contract for printing postage stamps to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, notwithstanding the efforts of a well paid lobby to prevent his saving money for the government by doing so, and some of them are talking about having a Congressional investigation. It is little short of nonsensical for Congress to investigate the right of the government to do its own work, but if such an investigation would expose the names and methods of the lobby which was employed in this particular case it should by all means be held. I know that neither Postmaster General Bissel, who gave the contract, nor Secretary Carlisle, who authorized the Bureau of Engraving to accept the work, would raise any objection. On the contrary, they both could, and doubtless would, aid a Congressional committee in showing up the stamp lobby, which was headed by an ex-member of the cabinet.

Representative Somers, of Wisconsin, who is a personal friend of Judge Jenkins, whose injunction against the right of employes of the U. P. R. R. to strike while the road was in the hands of court receivers, the House Judiciary committee has decided should be investigated, has been hunting up precedents, and he finds that injunctions of a similiar nature have been issued by Judge Ricks, in Ohio; Judge William H. Taft, in Pennsylvania; Judge Pardee, in Texas; Judge James H. Beatty, in Idaho: Judge Elmer S. Dunday, in Nebraska, and Justice Brewer, of the U. S. Supreme Court, while presiding over a court in Missouri. Mr. Somers says he has no objection to an investigation, but that he does object to singling out Judge Jenkins to be investigated when there are so many Judges who issued the same sort of injunctions before he did. "Include them all, and I am ready to vote for the investigation," said Mr. Somers at the conclusion of a conversation on the subject.

A popular bill is that introduced in the House by Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, providing an amendment to the present law, making the votes of three-fourths of a jury constitute a verdict in all civil cases. With that amendment in force hung Juries would be almost unheard of in civil cases and the cost of litigation would be largely reduced. The lawyers are about the only people who are likely to oppose the change; it would cut into their fees quite heavily.

Common sense again asumed its sway in the House this week and the democrats disposed of the Bland bill and ceased to furnish the republicans with campaign material, by again getting down to business after a tie-up of more than two weeks. Speaker Crisp made a decided hit just before a quorum voted, when asked to enforce the rule compelling members to remain in their seats and to vote when their names were called, by saying in reply: "The chair is the organ of the House, not its master, and as long as the present occupant is in the chair he will never make a rule,"

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Every thing goes to show that spring is here, crows, robins, blue birds and many waters are all indications of Spring; and old earth will soon look reanimated again.

Our roads are not in very good condition at present it is neither sleighing nor wheeling.

Yesterday the Town Board met in regular session and settled accounts of the past year; found every thing all right and a balance yet in the Treasury.

The receipts for the town of Independence for the past year was $1424.65; Disbursements about $1,150 leaving something like $275 yet in the Treasury.

Last night we had a sugar snow and it looks as if sugaring would soon be here. It's annual return is always a sweet rememberance of the past, so let it come.

This is caucus night at Town Hall Armstrong, a full t cket will be nominated for town officers.

Revival meetings are still going on at the Presbyterian church Maple Plain.

Stvner and Hosington are running their saw mill on time with a full crew and are making some good native lumber.

Mose Williams of Delano was in our Town on Monday.

Oliver Strotron has gone to Wisconsin to be absent for four or five weeks.

Mrs. G. W. Smith will soon give up the merchantile business and post office and move onto her farm, south of town; more sweat than money in farming now; but then farmers are about the only class of people that have a clear conscience and an empty pocket.

It seems Judge Fish and the Supreme Court have got the Hennepin County Court House bonds all right and Hennepin county will soon have a new courthouse. When finished it will be a living monument to the tax payers of Hennepin county for the next generation.

E. Hosington still thinks of going to Mexico to start a coffee plantation and build up a reformation among the natives.

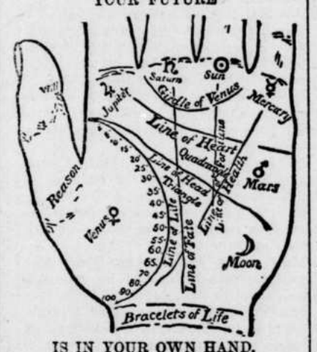
Farmers are beginning to talk about seeding, plowing, planting, and raising cain.

Government bonds, Court House bonds, and bondage are before us, around about us, and nothing but the iron heel of taxation can deliver us. That old familiar hymn comes to my mind just now that I learned many years ago

"Our bondage here will end, by and by.
From the Bonholder's yoke set free,
We'l hail that glorious jubilee
When to free coinage we return, by and by.

I see by the Christian Herald of New York that Moody and Sankey are having a great revival in Washington D. C. Hope all the Congressmen may be converted, and then perhaps they will do something with the tariff and the money question; think some of them have pleanty of room to reform.

YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistre assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked. Keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $5.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

LORD HOUGHTON, who occupies the very lucrative berth of lord lieutenant of Ireland, continues to be in luck. His position as lord lieutenant gives him a salary of $100,000 a year, and now, by the death of Lord Crew, he inherits all the estate of the latter, which is said to yield a rental of nearly $300,000 a year, and Crewe hall, the principal country seat of the late lord, is one of the stateliest mansions in England.

IT is certainly a great feather in the cap of American railway managers to be able to say that notwithstanding the greatly increased travel during the Columbian year 1893 the number of deaths from accidents was ninety-nine less than in 1891, and 115 less than in 1890. Considering the number of extra trains and the great speed of through trains the record is remarkable, and wholly creditable to the management of the railroads.

MISS ELIZABETH BULLOCK, who died in Salem, Mass., the other day at the age of 77, had not left her house for more than forty years. Miss Bullock was engaged to be married to a young man of Salem. Miss Bullock declared that she would never leave her home again alive, and kept her word.

THE question of what we shall do with our horses is becoming one of the most absorbing of the hour. The introduction of cable and electric power on street railways has thrown tens of thousands of working horses out of employment, and their value has consequently largely decreased. Good carriage horses, of course, command the usual prices, but draught horses can now be had for a song. We hear of no protest from the equine tribe, however, about their lack of employment.

In the course of the quarrel the prince drew a dagger from his pocket and stabbed the officer so severely that he died a few hours later. A trial was held, and Prince Rikodze was condemned to death. An appeal was made to the czar to pardon the aristocratic murderer, but he declined to interfere.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT looks after even the smallest details of the big New York Central railroad. The other morning he came into the depot in New York and gave half a dozen people a talking to because the clock in the station had stopped at 3:40. Mr. Vanderbilt knows all the men about the depot personally, knows the capacity of each for work and has a pleasant good morning for all he meets on his way to his office.

PROF. NEWTON, of Yale college, says of the meteor of January 26 that it came in sight of western Vermont at the height of about seventy miles. It traversed a southwesterly direction and disappeared from view in the vicinity of Scranton, Pa. Its total visible course was two hundred miles on a line from Whitehall to Scranton. It exploded twice in its career, once over the Hudson river and again near Scranton, when it burst into fragments which either fell to the earth or were consumed by the resistance of the atmosphere. The meteor was from two to five feet in diameter.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 28.—In the senate a two hours' session was held, the whole of which was given to a speech by Senator Frye in opposition to the president's Hawaiian policy. In the house the deadlock on the seigniorage bill was broken after two weeks of filibustering, but upon a question for a special order to discharge the committee of the whole from further consideration of the bill the quorum disappeared and no action could be taken.

THURSDAY, March 1.—A resolution was introduced in the senate providing for the establishment of a tariff commission of nine to regulate the tariff on the basis of the difference of wages here and abroad. A bill was introduced for the erection of a statue at the treasury department to Gen. F. E. Spinner. The house bill providing for urgent deficiencies was passed. In the house the long struggle over the Bland bill for the coinage of the silver seigniorage and the silver bullion in the treasury was ended by the passage of the bill by a vote of 167 to 130.

FRIDAY March 2. — There was no session in the senate. In the house the fortifications bill ($3,000,000) was passed. The pension bill was taken up and general debate consumed the remainder of the day. The aggregate of this bill is nearly $152,000,000. Ex-Speaker Grow, the newly elected congressman at large from Pennsylvania was sworn in. At the evening session private pension bills were considered.

SATURDAY, March 3. — The senate was not in session. In the house the time was occupied in discussing the pension bill, and a bill was passed granting an increase of pension to Andrew Franklin, aged 101 years, who resides in Kansas and is a veteran of the war of 1812 and of the war of the rebellion.

MONDAY, March 5.—The senate held a short session and but very little business of importance was transacted. A brief debate on silver took place and Senator Stewart (Nev.) offered a free silver amendment to the Bland bill. Senator Morgan (Ala.) offered a resolution looking to the appointment of a tariff commission, offered as an amendment to the tariff bill. The debate on the pension appropriation bill continued all day in the house and at times considerable spirit was displayed. The principal speakers were Messrs. Dolliver, Hepburn, Enloe and Cannon. A total of $1,513,738 is carried by the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill which was introduced.

FROM WASHINGTON.

THE statement of the public debt issued on the 1st showed that the debt increased $40,064,215 during the month of February. The cash balance in the treasury was $787,075,834. The total debt, less the cash balance in the treasury, amounts to $1,007,356,015.

EXCHANGES at the leading clearing houses in the United States during the week ended on the 2d aggregated $838,528,166, against $691,491,780 the previous week. The decrease, compared with the corresponding week in 1893, was 39.0.

The appearance of the conductor frightened the bandits and they left empty handed.

THERE were wild scenes on the New York stock exchange the 6th, the stock of the American Sugar company being the exciting cause. A rise of 12 points was recorded.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The School Fund.

It is estimated that by the end of the present year the Minnesota school fund will amount to nearly $11,000,000, and will within the next few years increase more rapidly than that of any other state in the union, owing to the mineral leases. At the present time the permanent school fund holds securities amounting to $3,611,495, bearing from 3 to 5 per cent, in addition to which there are land contracts amounting to $6,500,000. Within a short time there has been paid into the fund $31,323.90 as a royalty on iron ore mined on state lands, and on the present basis of increase, in 10 years' time the fund will amount to $25,000,000.

Two mining companies have paid the largest sums into the fund. The Biwabik Iron company has taken out 13,863 tons, which, at a royalty of 25 cents a ton, would foot up to $3,465.75. The Mesabi Iron company has mined 125,000 tons, paying a royalty of $31,323.90.

During the past five years there has been paid into the treasury of the state and credited to the general fund $45,969.67. Of this sum, $24,537.26 was received from the Minnesota Iron company, $21,237.90 from the Chandler Iron company, $149.91 from the Zenith Iron company and $243.80 from the Canton Iron company.

Contesting the Will

The attorneys for Wee-Hun-Kaw, the Winnebago squaw who claims to be the only legal relict of the late Henry M. Rice, have filed objections to the probate of the late senator's will in the probate court of Ramsey county. Senator Rice, in his will, left his entire estate, valued at something like $1,000,000, to Matilda M. Rice, whom he married after leaving Wee-Hun-Kaw. His alleged marriage with the present claimant is said to have taken place on the Turkey Creek reservation in Iowa, in 1842, and the children resulting from their tribal marriage are still living and named as heirs to the senator's estate. The claimants object to the probate of the will on the ground that Wee-Hun-Kaw is the only widow of Senator Rice, who is alleged to have deserted his squaw wife before she went to the Iowa reservation to live. The white heirs will endeavor to prove that their half-breed relatives were not legitimate children of their father.

Oleomargarine.

Judge Smith, of the Hennepin district court, has decided that the seizure of oleomargarine made by the dairy commissioner last fall was unlawful. The bogus butter was the property of the Minneapolis Provision company, and the judge gave the company judgment for $718. He held, however, that although oleomargarine was conceded to be nutritious and not deleterious to the public health, the state had a right to make laws regulating the sale of food for the protection of the public and to provide against deception. Oleomargarine being of the same color as butter, though concededly wholesome, might deceive the public and the state could pass laws to protect it.

In this special case the oleo was in the original package, marked according to the law of congress, and was not misrepresented, hence the seizure was illegal.

A Map Fifty Years Old.

The State Historical society has received from Miss E. L. Gear, of Minneapolis, a parchment map of the Mississippi river and its banks at Ft. Ripley, made in 1844 by Lieut. Derby C. Williamson. Lieut. Williamson was known to fame as the humorous writer, John Phoenix. Miss Gear also presented photographs of her father and mother, who were among the pioneer church workers of the state. Mr. Gear was the first chaplain at Ft. Snelling, having begun work there in 1838 and remaining until 1857. He did much for the Episcopal denomination in Minnesota. He died in Minneapolis in 1873, at the age of 80. Ex-Gov. Gear, of Iowa, was his son.

A Fighting Parson.

At the little town of Welcome Lewis Hanson persisted in creating a disturbance at a revival meeting condncted by Rev. C. Eisenberg. The minister dismissed the meeting and, following Hanson out of doors, proceeded to give Hanson the worst threshing a man ever got. The tough was so badly used up that he was found in bed by the officer who went to arrest him for disturbing the meeting. The deacons passed a resolution commending their minister and raised his salary $250.

News in Brief.

The Sawyer house at Stillwater was damaged by fire to the extent of about $3,000.

David Feelson, of St. Cloud, dropped dead on the streets.

The earnings of the Northern Pacific railroad during the year 1893 in the state were $5,196,713.09. The state will receive as a tax on this amount $139,599.31.

Clarence Brown, aged 18, attempted to jump off a moving freight train at Anoka. His foot slipped and he went under the wheels. Both legs were cut off and his head was crushed. He lived 15 minutes.

Fourteen citizens of Stillwater took out mineral leases for a year in St. Louis county, township 71, ranges from 21 to25. The lands are all state school lands and supposed to contain gold in considerable quantities.

Charles Meyer was arraigned in the police court of St. Paul, charged with the murder of Martin Erickson the night of Feb. 1.

John Eastman's dwelling on his farm near Buffalo was burned. His and another family occupied the house. Nothing was saved but a sewing machine. Loss about $1,500; partially insured.

The criminal libel case of A. C. Rhinehart vs. P. S. Ware, editor of the Thief River Falls Press, resulted in a verdict for Mr. Ware.

The body of a half breed named Sherman was found near Pine City. It is supposed he lost his way in the night and froze to death.

Timothy Riordan, assemblyman of St. Paul, has preferred charges with the governor against County Auditor Burns. It is alleged the auditor erased names of his friends from the delinquent tax list.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul depot at Farmington, together with baggage and other contents, were destroyed by fire. The loss on the depot is about $3,000, and on the contents something less.

The Stearns County Bar association, at a meeting in St. Cloud, unanimously endorsed Judge Searle for re-election as district judge.

ROSEBERY RULES.

Gladstone's Successor Assumes the Reins of Government.

LONDON, March 7.—Rosebery is premier of England de facto. He assumed the duties Monday of the great office vacated by Gladstone, holding a conference with his ministers and paying a visit to the queen. The latter prorogued parliament and gave her assent to the local government bill. This is the situation in brief at the end of this important day, politically, to Britain.

Mr. John Morley has consented to retain his portfolio as chief secretary for Ireland at the urgent request of Lord Rosebery and others of his colleagues.

The Standard makes the following official announcement:

"The earl of Kimberley will assume the foreign portfolio; Rt. Hon. Henry Fowler the Indian portfolio; and Mr. T. E. Ellis, now a lord of the treasury, will become patronage secretary to the treasury, succeeding Mr. Majoribanks, the liberal 'whip.' The appointment of Mr. Fowler, who is now president of the local government board, is a surprise, but is regarded as a good one, as he is well informed upon the financial questions and difficulties of India."

Parliament was prorogued shortly after noon. Queen Victoria, Princess Beatrice and ex-Empress Frederick of Germany arrived in London about noon from Windsor and proceeded to Buckingham palace. The house of lords met at 1:30 p. me. There were many ladies present in the galleries. The royal assent was given to the local government bill. The queen's speech was then read and the house adjourned. The queen's speech was purely formal, only fifteen lines in length. The queen thanked the commons for the supplies granted and concluded with the remark that she anticipated lasting advantages from the laws enacted.

The St. James Gazette gives prominence to the report that a reunion is probable between Lord Rosebery and the liberal unionist leaders.

Interest now seems to center in the attitude of the Parnellite party, as the position of the McCarthyites is said to be settled, they to rely upon the government to give proper attention to Irish legislation in due course of time.

DEADWOOD'S BIG FIRE.

One Life Probably Lost in a Blaze That Caused a Loss of $150,000.

DEADWOOD, S. D., March 7.—Never since the memorable fire of 1879 has this city been visited with such a blaze as occurred Monday morning. The efforts of the firemen were thwarted by a lack of water in the mains, and the flames, fed by pitch-pine buildings on the north side of Main street, got such a headway that they swept everything before them. It is supposed that one life was lost in a lodging house. This is the only casualty known except that of a fireman named Warner, who fell from a ladder and was badly hurt. Thirty-two buildings in all were destroyed. The lessees were the largest losers, excepting Gib Stone & Co., who owned their buildings and let their insurance run out a short time ago. Many of the buildings destroyed belonged to the Swift Bros., of Wilmington, Del. These will be rebuilt with brick, as the locations are good and will readily command good rents. The loss to the insurance companies foots up $33,500. The total loss of the fire will be fully $150,000.

HAVOC AT RIO.

Yellow Fever's Ravages Among Political Prisoners.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, via Galveston, Tex., March 7.—The jails here are full of political prisoners, and yellow fever is working frightful havoc among them. Admiral da Gama's fleet is in a critical condition, being unable to obtain provisions on account of the plague.

Geo. M. Rollins, who volunteered to act as an intermediary between Admiral da Gama and the American merchantmen in the incident which culminated in the United States cruiser Detroit firing upon the insurgent war ships Trojono and Guanabara, died Monday of yellow fever. Capt. W. A. Sturgis, of the American warship Santuit, which towed the pirating (Destroyer) from New York to Pernambuco to join President Peixoto's new fleet, also died Monday of the same disease.

SIX HURLED TO DEATH.

Railroad Workers in Germany Tossed High in Air by a Train.

BERLIN, March 7.—While a gang of railway laborers were repairing the track at Charlottenburg they were interrupted by the appearance of a train. They stepped from the track upon which the train was coming and stood upon the track upon which the trains were run in an opposite direction. As the train rushed by the men were enveloped in steam, and did not see a train which was coming on the track they stood on. Before they could realize their danger they were struck and hurled into the air. Six of them were instantly killed and not one of the others escaped injury.

STARVED TO DEATH IN PARIS.

Miss Ida Van Etten, the American Writer, Comes to a Pitiful End.

PARIS, March 7.—Miss Ida Van Etten, the American writer, who had been living for several months at the Continental hotel in this city, died at 3 o'clock Monday morning. She sent for a doctor, but when he arrived fifteen minutes later he found her a corpse amid the most pitiful surroundings. It is said that the unfortunate woman died of starvation.

Buried in One Grave.

CAPE TOWN, March 7.—A trader named Dawson, who has arrived at Buluwayo from the Shangani river, says that at the point where the last stand was made by the Wilson party, which was annihilated by the Matabeles, he found within a circle of 15 yards the bones of thirty-three men. Dawson gathered the remains together and buried them in one grave.

Caught in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 7.—H. C. Wiltshaw, who robbed a New York bank two years ago of $36,000 and disappeared, was captured in this city.

Given $10,000 for a Leg.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., March 7. Frederick Nelson was given a judgment of $10,000 against the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway by a jury in a personal damage suit. The plaintiff's leg was cut off at the hip while crossing the track at Iron River. He claimed no signal was given or whistle blown.

Negroes Leave for Africa.

LINCOLN AT GETTYSBURG.

How the Martyr President Wrote His Famous Address.

There is no decisive record of when Mr. Lincoln wrote the first sentences of his proposed address. He probably followed his usual habit in such matters, using great deliberation in arranging his thoughts, and moulding his phrases mentally, waiting to reduce them to writing until they had taken satisfactory form.

There was much greater necessity for such precaution in this case, because the invitation specified that the address of dedication should only be "a few appropriate remarks." Brevity in speech and writing was one of Lincoln's marked characteristics; but in this instance there existed two other motives calculated to strongly support his natural inclination. One was that Mr. Everett would be quite certain to make a long address; the other, the want of opportunity even to think leisurely about what he might desire to say. All this strongly confirms the correctness of the statement made by the Hon. James Speed, in an interview printed in the "Louisville Commercial" in November, 1879, that the president told him that "the day before he left Washington he found time to write about half of his speech." * * *

It was after the breakfast hour on the morning of the 19th that the writer, Mr. Lincoln's private secretary, went to the upper room in the house of Mr. Wills [at Gettysburg] which Mr. Lincoln occupied, to report for duty, and remained with the president while he finished writing the Gettysburg address, during the short leisure he could utilize for this purpose before being called to take his place in the procession, which was announced on the programme to move promptly at 10 o'clock.

There is neither record, evidence, nor well-founded tradition that Mr. Lincoln did any writing, or made any notes, on the journey between Washington and Gettysburg. The train consisted of four passenger coaches, and either composition or writing would have been extremely troublesome amid all the movement, the noise, the conversation, the greetings, and the questionings which ordinary courtesy required him to undergo in these surroundings; but still worse would have been the rockings and joltings of the train, rendering writing virtually impossible. Mr. Lincoln carried in his pocket the autograph manuscript of so much of his address as he had written at Washington the day before. It fills one page of the letter paper at that time habitually used in the executive mansion, containing the plainly printed blank heading; both paper and print giving convincing testimony to the simple and economical business methods then prevailing in the White House.

This portion of the manuscript begins with the line, "Four score and seven years ago," and ends "It is rather for us the living," etc. The whole of this first page—nineteen lines—is written in ink in the president's strong, clear hand, without blot or erasure; and the last line is in the following form: "It is rather for us the living to stand here," the last three words being, like the rest, in ink. From the fact that this sentence is incomplete, we may infer that at the time of writing it in Washington the remainder of the sentence was also written in ink on another piece of paper. But when, at Gettysburg, on the morning of the ceremonies, Mr. Lincoln finished his manuscript, he used a lead pencil, with which he crossed out the last three words of the first page, and wrote above them in pencil "we here be dedica," at which point he took up a new half sheet of paper—not white letter paper as before, but a bluish-gray foolscap of large size with wide lines, habitually used by him for long or formal documents, and on this he wrote, all in pencil, the remainder of the word, and of the first draft of the address, comprising a total of nine lines and a half. The time occupied in this final writing was probably about an hour.—John G. Nicolay, in Century.

Told by the Teller.

"In our bank, you know," said the paying tellor, "we never allow any cigarette smoking, and part of my business is to see that nobody comes into the bank with one of the vile things burning. Well, the other morning a young fellow came in with a note he wanted certified. He was a nice, country-looking sort of a boy, and must have been new at his business, as he wandered all around the bank before he struck my window. But as soon as he came up to me I caught the smell of a cigarette. 'Somebody is smoking a cigarette,' I thought to myself, 'and it must be that boy, though I don't see one in his mouth.' So I looked at him and said: 'Have you a cigarette?'

"What, sir?" said the boy, as cool and fresh as a May morning.

"'Have you a cigarette?'

"And before I could say another word that kid made a grab in his pocket, hauled out a box and stuck them in at my window with the remark 'Why, yes, cert'nly—help yourself?'

"Fresh? Well, I guess so!"—N. Y Tribune.

Care of Handkerchiefs.

To prevent the spread of influenza where there is a catarrhal discharge, all handkerchiefs used by the patient should be placed where they will not be likely to be handled by other members of the family, or to come in contact with other clothing. When they are washed they may be thoroughly disinfected, freed from stains, and whitened if first soaked in cold water to which a half-cupful of the best kerosene oil has been added. Add enough boiling water to the cold to heat it, and with soap wash them out of this water, and through another warm water containing soap and a little oil. Rinse thoroughly and dry in the open air, leaving them out of doors an entire day, when they should be entirely free from the smell of oil.—N. Y. Post.

Slightly Twisted.

"Won't you hand me the nutcracker, please, my dear?" blandly remarked Mr. Fewsmith to his wife at the dinner table. "With pleasure," was the answer, "but I am sorry to see you so addicted to the nut-eating habit. I have heard that Darwin or some other great man has said that nuts were never intended for human consumption because they are so well protected in their natural covering; that they are intended by nature only for germination."

"What I should like to know," responded Fewsmith with his best company manner, "is how they can be more appropriate for the German nation than for free and independent Americans."—N. Y. Tribune.

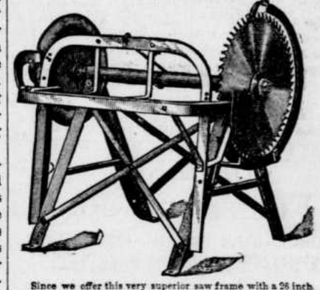
CLIP. SAVE AND SEND TO US

Because of the high speed at which Circular Saws are run more power is wasted in friction than is used in sawing, where the bearings of the shaky, wooden saw frame get out of line. In the Aermotor Saw Frame, the only Steel Saw Frame ever made, this difficulty is absolutely and wholly prevented because THE BEARINGS FOR THE SHAFT ARE MADE BY EMBITTING IT IN THE ENDS OF A PIECE OF STEEL TUBING. The steel tubing and babbit are then slitted so as to take up wear with a bolt. The frame is all steel, very rigid, and riveted together so that nothing can get loose or out of place. The guard so encircles the saw as to make it impossible for any one to get hurt, a point of the greatest importance in a saw to be used by unskilled hands.

The swing frame which carries the wood to be sawed and which automatically returns to its place has also a guard to keep a pole off from the fly wheel and yet does not cause it to present very much of an axle to the saw. The use of a 100 lb. 26 inch fly wheel and 26 inch saw makes this easily possible. It is therefore, a very desirable Pole Saw, making it easy to cut up any long material quickly and safely. Another feature of



Since we offer this very superior saw frame with a 26 inch superior saw at a much less price than any cheap imperfect wooden frame can be bought for, we are sure that the friends of the Aermotor will appreciate the fact that we have again been doing the public a great service and have distinguished ourselves in redesigning an old article and putting it into an infinitely improved shape.

For a saw of similar size and quality, and ordinary wooden frame, you would be charged $6o. We make this all-steel frame and this superior saw at $40, AND GIVE YOU A CHANCE TO GET IT AT $15, for the benefit of our Geared Aermotor.

We have sold an enormous number of Power Aermotor outfits with which saws are used, and a poor saw that runs hard detracts from their usefulness and their reputation. If we furnish a very superior saw at a very low price, many geared outfits will be bought to drive them. Wherever one Geared Aermotor goes, others are sure to follow.

When we take a well known article, redesign it, and put it in a shape very superior to anything that has appeared before, it widens and enlarges our reputation for doing well everything to which we put our hands, and this is the thing that has in the past brought so much business to our factory, and which in the future, we have no doubt, will bring, practically, all the business in our line. It is this reputation that we are daily working for.

We believe that this Aermotor Steel Saw Frame and Saw will confirm and enhance the fame which we have gained in the manufacture of Steel Windmills and Steel Towers, hence, for the purpose of scattering them so that everybody may know that a good thing can be had for a small price, WE OFFER THIS STEEL SAW AND FRAME FOR $15 CASH AND FIVE COPIES OF ADVERTISEMENT No. 2 of this series as per conditions stated in No. 2. In our next advertisement, No. 4, we shall talk of galvanizing, and make an offer that will be of universal interest. This is adv. No. 3. AERMOTOR CO.

THE DAY'S FASHIONS.

THE market is full of eccentricities and vagaries in the way of gloves, but, all the same, conservative trade demands strictly plain styles, with almost invisible stitching.

EVENING bonnets of flowers and lace are the tiniest creations imaginable. One pretty model is of rosettes of lace with flowers. The ribbon strings cross in front and are tied in long loops and ends at the back of the neck.

FOR wear with spring dresses, there are velvet collars, edged with galloon or lace. Collars are for the most part made with double ruffles and are very elaborate affairs. A standing collar, slightly flaring, is the usual neck finish.

A PRETTY conceit, in high favor among young women, is dresses and hats to match. A pink-and-white batiste, trimmed with lace and ribbons, has a Leghorn hat with pink velvet and apple blossoms. The brim is faced with shirred crepon, and pinched up in scallops all around.

A HANDSOME costume for spring is made of navy blue and coffee brown camel's hair. The skirt is of blue, with panel of the brown elaborately trimmed with narrow blue braid. The fitted waist of brown has blue sleeves and brown shoulder ruffles. Rows of narrow braid are set at the hem of the skirt.

THERE is no need to worry over an aching tooth. Just drop into some dentist's and it will come out all right.—Troy Press.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

BENEATH THE CHIMNEYS TALL.

Where mice hold wanton revelry all night till rosy day;
Where trees and clouds are ever near; where people seldom call,
There dwells a very funny world, beneath the chimneys tall.

There tigers, bears and elephants abide for aye in peace;
The lion flings his tawny length beside the lamb's white fleece;
And woolly dogs there are that never bark or bite at all,
And blue-eyed China pussy cats, beneath the chimneys tall.

Who's won the brush in many a chase, no more the field may know;
Two legs are off, his tail is gone, his nose chipped by a fall—
He's pastured in the meadow lots, beneath the chimneys tall.

And horrid war has left its mark in this secluded place;
A score of soldiers headless lie—a captain in gold lace;
The deadly black-mouthed cannon piece that sent the fatal ball
Is falling sadly to decay, beneath the chimneys tall.

Fair waxen dames with faded cheeks and gowns of silver sheen
Dwell sadly now upon the days of glory they have seen;
And gentlemen who once were first at tournament and ball
Have all retired to private life, beneath the chimneys tall.

Old drums that never more will drum and horns that will not blow,
Flags that forever more are furled, steamships that will not go,
With trains of cars and blocks enough to build a Chinese wall,
Are gathered all within the space beneath the chimneys tall.

Where spiders stretch their silv'ry webs to compass 'bout their prey;
Where mice hold wanton revelry all night till rosy day;
Where trees and clouds are ever near; where people seldom call,
There dwells a very funny world, beneath the chimneys tall.

—Edith K. Stokely, in Banner of Gold.

DICK DOOLITTLE'S LESSON.

BY ELLEN E. CHASE.

HE leaned across the pasture bars, calling: "Molly! Molly!"

A woman came to the kitchen door—a bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked woman; a woman with the look of one who can both plan and accomplish large things. "Well?" she questioned.

"I want dinner early," he said. "I'm going to town this afternoon. Abner'll be here, too. I set him to plowing in the south lot this morning."

"But, Dick, you're not going off without cutting the wood?" called Molly, as he took up the gun he had stood against the fence, and, whistling to his dog, sauntered across the field. "Dick!" she called again; but he did not turn or look back; and Molly, catching up the baby girl that was clinging to her dress, ran lightly down the steps and around the corner of the house to the wood-pile.

There were several big logs that Dick had hauled from the woods just after New Year's, when he was "turning over a new leaf." Against the sawhorse idly leaned the ax and the saw, like old cronies that were trying to wink at the gudeman's sins of omission. But not a stick of wood ready for the stove was anywhere visible.

"Well," said Molly, "I'm sorry, but it must be done." The song of a robin fluttered out upon the air—such a triumphant burst of melody that the baby clapped her hands and laughed. "Oh," said Molly, "little Robin sings as if he was glad to get back home again, doesn't he, Jessie?"

Such a wonderful morning it was! Everything seemed to be rejoicing in the new awakening of nature. Far off, in the shadows of the woods, and in some sequestered fence corners, Molly could see the snow-drifts that still lingered, as if loth to leave such a glad, beautiful earth.

But there was work waiting to be done, and only one pair of hands to do it. They were strong, resolute hands, and Molly hurried back into the house, setting herself to the tasks before her with the deft fingers and wise forethought that always seemed to work such miracles in her homely world. Little Jessie followed her about, watching with grave, sweet eyes while her mother skimmed the cream from the long row of shining pans in the milk-room and prepared the morning's churning. Then, while she churned and the little one quietly amused herself, Molly planned the day's campaign; or, rather, reinforced her courage for the attack already planned, with reasons that seemed to her both strong and just. The churning done, Jessie was at her side begging to be rocked to sleep.

"Sing, 'Hush,' mamma," she said, laying the bright head against her mother's hand, that she had taken in both her own.

Molly drew her rocking chair near the south window, and, with Jessie cuddled close in loving arms, crooned softly to her sweet old hymn that has soothed so many childish hearts:

"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber;
Holy angels guard thy bed."

It was not a part of Molly's wisdom to deny herself or her child the exquisite pleasure this afforded. Whatever might be said in support of the theory and practice of disciplining the little ones to forego this "coddling," Molly's true and tender mother heart was its own law giver, and with reverent joy she tasted daily of this cup of blessing; the purest and sweetest that life could ever bring. She knew that she had never come so near to Heaven's bliss as this. She knew the same ecstatic joy that Mary felt when she cradled in her arms the infant Christ. And, in all the years to come, when never again that sunny head could rest upon her breast, there must always remain this blessed remembrance. Though, like Paul, she might be "in perils often," aye, though even "the sword might pierce her own soul," no deepest sorrow, no sharpest trial, could ever rob her of this sacred memory.

When Jessie had fallen into the sweet, undreaming slumber of childhood, Molly laid her gently upon her bed, and, opening the door into the L, ran quickly up the back stairs into the attic. From the crossbeams overhead hung great braided bunches of sweet corn, kept for seed. The air was redolent of pennyroyal, mint and sweet fern. Molly crossed the large, unfinished room and stopped before a pile of ax-helves. They were of seasoned hickory and showed careful workmanship. Dick had hewn them out during some of the stormy winter days, intending to sell them at his leisure. He had shown not a little pride in the success of his work, and had exhibited them many times to admiring friends. "About as good a job, I guess, as those hammers of Maydole that they cry up so," he said sometimes, feeling that by this unusual effort and accomplishment he had cancelled many shortcomings.

"Poor Dick!" said Molly to herself, stooping to pick up one of the axhelves. "Poor Dick! It's such a pity his mother hadn't taught him that 'no man liveth or dieth unto himself;' then this lesson wouldn't have been needed. Maybe, though, this strain of selfishness is something he takes from some old ancestor, and such traits are slow in coming to the surface sometimes. But, there! I've no time to climb genealogical trees. This is much more like cutting one down. As Parson Tremalow would say: 'It's foreordained.' That's it, I guess, and not so difficult to understand, either. Dick has certainly been a 'free agent;' there was nothing to keep him from cutting the wood. I've been patient, too, till he really makes capital of my patience, and expects me to 'manage somehow.' I've cut the wood myself, and even gone out into the woods gathering sticks, like the poor widow in the Bible. I've tried giving him cold dinners, and he only sulks and goes off hunting. Yes, it must be done." Molly picked up the other ax-helves, and ran downstairs and out to the wood-pile. No Dick in sight and time to begin getting dinner. Far off in the woods she could hear the sound of his gun. One ax-helve after another was laid across the sawhorse and deftly sawed into lengths suitable for the stove, for experience had been an exacting teacher.

When Dick and Abner, the hired man, came into dinner they found it all ready, smoking hot, upon the table.

"Well," said Dick, "I'm tired; such a race as I had after that rabbit, and lost him, after all!" He ate quickly, and said, as he pushed back his chair: "You can harness, Abner; I've got other things to see to." A moment after Molly heard him climbing the back stairs and creaking across the attic floor. He came down in a hurry, flinging open the door: "Where's them ax-helves? Strange I can't find anything where I leave it! I'm going to take 'em to town this afternoon. Where are they?"

Molly went to the stove, and, lifting the cover, said calmly: "Here are their ashes."

Dick looked at her for one moment in a dazed, uncomprehending way; then, as the truth flashed upon him, his face grew white with wrath. He turned and strode out of the house, slamming the door behind him till the very windows rattled. If he had been a club man, or of a stratum lower than his own, he would have vented his anger in oaths. But Dick Doolittle, nurtured by Christian parents, reverencing at least the letter of the law, only slammed the door.

ONE AX-HELVE AFTER ANOTHER WAS LAID ACROSS THE SAWHORSE.

Just at daybreak, the next morning, Molly was awakened by the ringing blows of an ax. When Dick came in to breakfast, Abner came with him. Dick was saying: "Well, we'll use that crosscut-saw and make quick work with the old logs. They say confession's good for the soul, and I might's well confess that I've been letting Molly lift the heaviest end."

He stooped and caught up Jessie, lifting her high above him, and then dropping her gently into her chair at the table. Molly turned and looked at Dick, and as long as he lived he remembered that look, with a thrill and heart-warmth that words alone could never give.—Woman's Journal.

The Very Best of Birds.

The question of birds was under discussion at the table, and one boarder stoutly maintained that canvas backs were better than partridges or grouse, the claims of which were upheld by another.

Then there were others who chimed in to defend rice birds, woodcock, squab and various other varieties of game. In fact, almost everything that wore feathers by one or the other of the party was declared the most palatable.

"Well," said the first speaker, "I'll let the decision of the matter rest with the chef."

To this proposition all agreed, and Adolph, the cook, was called in and asked to give his opinion on the relative merits of birds. The Frenchman hesitated for a moment and glanced at the various disputants, realizing that whatever opinion he gave would make him one friend and a half dozen enemies.

"Ah, gentleman," he said, at length, "those are all very fine birds, very fine, and some are better than others, but neither is the best. The best birds gentlemen, are eagles."

"Eagles!" cried all, in amazement.

"Yes, eagles," replied the chef; "gold eagles!"—N. Y. Herald.

—Willie—"Aunty, what do they call the man who hunts up the taxes?" Aunt Sarah—"Taxidermist, uv course, beca'se he skins everybody."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—The bee works harder than most people would believe. There are about sixty flower tubes in every head of clover, and only a tiny morsel of honey in each. In order to get enough sugar for a load the bee must visit about 6,000 different flowers, and each bee must make, on an average, twenty trips a day.

—Notwithstanding the fostering care of the French government, sheep breeding has declined in Algeria, and official reports show that for several years past there has been a progressive decrease in the number of sheep. The present number is estimated at 8,896,000, the estimates being based on official figures.

—During the last seven years the area devoted to indigo in India has been about 300,000 acres, but in 1891-2 it sunk nearly one-third. A favorable season and a rise in the price of indigo at Calcutta, led to a great extension of the industry in 1893, and the area of cultivation was estimated at 350,000 acres. The output was about 80 per cent. above the average rail exports for the last twelve years.

—If the reported results of recent researches in diphtheria by the Bacteriological bureau of the New York health department are confirmed, they are extremely important. The power to transmit the infection of diphtheria, it is found, lingers sometimes for as much as twelve days and occasionally three or four weeks in patients who have made an apparently perfect recovery from this most deadly disease.—N. Y. Herald.

—Dr. William C. Braislin shows that in negroes the nasal canals are wider, shorter and less deep than in other races, and thereby less protection is afforded the lungs. The author believes that the African nose, being adapted to a tropical climate, is not suited for the colder climates, and that in this lies the greater susceptibilty of the negro to consumption and other diseases depending upon irritating qualities in the atmosphere.

—Experiments in magnetizing and concentrating the low grade soft, red ores of some southern districts are in process, and said to be so far promising of good results. The consulting chemist of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, operating upon 3,000 pounds at a time of the crude ore which contained 40 per cent. of iron and 29 of silica, has been able to secure 57 per cent. of iron and reduce silica 10 per cent.—Age of Steel.

—Obstinate nose bleeding is frequently one of the most difficult things to check. Several aggravated cases have lately occurred at the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. As a last resort Dr. D. Hayes Agnew tried ham fat with great success. Two large cylinders of bacon were forced well into the nostrils and the hemorrhage ceased at once. This is a very simple remedy and one which should be remembered for cases of emergency in the country.

—The deepest boring of which we have any knowledge up to the present time, says Revue Scientifique, is at Parvschowitz, in the district of Ribnik, in Western Silesia. The depth attained is 6,568 feet, and the diameter of the hole is only 2.75 inches. The work has been temporarily stopped, in order to lower especial thermometers, which have been made with great accuracy, into the hole for the purpose of obtaining the temperature at different depths. The boring will then be resumed, and it is hoped that the depth of 8,200 feet will be reached.

—In a German medical journal Dr. P. Furbinger treats of the peanut as an article of food rich in albumen, of which it contains 47 per cent., together with 19 per cent. of fat and non-nitrogenous extractive matters. He recommends the use of roasted peanuts in the form of soup or mush. On account of their cheapness peanuts are recommended as a popular article of food, especially in poorhouses and the like; moreover, they are recommended as an article of food for the corpulent, diabetics and for the subjects of kidney disease, in the last mentioned of whom foods rich in animal albumen are to be avoided.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE MAORI WOMEN.

Their Remarkable Gracefulness and Native Musical Ability.

The Maori women are a potent factor in island life. Liquid dark eyes, soft voices, affectionate and merry dispositions, light-brown skins of ivory smoothness, and gracefulness in every movement, are their most striking characteristics. Seldom are they to be seen in a passion, and not a single "cuss word" for man or woman is to be found in the vocabulary of these charming people. In the most furious rage they can only call each other cat, bullock, dog, goat, sheep or pig. The most deadly is "wild duck," implying a bastard, a child whom nobody will own.

The women of this island are fair types of the women of other islands inhabited by the Maori race, in warm regions where the chilliness of the water does not deter from its free use. The women of Tahiti are as notable examples and quite enough to account for the mutiny of the Bounty. After their stay at that enchanting island, the reluctance of the sailors to return to the discipline of a British man-of-war, with a martinet as administrator, is easily understood. They had lived the Tahitian life long enough to be bewitched—not long enough for the reaction to set in.

Much of this remarkable gracefulness in men and women is due to the dances which bring every joint and muscle into play. The combined movements are monotonous, but, to the individual, each movement is part of a calisthenic exercise that ought to make the fortune of any enterprising person introducing it to other countries. A native teacher, even when preaching from a big, overgrown, ugly pulpit, is a picture in his action, and the women are equally graceful whether walking or sitting, washing clothes in the brook, or engaged in any of their ordinary vocations.

The old heathen dances, many of them far from modest, were suppressed with a high hand by the early missions but in later days the natives have gradually recovered the best and practice them with great assiduity. Their musical ability is marked. They pick up English airs with ease and have lately taken to waltzes and polkas, which they accompany with accordion or such other instrument as they can command. About their own musical instruments the least said the better, for, beyond monstrously large and deafening drums, with some of a milder size, but equally unmelodious tone, they have none worth even casual mention.—Fortnightly Review.

—"Do you ever meet the Probusses, who moved down here from Milwaukee?" asked the visitor. "Lord, no," answered the Chicago lady. "They ain't in society. They're dead rank outsiders."—Indianapolis Journal.

—Customer—"How many yards are in the piece?" Clerk—"This is a whole bolt; not a yard has been cut off, and there is not another piece of goods like it in the stock; it——" Customer—"Well, then you'll have to show me something else. I want enough for sleeves."—Inter Ocean.

—Jimmy (after they have fallen through the ice and been rescued)—"John! we'd better run for home, or we'll catch cold." Johnny—"Don't you fret about that! ma'll lick us so, when we get there, we'll get warm enough."—Boston Traveller.

—"Won't you sing us something, James?" said the mother-in-law, who was paying the second visit to her daughter within a month. "Certainly," answered the son-in-law; "what shall I sing?" "Anything you like." Then James sat down at the piano and sang, "And the Cat Came Back."—N. Y. Press.

—"I understand you saw the play last night," said she. "No," replied the melancholy young man, "I was behind the woman with a high hat." "But you could at least sit comfortable and enjoy the music." "No, I was next to the man who spreads himself over three seats and keeps time with his feet."—Washington Star.

—New Father-in-Law—"Well, sir, the ceremony is over, and now that you are the husband of my daughter, I want to give you a little advice. What would you do if you should wake up some night and find burglars in the house?" Bridegroom—"I should tell them that my father-in-law forgot to give my wife a wedding dowry, and they'd go away."—Tit-Bits.

—An English Methodist paper says a well-meaning local preacher recently prayed that the Lord would "annihilate the queen and all the royal family." When he learned afterward what "annihilate" meant he was greatly distressed. "I dearly love the queen," he said, "and I thought she deserved the longest word I could get hold of."—N. Y. Tribune.

—As soon as a woman marries it is believed that she never again longs for any social amusement. A young married woman was skating on the river to-day, and there was a great deal of indignation because she was not at home setting yeast for the bread or making ash lye. Some of the unmarried women who were indignant were a great deal older than the married culprit.—Atchison Globe.

—Had Seen Better Days.—"This parrot, ma'am," said the dealer," is one that I can recommend. It was in the family of a clergyman for many years." "Well, gents, what'll ye have? Name your pizen!" exclaimed the parrot with startling emphasis. "He was obliged to part with it, however," continued the dealer with an apologetic cough, "and for the last year or two it has belonged to the alderman from our ward."—Chicago Tribune."

"POOR RICHARD'S ALMANAC."

Benjamin Franklin's First Introduction to Fame.

It was "Poor Richard's Almanac" which first made Franklin famous, and it was out of the mouth of Poor Richard that Franklin spoke most effectively to his fellow-countrymen. He had noticed that the almanac was often the only book in many houses, and he therefore "filled all the little spaces that occurred between the remarkable days in the calendar with proverbial sentences, chiefly such as inculcated industry and frugality as the means of procuring wealth, and thereby securing virtue; it being more difficult for a man in want to act always honestly, as, to use here one of those proverbs 'It is hard for an empty sack to stand upright.'" By these pithy, pregnant sayings, carrying their moral home, fit to be pondered in the long winter evenings, Franklin taught Americans to be thrifty, to be forehanded, and to look for help only from themselves. The rest of the almanac was also interesting, especially the playful prefaces; for Franklin was the first of American humoritss, and to this day he has not been surpassed in his own line. The best of the proverbs—not original, all of them, but all sent forth freshened and sharpened by Franklin's shrewd wit—he "assembled and formed into a connected discourse, prefixed to the almanac of 1757, as the harangue of a wise old man to the people attending an auction." Thus compacted, the scattered counsels sped up and down the Atlantic coast, being copied into all the newspapers. The wise "Speech of Father Abraham" also traveled across the ocean and was reprinted in England as a broadside to be stuck up in houses for daily guidance. It was twice translated into French—being probably the first essay by an American author which had a circulation outside the domains of our language. It has been issued since in German, Spanish, Italian, Russian, Dutch, Portuguese, Gaelic and Greek. Without question it is what it has been called—"the most famous piece of literature the Colonies produced."—Brander Matthews, in St. Nicholas.

—The I. O. O. F. lodge at this place celebrated the 13th Anniversary of their organization here on Friday evening. About a hundred people participated in the festivities and report a splendid time.

—A lively runaway took place on Railroad avenue Monday. Frank Kuchenmeister's team tried to beat a switch engine from Third street to River street where they turned the corner continuing their pace down Bridge street.

--Quite a number of Delanoites drove to St. Michaels on Sunday to attend the funeral of Lewis W. Haefer. Among them J. E. Borsch and family, Fred Lindsley, John Lohmiller, F. L. Scherer and Henry Bock. Mr. Haefer was an old settler at Hanover, and well and favorably known. He was chairman of the Board of County Commissioners at the time of his death.

--The Eagle says "Dr. Catlin's caucus." The Dr. was appointed a year ago at a democratic caucus together with N. K. Coffin and Joseph Cramer, a committee of three for the purpose of calling a Democratic caucus. And it's called. As for the Doctors aspiration's for office he would prefer to receive no nomination. But like any good, patriotic citizen is in the hands of his friends if necesity demands, for anything from President to Constable.

—If the democrats do as well as republicans do when they have a chance they will elect their entire ticket. The Eagle cries, "don't have party politics at home," and have fooled people willing to be fooled until every man on the school board and every appointee even to janitor and Miss White are republicans. Are there no democrats fit to be on this board? A majority of the village council have been of that persuasion and if democrats persist in being led around by the nose in this style they must not squeal. We warn them now.

--A few people in town seemed to think they were somewhat wrought up early this week over Rev. J. W. Powell's Sunday evening sermon, because he proclaimed from the pulpit in his own ardent style that there is but one way to be saved, and said that the Odd Fellows or the Masons had never yet saved a man. We did not know that either of them ever claimed to save men. But as Rev. Powell has belonged to both, he should know. We have been informed that it was against their rules to meddle with politics or religion, as an order. To join either society the applicant must express himself as believing in God. If we are correctly informed it looks as if all members of both orders must agree with Rev. Powell that there is but one way to be saved; and if so, of course, if they are wise they will embrace that opportunity.

—A peoples (republican) caucus is called to meet at the city hall tonight.

—Invitations are out for a "night cap sociable" on North Third street next Saturday evening.

—Don't forget to be on hand at the Democratic caucus Saturday night March 10, at 7:30.

--A party of Delanoites visited at J. Rader's residence in Independence on Wednesday evening.

--John Brazie is arranging to move to Monticello in the near future. The Times thinks likely Dr. Shrader will also move there soon.

—Teacher's examination is being held here today. Some of the pupils of the Delano school are writing on the questions for practice.

—An increasing interest is being taken in the revival services being held at the M. E. church. Four joined on probation Wednesday evening.

—On Monday evening at 7:30 Dr. Chaffee, of Minneapolis will preach at the M. E. church in Delano. On Sunday he preaches at 2:30 p. m. at Montrose.

—Jos. Bernick, who has been running a temperance saloon and restaurant for the past three months has closed up. It is rumored that Mrs. Roehl will open up a store in the building.

--The egg manufactories are now running on full time and, farmers are fattening. Mc Kinley is to be in the state soon; perhaps he could be induced to pay the 5cts per dozen tariff to a few farmers as a tickler.

—President McGary has appointed as the Executive committe for the ensuing year, of the Washington's Birthday Association. T. J. Catlin, C. W. Ingerson, and Miss Rebecca White.

--Some lovers of garden sass have planted seeds and hope by keeping the boxes near the fire to get a few plants started in time to have them ready to plant out as soon as the ground is fit.

--Tuesday night a couple of inches of snow fell; but Wednesday's sunshine was too much for it and before night the ground again appeared and the symptoms of spring were again with us.

—The Eagle is kind of cute she advises the republicans to get together and hold a meeting, and she also advises everybody to come to the peoples caucus and help nominate a ticket which of course will be republican, or she will go back on it. Oh, Eagle! People are learning your tricks.

—The village Financial Statement shows our village authorities to have begun business a year ago with $422 90, to have received enough more to make $4321.57, and to have wound up business with only $39.75 cents in the treasury. They paid a bond and interest of $1,080. Did some good street and sewer work, and spent for a piano $62. Hired a band teacher for $100; celebrated the 4th of July $50, and surveyed the river and streets $98; quarantined, $50 50; disinfected $20.

—It is said about town that a party consistsng of 13 drove across the line into Hennepin county one night this week where two of the able bodied females engaged in a lively encounter, and one is reported as saying that the other "acted in ridiculous manner; and it took me a long time to get my nose to stop bleeding." Others say there were two bloody noses. Didn't the know better than to start out with a 13 load.

—Master H. Elmer Coffin, formerly "devil" in the GAZETTE office writes from St. Peter that he expects to be in the business department graduating class at the Gustavas Adolphus College this spring. He says, "ask the boys if the school has a yell. They are not in it if they havent." He sends the yell of his class as follows: "School school school school i rool; school i shangarock schoola barba coolah, hobble gobble razzle dazzle siz boom, Commercial College '94 rah rah rah, Tiger" He need not try to make us folks believe that he is a Swede scholar by yelling such stuff as that.

—In looking over tax receipts we notice that a person paying $14.85 tax, and living in Detano, pays,

|---|---|
| For State, County and Village | $5.94 |
| For School Taxes | $8.91 |

This is just 150 per cent more for school purposes than for all other purposes for which we are taxed. If we were buying property, or even paying debts, it would not look so very bad. But when we have a school house built ten years ago and a debt for more than the house is worth now, and are obliged to pay taxes at this rate, for interest, it don't look right. It looks as if the people in our district had been subjected to an administration favorable to money loaners and as if their $500 or $600 every year served to make some money loaner and his agent that much richer. It seems as if with an apportionment from the state of $1.15 per capita for school children the debt might be reduced a little. The following assessments have been made for our district:

|---|---|
| General School Tax | $ 160.46 |
| Special Teaching | 1,588.65 |
| Bonds | 658.24 |
| Total | $2407.35 |

This looks as if our 30 per cent of all the school taxes we pay goes into the hands of the "bloated aristocracy" we read about, and not for the purpose of educating the rising generation. And now the same powers that have brought about this state of affairs with a sinking fund attachment, seeks to have the village brought under the same rules. We think the people of Delano have had all they want of this kiud of "financering."

—We understand that there will be some changes in the corps of teachers in Public Schools next term.

—The town election in Greenwood threatens to be a lively one this time. The Jenkins road case is said to be a strong issue and voters are pretty evenly divided.

Personals.

L. W. Streeter, of Montrose, drove down on Monday.

John L. Stein, of S. W. Franklin visited Delano, yesterday.

Mrs. Swedeback and daughter Miss Hattie are in Minneapolis.

Henry Conzet, of Greenwood, came up on important business, Wednesday.

Mrs. Martin, of Minneapolis, visited with her cousin Mrs. Buedley, thi week.

Joseph Brenner left this week for Ashfield Montanna, where he expects to spend the summer.

John McGary, of Independence, was up on Monday. He says he is still a Jacksonian Democrat.

Albert Dalchow, one of Minnetrista's enterprising farmers visited Delano on business, on Tuesday.

Mr. Haefer, of Montana passed through town on the way to his brothers funeral at St. Michaels, last week.

Charley Wiese who was at the hospital in St. Paul for a short time is home again and on the road to recovery.

J. C. Johnson, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors in Independence was in town Wednesday.

C. R. Carlton, of Independence was in town on business yesterday. He thinks the democrats are not all dead yet.

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor.
ARTHUR E. POWELL, Assis't.

The Senate met last Friday afternoon at the usual hour.

Several new bills were read and referred to committees,

Another portion of the tariff bill was diccussed and brought forth a good deal of debate.

Woman's Suffrage was next. Only a short time was left for the discussion of this most interesting subject, but it will be taken up at the next meeting and those who are anxious to express their opinion will have an opportunity to do so.

The following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS, God in his allwise providence has seen fit to remove from our midst the presence of our worthy Senator, Hon. John Catlin, of Kentucky, and

WHEREAS, We feel that we as a Senate and the world at large have sustained a great loss by the death of so great a statesman, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we express our heartfelt sympathy for his family and friends in their time of bereavement and desolation, and be it

FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the Journal of the Senate and also that a copy be sent to his bereave family.

The Senate adjourned at 3:45.

Quite a number of our pupils expect to take teachers examination this week.

Practice upon the other play has begun. It is entitled "Brother Bill and Me," and is very humerous. Everyone should come and see them when presented.

The chemistry class have been making chlorine gas this week and every once in a while some one was seized with a violent fit of coughing caused by inhaling gas. It didn't prove very pleasant, but then every one in the class survived.

This warm weather has revived the game of foot ball.

We are sorry to say than one of our scholars, Erma Wilder has left school.

Two of our Senators are missing, Hon. Allie Murphy and Hon. Elmer Erickson. It is supposed of course that they have gone to their reward and resolutions concerning their death will probably be passed at the next meeting of the Senate.

"Do not let your angry passions rise" would be a very appropriate motto to quote to one of our chemistry class.

The Senior class have organized and the list of officers, motto and yell, will be published next week.

County Cullings.

Oh, dear! Oh, dear! It seems so queer
Friends should fall out and fret and jeer,
Yet Eaton has, in a manner,
Tumbled onto a Tanner.

Now, this world seems large enough, quite
For people to live and not fight.
There's plenty of work for Eaton
Even after Tanner be beaten.

There is enough for Tanner too
Should he be honest and true blue
And let Eaton alone some time;
At least when he is doing prime.

Tanner need not use such large words
To turn gall and bitter into curds;
While Eaton could as well leave off
His cutting sarcasm and scoff.

Gentlemen do, see if you can't Get along without such a rant
Your subscribers enjoy news,
And possibly editors views.

The Commissioners will meet on next Wednesday the 14th. It was understood that their meeting was to have been on Tuesday next but that is generally town and village election day and for that reason the meeting will be held the next day.--Buffalo Journal.

Rrof. B. F. Remmington, has married a lady with a farm and is now devoting his attention to agricultur on the Monticello prairie. In case Superintendant Lindsley drops out which is not likely, he will be a likely candidate for Superintendant

Heard a man say the other day in Minneapolis, that when an American went to the State Capital to transact any business he had to have an interpreter who understood the Scandinavian language as that was the only language now talked in that venerable building.—Buffalo Journal.

A man has a right to change his political views or his religious beliefs whenever he wants to do so. It will be a grand thing for this country when men get so much intelligence and independence as to pay no heed to the man with the party whip. Every sign indicates the near approach of that time.—Buffalo Journal. Come right along brother Eaton. Don't be bashful.

Some of our contemporaries are fixing up slates for next fall's election. Editor Tanner is advocating his friend John Alley for Judge of Probate again, we have no objection to Mr. Tanner supporting Mr. Alley if he sees fit, but would suggest that it would look better to either claim to be a republican or try to find some democrat as capable and deserving as Mr. A. who has had office a good while, if he feels called upon to name the man.

The Minneapolis Journal says a prominent educator, Prof J. A. Wharton, of Buffalo, has changed his politics and proposes to announce to the public soon his reasons for so doing. He was evidently a democrat for revenue only, and failing to find a place on that ticket, has flopped. If he will frankly state to the public that he has changed his political faith, what little there is of it, so that he may have a chance to become successor in office to County Superintendant Lindsley, we have no doubt but the majority of Wright county voters will believe he is telling the truth.

It has been practically demonstrated that in the long run the the light sandy soil of Sherburne county is better for farming purposes than heavier soil. It will stand wet spells much better, is quicker to mature crops, and much more easily cultivated. Men who are thrown out of employment by the business stagnation will never find a better time to secure a farm in Sherburne county than now. There is an abundance of vacant land here of almost any variety desired, and the prices asked are lower than they probably ever will be again.—Sherburne County Star News.

We are informed that it is the duty of the Chairman of Supervisors of each township and the President of each village to select a man to fill the vacancy on the board of County Commissioners occasioned by the death of Louis W. Haefer. This probably will not be done untill after the new officers have been chosen on March 13 and will give an additional political interest to the village and town elections; as on this election depends whether the board will be republican or democratic. Don't let our republican friends make you believe it makes no difference and persuade you to elect their men, and then go around crowing over their victory.

Among Our Exchanges.

Dr. C. A. Wheaton, of St Paul, was here last Sunday visiting Dr. J. L. Camp.—Brainerd Journal.

The disgraceful scenes in congress last week, would put the average ward caucus to shame.—Sherburne County Times.

JOEL P. HEATWOLE has been nominated for mayor of Northfield. Every city ought to have a newspaper man for mayor and we therefore nominate Bro. Fichthorn for mayor of St. Peter. —Herald.

The Democracy has been in the saddle now almost a year, and the suffering public are still being "robbed" by the Republican tariff barons, with little prospect of relief even when the relief is consummated.—Sherburne Co. Star-News.

Major Baldwin is mentioned for governor, but as he is a man who has a mind of his own he will hardly be acceptable to the Democratic bosses, and then too the people of the sixth district may think him a pretty good man to see congress.—Mille Lacs County Times.

Has this administration the sand to prosecute these influential thieves, (of pine timber) the bare statement of whose monumental steals from the school children of the state appeals to the average citizen? We hope so and believe so. There must be no faltering. Prosecute them with vigor, with courage, with firmness and "let no guilty man escape."—Moorhead News.

The profits of the sugar octopus last yeai were greater than the interest on the national debt. The interest on the public debt was $22,761,000, or 34 cents per capita. But the people paid to the sugar octopus $36,602,000 net profit, or 54 cents per capita. The people fight the increase of the debt and the interest burden. How much more should they fight the unearned tolls of the sugar trust.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Wright county has at present the largest number of prisoners in the jail at Minneapolis it has ever had. The maintaining of them is very expensive and as a result many of our tax-payers at the county seat are discussing the advisability of erecting a jail. It is claimed that at the present time if we had a jail it would result in a saving to the tax-payers; that they could be boarded cheaper; that the bills for medical treatment would be lighter, and the lessened expense of conveying prisoners to jail would alone be a great saving. While the present condition of the county's finances would hardly seem to warrant so expensive an improvement as the building of a jail, it is doubtless an improvement which the county will sanction being made in the future.—Howard Lake Herald.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE Bland Seignorage bill has passed both houses and now waits for the President's signature.

MRS. SENATOR KELLER, of Sauk Center has been made defendant in a law suit for alienating the affections of Mrs. Mary Kroesin's husband.

TELEGRAPHIC reports from Denver say that United States troops are in command of the city. Gov. Wait tried to arrest two members of the fire and police board for protecting gambling houses. It is said he fears assassination.

ST. PAUL Democrats are waking up and organizations are being perfected in every ward and enthusiastic meetings held; they appear to think they are entitled to a victory and propose, with a good show of success, to improve their opportunity.

THE mayor of Northfield for the next term is Joel Heatwold, about whom we have read so much. Just whether his political star is to set here or he is to climb the ladder into Congress remains to be seen. Editorial brains seem to be coming to the front.

A COMMITTEE sent out by Govenor Russell, of Massachusetts, last year to learn of the Norwegian method of dealing with the liquor traffic, are said to have reported favorably of trying a modified form of the Gothenberg plan in use in that country. It is claimed that it takes the saloon business out of politics, as well as proves a better source of revenue under the high license plan.

THE Breckinridge trial at Washington is receiving more newspaper space than the actions of Congress and is being more read all over the country. It has the appearance of being a very nasty affair. If the Colonel is guilty he must be receiving his reward, in part on earth. If he is innocent the women in the case should be dealt with in a way to stop such cases. A good way to suppress vice, in some cases, is not to give such trials so much notoriety by printing details and sending them all over the country to taint and corrupt the morals of the nation.

PEOPLE are fast learning the fact that total abstinance is the best way to crush out the saloon. Let a man who does not drink go into a place where liquors are kept and moderate drinkers will stand around and get quite thirsty before they will go up to the bar to drink; they wil look decidedly sheepish if they are standing along in a line, in front of a bar, like so many pigs before a trought, if a lady passes by on the street and happens to glance in through an open door or window where the curtain is not drawn over. Most of the beginners like to find a side door to the saloon where they can slip in and out without being seen by the public, young men hang their heads with shame if they happen to meet an acquaintance as they step out from such a place. On the whole the business is becoming more and and more unpopular in this country. Politicians are beginning to know that as a candidate for office they do not want to make a business of getting the boys all drunk; they can't depend on drunken men to vote right; so they don't spend their time and money in this way as much as they did. Boys are being taught the evils of intemperance, in our schools; they are learning that drinking boys and young men are not wanted by those who employ help in any of the walks of life; even the saloon keeper himself prefers a bartender who will keep sober. A drunken man is a nuisance to every body around him; and when he begins to sober up he sometimes feels terribly himself. No one knows these things better than the people who practice them. They will not deny but that they respect sober people. If they wish to have work done they will ask for a man who will stay sober long enough to do it, at least. It seems as if the next generation would be far in advance of this in the matter of sobriety. Scandinavians are warking for temperance. Catholics are establishing Total Abstinence Societies. Churches work for it. It is taught in schools. Insurance companies refuse to take heavy drinkers. And every thing points to rapid strides being made to the time when a drunkard will be a curiosity in the land. More of one than a temperance man was a few years ago.

ACTIVE TOTAL ABSTAINERS.

Agressive Address Adopted at the Catholic T. A. Convention.

From the Pioneer Press we clip the following address issued by the meeting of the Fourth district Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the Archdiocese of St. Paul:

"We, the delegates from the societies in the Fourth district of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the Archdiocese of St. Paul, in convention assembled, respectfully drawn the attention of our fe low citizens to the following facts: The liquor traffic in the United States was carried on last year at a direct cost to the consumers of over $1,200,000,000: and an additional sum at least eaqual in amount was spent in taking care of the effects of the liquor drunk. The counterbalancing gain against this enormous loss was infinitessimal.

A comparison of the amount thus wasted with some of the large money items which the American people are in the habit of thinking about helps to show still more clearly how foolish the drink business is. The loss of the value of all our railroads or our wheat crop or our corn crop for any given time would be very small compared with the sum "worse than wasted" in liquor during the same period. These reasons alone would seem to be sufficient to move people interested in our country's material welfare to take sides in favor of temperance and against the brewery, distillery and saloon.

"We approach our co-religionist with a statement of the fact that liquor drinking is the cause of greater loss in numbers to Holy Church and greater loss in souls to God than any other device now being employed by the author of vice to mislead unthinking men. Should it not then receive a greater portion of the time of those interested in the saving of souls than any other form of evil at work amongst us?

"We urge the members of our union to continue their warfare against rum by building up their respective societies. Here we wish to direct attention to the wisdom of exhibiting the weakness in the position of the so-called 'moderate' drinkers. To recommend moderate drinking is the worst advice possible to be given on the temperance question; for if immoderate drinking were advised practically none would follow it. From this view of the case there are but two parties—the total abstainers and the moderate drinkers. Drinking to excess has no champions. The example of the total abstainer is positively good; that of the drunkard is negatively good—it serves as a warning. The moderate drinking class is the only one in the community whose example is positively bad. The custom of giving entertainments, rallies, etc., is good and should be vigorously kept up; but we especially recommend personal solicitation as the most effective method of making recruits, and it would, perhaps, be most profitable to give our attention to that large class of people in our midst who are pledged total abstainers, but who have not yet allied themselves with our union. Then if we hope to make our work permanent we must give more attention to organizations of women and children. We must labor to remove the prejudice against women's societies, and to expect children to maintain associations without the aid of adults is unreasonable.

"Our members should strive by patient study to fit themselves better and better to carry on the fight. In this connection we advise the continued distribution of temperance literature. We also especially urge that our societies send accounts of all important doings to the secular, as well as the religious press. The great good we derive from the press all acknowledge, and items of the kind mentioned will be thankfully received by our great dailies because such matter is news, and to a constant increasing number of our citizens "good news."—Pioneer Press.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Not What It Is Cracked Up To Be.

BY HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

Your correspondent will once more allude to the weather here and would state that its average for the period covering two months, beginning with Christmas, last, has not been by a considerable degree the summer weather that the average Minnesotan is led to believe to exist in California the year around from reading the glowing accounts published and distributed through the world, and if the above period is a fair sample of the weather for the corresponding period of each year, the man who leaves the North Star State on New Year's day with the expectation of finding summer weather on his arrival in the Golden State is liable to be disappointed. He will find green trees laden with green foliage and fruit and many things giving a summer like appearance to the country but he will also find his heavy Minnesota clothing answer him quite well here, about the only things he can dispense with are the fur coat, fur cap and arctics, and even they on cold morning drives would not come amiss if brought into requisition. The temperature seldom drops below 30 degrees but it is frequently cold enough to frost and freeze ice. There were fifteen frosts in January, last, and a considerable number in February and in consequence there was considerable anxiety felt as to its effects on fruit. There were newspaper reports as to damage by frosts which were contradicted later, the version of which given by each of the different lotalities were: "No damage here from frost to oranges and lemons but further in the valley or up Riverside they suffered considerable. We are here on an elevation that is never affected by frosts." Go to another locality and one will hear the same reports with different localities substituted each claiming that they are in a frostless belt. From best information your correspondent is of the opinion that the percentage of fruits damaged is small. Oranges are still abundant and of fine flavor and at low prices, but it is nevertheless amusing to hear these explanations of the inhabitants in their efforts to sustain the reputation of their country.

From information obtained from others and personal observation, your correspondent is of the opinion that cool weather to a greater or less degree must necessarily exist here during the so-called "rainy season." These rain falls last from one to two days, leaving a considerable deposit of snow on the mountain crests, extending a considerable distance downward on the slopes. The presence of the snow on the mountains has its effect on the temperature of the valleys and cool weather and frosts follow the rains and continue for a few days till the snow disappears from the mountain under the sun's rays, then a period of very fine weather sets in and continues till the next rain comes, which may come within a week or even as long as a fortnight. The rain fall in this part of California is not very copious. To the inhabitant of the Mississippi valley the rainy season here appears to be rather a dry season. January, February and March are accompanied with the greatest rain fall, furnishing the supply of water for irrigation purposes. The signal service reports show a little colder average of temperature for January, 1894, than former years, justifying the declarations of the "oldest inhabitant" in his protestations as to this being the coldest winter in his experience of a quarter of a centuary in California. The signal service shows Los Angeles and San Diego the warmest points during the last three months of all the points reported west of the 104th Meridian, the different places in Arizona being several degrees colder. So far March has been accompanied with the ideal California weather which with the sun's advance northward is likely to continne.

The part referred to in this correspondence is but a small portion of California which includes the orange belt or the region of citrous fruits, which your correspondent is informed is the only successful producing locality of those fruits on the western slope of the continent, and taking that fact into account the citrous industry in California has a fair prospect ahead. It can compete with other citrous producing countries in supplying its product to the Rocky Mountain and Pacific States and Pacific slope of British America at a fair profit to the producer. Its shipments however extend much further than the territory just mentioned. The most discouraging feature to the immigrant in going into the citrous or any fruit industry grown on the larger trees or vines is the length of time required for a satisfactory yield from the enterprise. Take an orange orchard for instance, which yields fair crop at the end of three years under good attention, does not become a paying institution until the end of seven years. The same condition applies to the nut industry here. There are tracts with orchards of several years growth to be purchased at about four or five hundred dollars per acre and less in some instances, according to age of trees, that is orchards of the different fruits or nuts.

It is estimated by residents here that dairying is practicable in those uninviting alkali districts near the rivers and towards the ocean referred to previous in these letters where they claim that selections of lands suitable for the cultivation of alfalfa can be made and wherever that vegetable can be cultivated dairying can be made a success. Those localities being so uninviting have been passed by mostly. There are large tracts of those lands in those localities still unoccupied and it is among the possibilities that they may be utilized later. It is claimed by others that underdraining will make them productive, which on account of the expense seems to be impracticable, but dairying products command prices sufficiently remunerative to justify a considerable expenditure with a prospect for immediate returns, and possibly lands may be found that may be brought into cultivation by the usual process, not requiring underdraining or the opposite irrigation.

Independence History.

EDITOR GAZETTE: As it has been suggested to me, that perhaps a little history of the early settlement of the town of Independence might be interesting to the many readers of the GAZETTE I will attempt to give an outline sketch in part, of the early settlement of Independence Town.

The first settlement made in the town of Indepeedence was in the fall of 1854, by Jobe Moffett (sometimes called Uncle Jobes) on the banks of Pioneer Creek, sometime called Moffett's Creek, but finally assumed the name of Pioneer. The Moffett family came from Indiana, and in religion were Quakers. The family consisted of father, mother, two sons and one daughter; all grown. But in two or three years Uncle Jobe became tired of the wild west and they moved to Iowa, finally was lost track of altogether. The oldest settlers now in the town are E. Hoisington, John Williams, E. Brandon, Mrs. Shrewsbury, Frank Shrewsbury and your correspondent. These all came here in the spring of 1855. At that time Minneapolis was the head of navigation for all supplies, mail matter, etc., going west. People going into the interior were compelled to cart or back these supplies through muddy roads and swarms of mosquitoes. Such was the hard ships of the early settlers of western Hennepin county. But by endurance, perseverance, and the Providence of God, we still live. In '55 and '56 there was a heavy emigration from the east into the teraitory (Minnesota) and the town of Independence settled up quite fastly. But the advent of 1857 brought hard times and every thing collapsed. Hard times and grasshoppers created almost a famine in these days. But in '58 or '59 Col. Blaine of Va., came in here with his pockets full of money to buy ginseng; that root being plentiful here at that time; in fact the woods were full of it. And so Blaine was considered a kind of Moses in way of deliverance, and the ginseng a manna in the wilderness. The first ministers that visited the town and held meetings were J. J. Camp, J. J. Turwell and A. Abbot. The first school was started where the village of Armstrong now is, it was taught by Norman Schook, now living in Meeker county. In fact, we might call Armstrong the Athens of the west, it being somewhat noted for its Theological advantages, as quite a number have grown into the ministry at this place. The Sioux tribe of Indians had just removed their teepes and the smoke of their camp fires got cleared away when the pale face made his appearance in the primeval forests to hew out for himself and family a home, where he hoped to spend the twilight of his ife. Many of these old settlers have passed away. The record they have left behind is the mark of the woodman's ax; and the epitaph written upon the marble slab that marks their last resting place. In the early settlement of the town there was an abundance of game, mostly deer, and once in a while a bear was found, and there was no end to the fish. So all this helped to supply the early settlers with food. Pioneer Creek was the principal rendezvous for fishing in these early days.

In the fall of 1855 Perkins Bros. built a saw mill on the east shore of Lake Independence. Just over the line in the town of Medina. They also laid out a town site and called it Perkinsville, but it was mostly on paper and never amounted to much. A year or two later the Raders built a saw mill on Pioneer Creek, just below the crossing of the Watertown road, near Jacob Bryant's. It was a water power. They did sawing for awhile but it has been abandoned years ago.

Finally the civil war began, the Indian massacre was inaugrated and the devil himself was set at liberty. All the able bodied men went either to fight Rebels or Indians, nobody at home but the women and children. But time has erased all these troubles and trials. And today I might say, we have before us a more deadly foe than the wild savage of the west. That money power with its master is longing to possess authority over the masses and the poor of this country until they will beg for the crumbs that fall from the tables of the rich. But Mr. Editor, I am a little off my text, I was talking about old settlers. Well they are all here, except who have died or moved away. I believe the last census, 1890, gave the population of Independence at 1035, and I think it is still increasing.

The Great Northern was built through the town in the summer and fall of 1868, Delano being the terminus for the winter. Just after the war things began to liven up and times were prosperous. For a good many years until 1873, we might say when U. S. Grant and a Republican Congress demonetized silver. Now these Shylocks are frying the fat out of us fellows. And the Lord only knowns how long it will continue. Major McKinley, patentee of the McKinley Tariff bill and John Sherman, the patentee of all our monetary system for the last 20 years are responsible in part for the great calamity that is now upon us, while these fellows and their associates are having a feast of tabernacles, thousands upon thousands of people in this country are crying for bread. But lets see, where was I; I think I left off at the terminus of the Great Northern. Maple Plain post office was established in 1856 or '57, with Irvin Shresbury as post master. Lake Independence was discovered on the 4th day of July, 1854, and in honor of the day was named Independence, the lake is partly in the town of Independence, the township was organized in 1858 and called independence.

In conclusion would say, our town is well up to the average of the towns in Hennepin county for wealth, industry, intelligence, and modern improvements. Our town has sent several Representatives to the Legislature and expects to send a man to Congress soon. Almost ever political organization is represented by us, Democrats, Republicans, Prohibitionists, Populists, etc. Our church and school privileges are good and yet we expect to improve on them in the future. Mr. Editor if you see fit to allot this a space in your valuable paper you will have my sincere thanks, ever more.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2, 1894.

President Cleveland has, according to information from a trustworthy source, positively refused to act as mediator between the democrats of the Finance committee and the democratic Senators who have been fighting for radical changes in the tariff bill, in order to protect certain industries in their States. When asked to do so he is said to have indulged in some very vigorous language concerning criticisms which democratic Senators have made upon the floor of the Senate and elsewhere about his alleged interference with the legislative branch of the government, and to have anything to do with the matter. This is in accord with my understanding of one of the reasons for the President's hunting trip. He wished to be away from Washington while the democratic Senators were agreeeing upon the tariff bill, and was both surprised and disappointed when he returned to find that an agreement had not been reached, feelings probably shared by ninety-five per cent of the democratic party.

It seems difficult to convince the republican Senators that they do not possess all of the parliamentary knowledge and skill in that body, but they were very cleverly outwitted by the democrats this week in a scheme of their own putting up. A republican caucus decided to spring the immediate consideration of the Bland bill for the coinage of the seigniorage, which passed the House last week, on the Senate, counting upon the votes of the populists, and upon forcing the silver democrats to choose between tariff and silver, their idea being to keep the Bland bill before the Senate for an indefinite period, in order to prevent consideration of the tariff bill. The democrats learned of this programme and gave the republicans a surprise they have not yet recovered from, by taking the initiative in getting the Bland bill before the Senate, Senator Voorhees stating that as it would probably be about ten days before the tariff bill (now before the full Finance committe) would be ready for the consideration of the Senate, and that that time was ample for the disposition of the Bland bill. Senator Sherman made an ineffectual effort to have the Bland bill sent to committee.

Senators Vest and McPherson made personal explanations in the Senate this week concerning charges made against them, in a New York paper, of having speculated in the stock of the sugar trust on their knowledge of what the sugar clause of the tariff bill was to be. Senator Vest said: "I may as well say now; once for all, that such publication as this is a vile slander and the man who repeats it is a willful and malicious liar." Senator McPherson said that he did sometimes buy stocks, for investment, not speculation, and that when he was in the South some weeks ago his brokers, acting under a standing order to buy certain stocks when they could be had at certain prices, bought 1000 shares of sugar stock for him. As soon as he returned and learned of the purchase he instructed his brokers to sell the stock and to buy no more, as he did not wish to hold it while sugar was being discussed by the Finance committee.

The usual bids for the soldier vote were made by the republican members of the House during the debate on the pension appropriation bill. It was the old, old story.

Postmaster General Bissell doesn't accept any halfway business from contractors under his department. The President of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company was made aware of this fact, this week, through an official notification that the contract between the Government and his company for the transportation of mails between New York and the Isthmus of Panama, and between San Francisco and the Japanese and Chinese ports, made under the subsidy act of the notorious billion-dollar Congress, would be canceled, because of the failure of the company to comply with the terms of the contract. Mails will continue to be sent by the steamers of this line, but only the usual prices will be paid for carrying them, instead of an extra subsidy of $1 a mile for all the distance covered. The canceling of this contract leaves only two lines—the Red D line, between New York and the north coast of South America, and the Ward line, between New York, Cuba and Mexico—operating under the subsidy law, as the American line between New York and Southampton will not begin to receive its susidy until next October.

The House democratic caucus held this week to consider the advisibility of making some change in the rules, looking towards an easier way of getting and keeping a quorum, accomplished nothing because it was not itself attended by a quorum. There is one way in which the democrats of the House could largely increase their popularity, help the party, and always have a quorum—by simply attending the sessions of the House: but this seems to have been entirely overlooked by some of them.

BULLETS poisoned with infectious disease germs is the latest fiendish device in the art of war.

THE governorship of a state is usually esteemed a stepping stone to the United States senate, and with good reason, for there are now thirteen ex-governors who are now senators.

JUDGE GROSSCUP rendered an official decision in Chicago that it is not libelous to call a man a bad egg. This is on the principle that all men are prone to err, and a bad egg is only a good egg gone wrong.

GOV. O'FERRALL, of Virginia, says he is considering the advisability of firing shells at the Maryland pirates who infest Virginia waters. He probably thinks that, as they take the oyster, they should have the shells, too.

ACCIDENTS frequently cause, but seldom cure, physical deformities. News comes from Massachusetts that a Springfield man, afflicted from birth with a short leg, has been completely cured by a fall which, while painful, resulted in lengthening the defective limb to the required limit.

THEY must treat their convicts well in Maryland. The inmates of the penitentiary in that state have contributed $5,000 to charity, in sums ranging from 25 cents to $25. Charity is based on pity, pity springs from the sense that he who gives is better off than he who receives. Are the objects of charity in Maryland really worse off than the convicts?

MISS MARY EDDY is the first woman admitted to the practice of medicine in Turkey. She was born in Syria twenty-five years ago and is the daughter of Rev. Dr. W. W. Eddy, a missionary at Beirut. She is a graduate of the University of the State of New York, and was a registered surgeon and physician in New York city. She passed her examination in the medical military school in Constantinople and later before a board of thirteen physicians, mostly pashas of high rank.

A CURIOUS fatality seems to have attached itself to the family of Capt. Wilson, the African fighter. All the members of it that have died have been the victims of accident or violence except his mother, who a few weeks ago succumbed to an attack of paralysis. The husbands of two of Capt. Wilson's sisters were drowned, as were two brothers in South Africa. There remains now the eldest son, Dr. George Wilson, a pioneer of sanitary science and a lover of fox-hunting.

SEVERAL of the express companies are equipping their cars with safes that are proof against dynamite and are locked by combination locks that can be opened only by the agents at the stations. This is all very well for the companies and their patrons, but the poor messenger may be killed once or twice while the enterprising bandit is finding out that the safe is proof against his arts and non-openable by the messenger himself. Bandits should be notified by circular of the new departure.

"PAUL JONES," the globe trotter for $5,000, had a busy day in Providence, R. I., lately. He entertained people all night and went to bed at 6 a. m., but arose at 10 a. m. He sold soda water to a curious mob for two hours, then went to a reception of women in a hotel. Went to Pawtucket and sawed a stick of wood and gave a ten minutes' talk in the opera house and then took a special train for Boston, making the trip of 44 miles in fifty minutes, to attend a concert at which he sang. He then returned to Providence to proceed on his chase around the world.

PRESIDENT ELIOT, of Harvard, says that there is scarcely a single subject taught nowadays in the same way it was taught thirty years ago, and that even law, the most conservative of studies, is now treated in an entirely different method from that which prevailed in former years. That method, he adds, is being adopted all over the country and is making its way into the English universities. Then, too, the teaching of the sciences and languages has been greatly changed. Evidently the college graduate of twenty-five years' standing must soon regard himself as a back number.

MR. GLADSTONE, according to a Paris paper, is a cousin of Queen Victoria. Here is the pedigree: John of Beaufort, legitimate son of John of Gaunt, "time honored Lancaster," was the progenitor of two great Scotch lines of dukes—Sutherland and Athol. Jane Gordon, of the house of Sutherland, married Hughes Mackay, ancestor five generations back of Anne Robertson, mother of Mr. Gladstone. On the other side Elizabeth Stuart, of the house of Athol, married Colin Mackenzie, ancestor six generations back of Anne Mackenzie, grandmother of Mr. Gladstone. He is thus entitling to claim royal lineage.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, March 7.—The house bill appropriating $45,000 for the rescue of the armament and wreck of the Kearsarge was passed in the senate, and the silver seigniorage bill also passed its third reading. After five days of debate the pension appropriation bill, carrying $151,000,000, was passed in the house without division.

THURSDAY, March 8.—The resignation of Senator White, of Louisiana, was announced in the senate. The Bland seigniorage bill came up as unfinished business, but a vote was postponed for one day. The bill for the sale of unsold portions of the Umatilla reservation in Oregon was passed. The president transmitted some additional Hawaiian correspondence to the house. The conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was presented and agreed to. The bill abolishing the office of commissioner and assistant commissioner of customs in the treasury department was passed.

FRIDAY March 9.—Senator Peffer introduced a resolution in the senate calling for an investigation into the senatorial sugar speculation. The house bill authorizing a bridge over the East river between New York and Long Island was passed. The seigniorage bill was discussed, and it was decided to postpone voting on the measure until the 15th. Adjourned to the 12th. In the house the District of Columbia bill was considered. The night session was devoted to the passage of individual pension bills.

SATURDAY, March 10.—The senate was not in session. In the house the District of Columbia appropriation bill was passed, and it was announced that the sundry civil appropriation bill would be considered next.

MONDAY, March 12.—Senator Peffer's resolution for an investigation as to whether senators had been speculating in Wall street was defeated in the senate by a vote of 33 to 27. Newton C. Blanchard was sworn in as senator from Louisiana to succeed E. D. White. Senator Peffer introduced an independent tariff bill amending the McKinley law in various particulars. The seigniorage bill was further discussed. In the house the time was devoted entirely to the consideration of a bill for allowing a street railroad company in Washington to change its system of motive power.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Rainy Lake City.

A postoffice has been established at Rainy Lake City, and Denson P. Redding, who is a brother-in-law of United States Marshal Bede, has been appointed postmaster. It is said that a telegraph line will be constructed to the new city at an early date.

Great progress is being made in clearing streets and avenues at Rainy Lake City, and building and other materials are being rushed in at a rapid rate for the erection of dwellings and stores. All this enterprise is causing the slow-going inhabitants in and around Fort Francis, on the Canadian side, to rub their eyes in astonishment. They are actually getting afraid that the Yankees will cross the imaginary line and take possession of their farms.

The University Grant.

The commissioner of the general land office at Washington sent a letter to Gov. Nelson declining to reopen the settlement of the university grant, recently reached by the interior department. Gov. Nelson wrote a few days ago, suggesting that the state had relinquished to Charles H. Davis a portion of the land recently certified, and that as there might be other cases it would be well to hold the matter open until a careful examination could be made. The department replies that, although Davis had been allowed to file on land, his title would not hold as against its previous approval to the state, and declines to reopen the matter.

Rainy Lake Lands.

The state auditor's office is besieged every day by persons anxious to file leases on state lands in the Rainy Lake gold district, but none of them can now be accommodated, as the lands have all been filed upon. There were not more than 20 leases that could be granted by the state, and these were taken by parties who were venturesome enough to take chances on the lands being what they were represented and filed early. The parties now being left are mostly those who went up to investigate before filing. Duluth and Stillwater parties secured most of the leases.

State School Fund.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Pendergast has announced the apportionment of state school funds, showing 245,245 pupils, each entitled to $1.15 making a total of $282,031.75. Hennepin county leads with 28,405 and will receive $32,665.75. Ramsey county shows up with 18,589 pupils and will receive $21,687.85. Beltrami county is the last and least having nine pupils and an apportionment of $10.35.

Asbestos.

The little town of Belview, west of Redwood Falls, on the Minneapolis & St. Louis, is in a fever of excitement over the discovery of a large vein of asbestos, two feet thick, between two layers of rock. When analyzed it was found to be of a superior quality. It can be easily mined and will be a bonanza to farmers owning the land.

News in Brief.

The auditing committee of the world's fair commissions finds that there will be a balance left, after paying all bills, of $15,000. The counties in the northern part of the state are making an effort to have the money used in the interests of destitute farmers.

A petition bearing 1,296 names was received at the office of the secretary of state. It came from voters of Nicollet, Sibley and Renville counties, and prayed that a new county be created out of the territory now included in the northwest corner of Nicollet, the southwest corner of Sibley and the southeast corner of Renville.

FOR HOME RULE.

Lord Rosebery Will Adhere to Mr. Gladstone's Plans.

The New British Premier Outlines His Policy and Incidentally Attacks the House of Lords in a Speech.

LIBERALS PLEASED.

LONDON, March 14.—The opening of parliament was accompanied by a declaration from Lord Rosebery which sets at rest all suspicion of his attitude toward home rule and the house of lords. At a meeting of liberals in the foreign office at noon the premier outlined in terms of great earnestness and directness a policy with regard to Ireland which will satisfy the most exacting home ruler, while his characterization of the house of lords was sufficiently hostile to disabuse the minds of the chamber of all hope of a reconciliation between commons and peers.

The declaration is received on all sides among the liberals with unbounded enthusiasm. The fear that Lord Rosebery would lay aside the home rule bill and make terms with the peers was not confined to the radicals. It existed throughout the liberal ranks and was heightened by the good natured and rather hopeful reception accorded to Lord Rosebery by the unionist newspapers. No allusion was made to the home rule bill in the speech from the throne, but the omission was more than atoned for by the address in the foreign office.

Lord Rosebery was wildly applauded. His opening remarks were in reverential allusion to Mr. Gladstone. He declared that no assertion of policy was needed. "We stand where we did," he said. The liberal party was bound to home rule by ties of honor and affection. The policy would be definitely pursued. As for the lords, he was becoming convinced that "with the democratic suffrage which we now enjoy, a second chamber constituted like the house of lords is an anomaly." It had become a "great tory organization at the beck and call of a single party leader."

In the house of lords Lord Salisbury dwelt upon the omission from the programme of any reference to international legislation, and especially marked the absence of the home rule question. That, he said, was an issue of the highest importance and ought not to have been laid aside for other subjects.

Lord Rosebery said the government did not desire to evade or shirk the question of home rule for Ireland, but explained that it had not been mentioned in the queen's speech because it would not be introduced during this session. "Lord Salisbury," the premier said, "wants to appeal to the country. We are not afraid to appeal to the country when we think the time is ripe, but we shall never concede to this hereditary assembly the right to force a dissolution."

Referring to Ireland the premier said the present satisfactory condition was due to remedial measures and the promise of home rule. Of course the decision rested upon England, but he believed the conversion of England to home rule would not be a difficult task when the Irish people showed by their conduct that they were worthy of it. In conclusion, Lord Rosebery said that Ireland would never be contented until she had obtained home rule.

BRAZIL'S WAR ENDED.

Seeing the Hopelessness of His Cause, Da Gama Tries to Make Terms.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, via Galveston, Tex., March 14.—Admiral Saldanha da Gama has sent a message to President Peixoto offering to surrender his fleet and cease fighting. He named terms, which were to include immunity for himself and all connected with the revolution. After dispatching his message containing the terms on which he was willing to surrender Admiral da Gama sought safety. He requested an asylum on board the Portuguese man-of-war Mindello, which is in the harbor. The Portuguese commander received him, and the rebel admiral is now on board that vessel. After getting on board he modified his terms and asked that himself and his officers be permitted to leave the country and that the lives of the privates be spared. Nothing has been heard of Admiral Mello, with the Aquidaban and Republica, since he successfully ran past the forts. It is thought he is now in the south, probably off Santa Catharina or Paranagua.

The circumstances which led to Admiral da Gama's offer to surrender were no doubt the preparations for a decisive fight which had been made by President Peixoto. President Peixoto had issued an official decree announcing that at noon to-day all the government batteries would open fire on the rebel ships in the bay as well as upon Fort Villegaignon and Cobras island. Warning had been given to the citizens to leave the city and seek shelter outside the range of the rebel guns.

With the Republica and Aquidaban somewhere out at sea and the loyal navy guarding the entrance to the harbor to prevent their return or the escape of the hemmed-in rebel ships the enemy was at a great disadvantage, and the general sentiment was that even if President Peixoto did draw their fiercest fire upon the capital he was justified in doing so under the circumstances.

Wheat Lowest Ever Known.

NEW YORK, March 14.—May wheat made a new low record Monday afternoon, declining to 62 5-10 cents, or 1-16th below the previous lowest record. The weakness was the result of heavy liquidation both here and in the west, and the total transactions for the day were over 10,000,000 bushels, the biggest day's business done in a long time. No failures are reported.

Two Boys Drowned.

BELLEVUE, Ia., March 14.—Michael Altifilish and John Kegler, 15-year-old boys, were drowned while crossing the river here.

Elections in Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., March 14.—Returns thus far received from the charter elections held in the villages of Michigan Monday indicate republican victories in the majority of instances where party tickets formed the issue. In many instances the tickets were citizen's, people's, etc., and the elections quite largely turned upon local issues.

Wholesale Vaccination.

CHICAGO, March 14.—On Monday at St. Stanislaus' parish school 4,447 children were vaccinated by health officers, while 6,000 others were turned away.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

TENNYSON was very fond of his country home and worshiped big sun hats and white roses.

AMELIA E. BARR is known as being an exceptionally good business woman as well as a clever novelist. Last year a London publisher pirated one of her books and she made him pay her three thousand dollars for it, on the ground that she was a native of Great Britain.

FOR many years after his death Victor Hugo's house in Paris was kept just as it was when he lived in it and visitors could go through it, even visiting the bedroom where he died and the den in which he wrote some of his wonderful books.

ALL of J. M. Barrie's stories are said to have grown out of his everyday life, and in the young men who are pictured walking knee deep in the heather of Thrums and vicinity one can find the boyhood and the present life of the brilliant young Scotchman.

THERE is a call now in the book shops for the oldtime books for young people as well as for older folks. Maria Edgeworth's "Moral Tales"—ah! the little prigs in those moral days!—and "Teachers' Assistant" now find ready sale in their new editions and binding.

Tonsorial Item.

A prematurely bald young man, who is very vain about his personal appearance, asked a New York barber:

"Have you got any stuff that will make the hair grow on my head?"

"I should say so. Just you try my magic elixir, and in less than a month you will look like one of the monkeys in Central park."—Texas Siftings.

Mamma in a Hole.

Little Dick—This is Saturday, and mamma and papa are going to the theater to-night. I'm awfully glad.

Little Dot—Why is you?

Little Dick—'Cause she can't wash me to-night, an' she'll get up so late to-morrow morning she'll have to let me go dirty or miss church.—Good News.

A Lucky Urbanite.

Mrs. Meadow—My sister is just the luckiest girl that ever lived. You know she married a summer boarder, and has to live in New York.

Mrs. Lawnmo—Yes.

Mrs. Meadow—Well, she's got the catarrh so bad now she can't smell.

Scrofulous Bunches
Neck Lanced Without Relief

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen: I had large scrofulous bunches on my neck for seven years. I treated with different physicians and tried many remedies but for them. I went to Rome, N. Y., and had them opened, but this gave me only temporary relief. My physician then urged me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had used one bottle the bunches began to grow better.

and the trouble has not returned since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, only the scars being left.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Upon my recommendation and the effects of Hood's Sarsaparilla in my case the druggist has sold a great deal of Hood's Sarsaparilla in this place." J. W. Goss, Savannah, New York.

Hood's Pills are prompt and efficient, yet easy in action. Sold by all druggists. 25c.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion, or prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they all present, alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or overbusy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, then are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

The lady whose portrait heads this article is Mrs. Ida Coventry, of Huntsville, Logan County, Ohio. She had an experience which we will permit her to relate in her own language. It illustrates the foregoing. She writes: "I had 'female weakness' very bad—in bed most of the time, dragging down pains through my back and hips; no appetite; no energy. The family physician was treating me for 'liver complaint'. I did not get any better under that treatment so I thought I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I felt better before I used one bottle of each. I continued their use until I took six bottles of each. In three months' time I felt so well I did not think it necessary to take any more. In childbirth it does what Dr. Pierce recommends it to do—lessens the pain and perils to both mother and child and shortens 'labor'. I would like to recommend Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-Weed to those who have never tried it; it surely is the best thing for cholera morbus, or pain in the stomach I ever used; it works like a charm. I try never to be without it."

The following is from Mrs. Harriet Hards, of Montpelier, Idaho: "I have enjoyed better health since I began treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for leucorrhea and uterine debility than I have for sixteen years. I am cured of my trouble, and now weigh one hundred and sixty-six pounds, whereas my weight for many years stood at one hundred and twenty-five pounds. With pleasure, I remain,"

Yours truly,

Mrs Harriet Hards

The following is from Mrs. M. A. McAllister, of Lim Rock, Jackson Co., Ala.: "I was in bad health; age was working upon me, and I had ulceration of the womb; could not get about. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it cured me; I felt ten years younger. I have not had any return of my trouble. I am the mother of thirteen children and I am fifty-three years old, have never seen a better woman's friend than your medicine. I have recommended it to my friends here, and it has never failed in any case, so let me thank you for the good it did me." Yours truly,

M A McAllister

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, general housekeepers, and overworked and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent specific for all those chronic weaknesses and diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It cures weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, nervous prostration, hysteria, debility and sleeplessness. A Treatise (168 pages, Illustrated), on "Woman and Her Diseases," sent sealed in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents to pay postage. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. It contains a vast number of testimonials with half tone, or phototype portraits of their authors and gives the full address of each.

AFTER THE VERDICT.

BY ELLERTON GAY.

Copyright, 1894, by the Author.]

NORA WORTLEY felt very lonely and very miserable as she sat in her cheerless lodgings one dark November afternoon. She ought to have been in good spirits, for she had won her case in the law courts, but she was far from feeling so. In fact she regretted more than ever that she had been persuaded by that pushing little lawyer, Nicholas Thompson, to bring the action for breach of promise at all.

She blushed afresh at the memory of the laughter in court, when her precious love-letters were read. She had just dropped them one by one behind the fire, as they were given back to her all smudged with finger-marks and redolent of stale tobacco. If she had never brought this action against Oliver Toogood, these letters would still have remained a cherished possession, a record of her short love dream.

The amount of damages awarded to her did not dazzle her; a thousand pounds would buy her a great many things she did not really want, but all her actual wants were amply supplied already by her own industrious fingers, which were always busy with typewriting; and it would not give her the only thing she wanted—some one to love.

A stumble up the dingy staircase, into which the fog penetrated with impunity, and a knock at the door announced a visitor. "Come in," Nora said, absently, forgetful of tear-stained eyes, and fingers besmoked with perusing her love-letters in the dull, smoky fire.

The door opened and gave admittance to a short, spare man, who bustled in and was all over the room before he had finished saying: "Good afternoon," and had laid his hat and gloves in a place of security. He was very plain, with reddish hair, which stood straight up on his head, and light-colored eyes, with red rims and no eyelashes to speak of. Nora turned up the gas and stood waiting to hear his business.

"Now, do sit down, do sit down, Miss Wortley," he said, with brisk, though embarrassed utterance. "I have just dropped in for a friendly chat and to exchange congratulations about the verdict, you know."

"Thank you," said Nora, without enthusiasm; "I am sure you did your best for me, and, of course, I thank you."

"Just so, just so." A pause ensued, which Mr. Thompson bridged over with sundry disjointed ejaculations. "I—I dare say you know I am a bachelor, Miss Wortley?"

"No, I did not, Mr. Thompson."

"Yes, yes, I am, I'm sorry to say. It isn't right, you know, and I must say I have been struck by the affectionate disposition you have disclosed. Now don't speak, my dear lady! It is so, very much struck, indeed, in fact, madam. Your affection is a treasure I long to possess—"

"Excuse me," said Nora, hastily; "I have no affection—for anyone."

"Come, come, Miss Wortley, just listen to me. Accept my hand and you will find plenty of affection for me. I will make you an excellent husband, very domesticated, don't smoke, don't drink, not very particular about my meals, and very easily pleased, if anyone cares to study me. Now just say 'yes,' and it is all settled."

"I am much obliged, but I would rather say 'no.'"

"But I am not going to take that for an answer; if you won't say 'yes' to-day I will call again to-morrow, and so on every day. No six and eightpence, you know!"

"I assure you I mean no," said Miss Wortley, decidedly; "I beg you will take that for an answer. I shall never get engaged again."

"Poor thing, poor thing. You have such an affectionate disposition, your thoughts are running on the injury that great brute did you. Never mind, my dear, a thousand pounds makes a very excellent plaster, and will soothe the wound very much! That reminds me—bless my soul, how could it have escaped me?—of course you shall have entire control of your money yourself, though I could find an excellent investment for it."

"YOU KNOW I AM A BACHELOR."

"Thank you, Mr. Thompson, but I will not marry you, and as for the money you were instrumental in getting for me, I am so ashamed of it that I think I shall give it to some charity."

"Nonsense, Miss Wortley, you will get over this. I wish that fellow was not such a great hulking brute. I should like to give him a horsewhipping—as soon as the money is paid, of course."

"If you think to please me by abusing Oliver, you are very much mistaken," Nora Wortley said, hotly. "I will hear nothing against him."

"I will wager that he is saying nasty enough things against you," the attorney said, viciously; "Oliver Toogood doesn't like parting with his money any better than other people do; so there is no harm in your having a shy at him if you want to."

"But I don't want to," said Nora, with difficulty keeping back her tears; "he was always very kind to me, and no doubt it was my own fault that he backed out of his engagement." Nora blew her nose and poked the fire, and then turned to Mr. Thompson again. "Somebody in the court wrote a proposal of marriage and passed it to me as soon as the damages were awarded; he was beforehand with you."

"Do you mean that you accepted him?" Thompson grew red with anger, and his hair stood up more aggressively than before.

"No, I did not, any more than I have accepted you; but I like him better than I do you."

"Why?" he asked, sharply.

"Because he took 'no' for an answer."

"Good by, Miss Wortley—for the present!" Mr. Thompson said, making a frantic rush for his hat and gloves.

"Good-by, Mr. Thompson."

Thompson opened the door and gave admittance to some one who was about to knock. He gave a look at the newcomer, and hesitated to leave, but a very decided action on the other's part induced him to do so. The door which had been held open so meaningly for him was very promptly slammed after him, not without a suspicious movement, which looked like a kick, aimed at the departed guest.

The newcomer was Oliver Toogood, a tall, burly, hearty-looking man of forty, having the appearance of a country gentleman, though he was really a horse dealer, very well known in his county for honesty and fair dealing. He drew up a chair to the fire, which was now burning brightly, and, flushed with excitement and without salutation, began:

"What was that cringing little beggar doing here?"

"He came to see me, Oli—Mr. Toogood," Nora said, nervously.

"Well, the less you have to do with him out of business hours the better," he said, brusquely; "I can't deny but that he has done your work well. I suppose you are very grateful to him, and all that?"

"Yes, I suppose I am," Miss Wortley said, doubtfully; "I don't know."

"You ought to know, then. You would not have got a thousand pounds damages if he had not gone about it the right way. I have got the money here for you." He slapped his pocket significantly. "I could not make up my mind to pay good money into dirty fingers, that as much might stick to it as he chooses. Take my advice, Nora, and have his bill taxed."

"WHAT WAS THAT CRINGING LITTLE BEGGAR DOING HERE?"

"You are very kind to interest yourself about it," said Nora, wearily; "but I don't think Mr. Thompson is likely to overcharge or cheat me—in fact, he wishes to make me his wife."

The making of such a confession was distinctly contrary to Miss Wortley's usual manner, but a sudden inclination seized her to show her quondam lover that she was not despised by everyone, though he had cast her off without reason.

"But you are not going to marry him?"

"I—I don't know."

Nora did know very well; but there was something very confusing in Oliver Toogood's fixed gaze and the interest he showed in her embarrassed her and aroused strange ideas.

"Surely you will never tie yourself to a little peddling attorney chap like that!" he burst out, impetuously; "why, I could buy him out and out four times over. A little snip like that that I could take up with my finger and thumb."

"It is very lonely for me," said Nora, looking down so that Oliver Toogood only saw her long dark lashes.

"But you might do better than that," Oliver blurted out, "with what you have saved and my thousand pounds."

"Yes," said Nora, still keeping her eyes cast down, "perhaps I could. I have had other offers."

"The deuce you have!"

"But—"

"Well?" he put in, impatiently. "Why don't you accept the best of them?"

"I shall never marry without—"

"An equal sum on the part of the man? Well, here's the money I have to hand over."

He plumped down a bulky pocket-book.

"There—take it and count it. Bank of England notes all of them. I can't think what the deuce you wanted to quarrel with me for."

"Oh, Oliver," she said, gently; "I always heard that the quarrel of lovers was the renewal of love, and I never thought you would leave me because of what I said."

"Well, I never meant to."

"But you did, and you said cruel things about me."

"Which mischievous persons repeated, Nora. I always meant to come round in the end, only I heard that Thompson was urging you to bring an action for breach of promise of marriage, and that made me turn stubborn. Well, count your money, girl."

"I—I don't want it!" said Nora, sobbing, and hiding her face in her hands; "I hate it, and—"

"And me, too?"

Oliver got up softly, and stood before her.

"And me, too?" he repeated, gently.

"No," Nora murmured; "I was going to say, 'and I won't have it.'"

"Will you have me, instead, dear? I don't see why we can't make it up, now the lawyers have done their worst with us. Will you, Nora?"

Nora turned up a wet face, glorified with happiness.

"Oh, Oliver!" was all she said, but it seemed to satisfy Mr. Toogood vastly well.

"Are you the proprietor of this restaurant?" said the man who had waited for his order until he became sleepy.

"Yes, sir. What can I do for you?"

BUILDING AND SCIENCE

M. BRACQ'S POLYPOSE.

New Photographic Device Invented by a Frenchman—With It Composite Pictures Can Be Taken on One Plate—Description of the Novelty and How It Is Operated.

M. V. Bracq is the inventor of a new photographic shutter which he calls "polypose," because it enables operators to take composite pictures on one plate with very little trouble. With this ingenious device it is possible to take one or several objects as often and in as many different positions as it is desired and on any kind of background. This latter is the chief advantage of the new apparatus. Thus a man can be made to hand himself a glass of water, or a clown to carry his double on his shoulders, etc.

The secret of the system is simple enough, and is founded upon the following principle: If a shutter provided with a slot is placed as near as possible to the sensitive plate, directly in front of the plate-holder, the slot allows only a portion of the reflection of the subject to pass. By changing it about, either horizontally or vertically, the negative can be made to receive in succession several impressions in one way or another. If the intensity of the light has been the same at every exposure no traces of the joints are visible, no matter how numerous they might be.

With this knowledge in mind it was but a step to construct an apparatus with which the work could be accomplished in the most rational way.

The device constructed by M. Bracq and his assistant, M. Faller, consists of a flat rectangular casing, which can be fitted to the plate-holder and can carry in its center, provided with an opening as large as the plate, the ground, glass and frame for the plate-holder. In front of that opening and on the inner side of the casing moves a shutter provided with a slot, which is governed by a spiral screw and winch-handle. The shutter operates in a downward course under a stationary board, allows the impression to be made on the sensitive plate, and meets a second stationary board, underneath which it glides. The exact position of the shutter is determined from the outside by a needle which slides down a graduated groove.

Among a large number of photographs taken with this apparatus the following copy will illustrate the method as lucidly as possible. In operating with a horizontal diaphragm the first pose taken was that of the chair and its occupant, which was held above the floor at a distance of 2½ feet by a number of boards. The first exposure was then made. As the slot is on a level with the support, it is dropped below the seat, and the second exposure is made by placing the subject underneath the chair.

With a little patience and very little difficulty the fantastic figure illustrated can soon be taken. Instead of placing the apparatus vertically, it is adjusted to the plate-chamber in a horizontal position, so that the slot occupies a vertical line. In this way a person can be photographed as if standing in mid-air.

THE EARTH'S MOTION.

It Is Made Visible by Means of a Simple Arrangement.

In Popular Astronomy, Eliza A. Bowen shows how the earth's revolution may be made manifest to the eye. Dr. L. Swift, in Popular Astronomy, says: Place on the floor of a room free from tremors and air currents a good sized bowl nearly filled with water and sprinkle over the surface of the water an even coat of lycopodium powder, and across this make a narrow black line of pulverized charcoal. Place the bowl so that the black line shall coincide with a crack in the floor, or, if the room be carpeted, lay a stick upon the floor, exactly parallel with the mark. After a few hours it will be found that the line is no longer parallel with the stationary object, but has moved from east to west, proving that, during this interval, the earth has moved from west to east.

The reason appears to me to be that the solid floor has with the earth and bowl moved from west to east, and so has the water also, but at a slower rate, as there is a slight inertia, of which the yielding liquid does not instantly partake, to be overcome. It will be seen that the line or charcoal mark always moved from east to west.

Discovery of a New Fish.

A new species of fish, unknown heretofore, has been discovered in the waters around the Caroline islands. The fish is covered with a mucous layer of scales which are not imbricated. It belongs to the family of the nalacopterygians, and its like has never been seen before. The fish is small and penetrates the bodies of the holothurians, at the expense of which it lives. "It is not at all unlikely," says Leon Vaillant, the discoverer of the new fish, "that it exists in the same manner by parasiting other zoophytes."

The Production of Quinine.

Of the 7,000,000 ounces of quinine annually produced in the world the United States uses 3,100,000, or nearly one-half of the entire output. There are 18 chinchona or quinine factories in the world. This comprises one establishment in Holland, two in England, two in Italy, three in France, four in the United States and six in Germany. There is some experimental work in the same line being conducted in Russia.

SCIENCE AT HOME.

Interesting Experiment on the Tension of Liquid Films.

Take a lamp chimney of conical form, that is to say, wider at the bottom than at the top, wet the interior with soapsuds, and then drain in order to get rid of the liquid in excess. Then, holding the chimney upright, dip the wide end in the soapsuds. Upon removing it, it will be found that, toward this extremity, a film of soapsuds has formed in the interior. Now place the chimney horizontally, and the liquid film will be observed to set itself in motion, and in a moment reach the narrow extremity of the glass. This phenomenon is due to the elastic tension of the film, which might be compared to a distended membrane of rubber, which contracts as soon as the traction upon its edges diminishes. Now here the traction becomes feebler and feebler in proportion as the diameter of the glass diminishes. Instead of a single film, a second may be formed as soon as the first has moved a slight distance from the wide end of the chimney, and then successively as many films as may be desired. All will be observed to set themselves in motion and travel toward the narrow end, as if they were chasing one another.—L'Illustration.

EXPOSURE TO LIGHT.

How It Affects Oysters and Other Deep Sea Inhabitants.

At a recent meeting of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, Prof. John A. Ryder spoke of the effect on oysters of exposure to light. He referred to recent observations of Dr. Scheidt on the pigmentation of these mollusks under abnormal conditions. The right valve of the shell having been removed, the oysters were kept in a trough of running salt water. In fourteen days they showed a pronounced blackening of the entire right mantle, where normally there is no pigment, and this was again bleached when excluded from the light. Other specimens which were guarded from the direct action of the light remained uncolored, thus demonstrating that light is the active agent in producing the deposit of pigment granules. Blue glass was found to stimulate coloring, while red glass had the opposite effect.

Prof. Benjamin Sharp remarked that a common species of flounder, Aclinus lineatus, commonly called the hog choker, has the underside almost if not quite as strongly colored as the upper side, thus differing materially from the other species of this group of fishes. Correspondingly it was found that its habits were so modified that the lower part of the fish was frequently so exposed as to be acted on by the light and not kept in contact with the rocks as in allied forms.

A CONVINCING ARGUMENT.

An Incident of Dr. Hale's Lecturing Tour Through Maine.

A good story is told by Dr. Edward Everett Hale of the time when he went on a lecturing tour through Maine. He was announced to speak at several small towns along the route, and as the sound of his name was familiar to all the townspeople, they turned out in large throngs to hear him.

One afternoon as he was driving through a village where he was to appear that same evening, he saw the announcement posted on the rocks, posts and fences along all the by-ways and hedges that he would read something from some of his best-known works.

"The Man Without a Country" was suggested, but good Dr. Hale, with becoming modesty, sought for some chance of escape.

"Why," he urged to his driving companion, who was also the manager of the lecture, "it would never do to give them that thing. It is too old."

"Oh," replied the countryman with encouraging emphasis, "don't let that trouble you. They h'ain't none of 'em ever read it."—Boston Budget.

Many carpenter shops are hidden away in the alleys of the West side, and nearly all such shops occupy structures that seem to be standing merely upon suffrage, and look as if they must soon make way for something more substantial.

THE hurry of modern life or some other equally good reason has made the wares of the street broom seller picturesque and pleasing. There was a time when brooms came into the market well seasoned and yellow; now, however, they come still bearing the delightful light water green of the unseasoned stage, and there are few more pleasing sights than the broom seller with his mass of soft, uniform green, carried at shoulder shift.

"A MAN who always interests me," said a promenader, "is the man who has just provided himself with a new outfit of clothing throughout. He has collected some back pay, or has just come into a fortune, or he has received a month's salary, or he has come to the city with the express purpose of so providing himself; and here he is, new from head to foot, with his hat still wearing the luster of the shelves and his shoes lustrous after the first blacking."

In the first year in which the Aermotor Co. did galvanizing it expended $50,000 in this work, and did not furnish galvanized goods for the entire year either. No extra charge was made for the goods into which this enormous sum was put.

Are you curious to know why this lavish expenditure was made? Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. came to make bed-rock, hard-times prices long before hard times set in? The explanation is this The Aermotor Co. foresaw that something better than painting was required and foresaw that hard times were coming.

THE AERMOTOR CO. FORESEES, IT LOOKS AHEAD, IT ANTICIPATES, IT KNOWS WHAT IS COMING, IT KNOWS WHAT SHOULD BE COMING, IT KNOWS IN ADVANCE WHAT IT SHOULD DO.

Because of this it has an enormous factory, and turns out an enormous quantity of goods, and good goods. The other fellow is a used-to-be, has been, or might have been, had he known, but he didn't know It is all in the past. His business is in the gone by. Ours is in the present, the future. His consolation is found in the darkey's statement. "It's better to be a has-been than a nebber was." After we have done and are doing a thing and it is known to be the only thing to do, certain little piping voices are heard saying "We can do it if you will pay us enough money to do it."

We made the Steel Windmill business, made the model to which the best of our imitators can only hope to remotely approach and in their endeavor to approach it are still weakly experimenting at the expense of the user. But to return to our enormous outlay for galvanizing. Why did we do it? The reason is this. WE BUILD THE BEST WE KNOW, REGARDLESS OF COST, and we believe we know better than anybody. We know that this metal, exposed to the air, will not last unless galvanized, but if properly galvanized, will last scores of years. Barbed wire galvanized will last 20 years, and be practically as good as new. How long does it last unized? Bad, the barbed wire is an eighth of an inch thick, while some of the steel used in the vanes of windmills is from a thirty-second to a sixty-fourth of an inch thick, and therefore would last only from a fourth to an eighth as long as the barbed wire, other things being equal, but they are not equal; the sheet metal has holes punched through it and is riveted to thicker and more rigid pieces.

The vibration of the thin parts at once cracks the paint around the rivets, and water at once gets in and rust quickly eats away the thin parts. Some have used galvanized metal and put in black rivets. This of course is not so good as painting since the cut edge of the galvanized metal is exposed and is in no way protected. WE BUILD FOR THE AGES. We wouldn't sell you a poor painted wheel, nor one made of metal painted before being put together at double price for it. We would pay If you would pay we know, and know- build the best things are practically worthless, we have nothing to do with them. ing that such is all

When the section of an Aermotor Wheel is all riveted up, completed and cleansed of rust and impurities, it is then immersed in melted zinc and aluminum and left there until it becomes as hot as the metal is and until every crack, cranny, crevice, pore and opening of every sort is filled, closed up and saturated with the molten metal and the whole 25 pieces composing the section become soldered and welded together as one piece, then you have something that is strong, enduring and reliable. It is expensive to do, and small doers cannot afford to do it. We keep 40 tons of zinc and aluminum melted from one year's end to another, but we have business enough so that we can afford to do it.

One word about the nature of galvanizing. The silvery white coating which fills every pore and covers every portion of the Aermotor Wheel, Vane and Tower is zinc and aluminum when it is first put on, but which, after standing for a time forms, with the steel, a chemical combination or alloy which cannot be melted and is practically indestructible.

The 5th advertisement in this series will show a 4-Wheel Steel Truck, weighing 175 lbs., which will carry 2 tons, and of which we use 500 in the Aermotor Factory. It will be found almost indispensable on any farm or in any warehouse. For 2 copies of this advertisement, which is No 4 in the series, and $3.50 cash, sent in immediately after the appearance of adv. No. 5, we will deliver f.o.b., Chicago, one of these Trucks or forward from branch houses, freight from Chicago added.

Where we can, we shall make liberal offers to accept copies of these advertisements in part payment for Windmills. If you have any thought of using a windmill this year write us at once, stating what you will need, whether Pumping or Geared, and if possible we will make you a liberal offer.

The Aermotor Co. proposes to distribute $500. CASH, IN PRIZES for the best essays written by the wife, son or daughter of a farmer or user of a windmill, answering the question, "WHY SHOULD I USE AN AERMOTOR?" For conditions of competition and amounts and numbers of prizes send for particulars to the Aermotor Co., Chicago, or to its branches, at San Francisco, Kansas City, Lincoln, Neb., Sioux City, Iowa, Minneapolis, Buffalo, or 65 Park Place, New York City. Aermotor, Pumping and Geared same price, All Steel, all Galvanized-After-Completion, delivered free on cars at Chicago and shipped to any one, anywhere, at the following prices

8-ft. $25. 12-ft. $50. 16-ft. $125.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

DELANO DIARY

Notice.

A branch of the Golden Rule, a general merchandising business will be opened up in Delano this spring. Wait for advertisements. 24tf —Raise cane and beat the sugar trust has been our advice to farmers before and this early season seems to be an unusually favorable season for trying it.

--The M. E. Sabbath school is preparing an Easter programme. The school is growing steadily in numbers and in interest manifested; the attendance last Sunday was 61.

--At the Democratic village caucus held on Saturday evening the Chairman, W. F. Kohler, appointed as the village committee Geo. P. Schaffer, John Lohmiller and M. A. O'Hair.

--A singing class was organized at the city hall last Monday evening under the leadership of J. M. Beck. It is to be known as the Delano Choral Association. There were 26 present at the first meeting.

--The Fair last Saturday was very well attended by country people several buyers were on hand. The prices of milch cows ranged from $22 to $30 per head. Horses were more numerous than buyers.

—A flock of wild geese lit down in the field of Charles Stein a few days ago, the ground was so muddy that it was almost impossible to get near them. They were frightened off by a shot at long range.

—Times appeor to be picking up a little with the opening of spring. A new business, a feather cleaner establishment is here; a traveling show exhibited one night this week, and a new store is advertised to be here soon.

--People are moving earlier than usually this spring. J. S. Cooper has moved into the Sutton residence on Franklin avenue. Chas. Brandes is occupying Johnny Plattners residence on the West Side, Fred Japs to the country, R. D. Hillyer has gone to St. Paul.

--Election day passed quietly here. Almost every voter was out and discharged his duty at the polls, and had their say as to who they would have from among the nominees; though scarcely any body was satisfied with either ticket as shown by a big lot of scratched ballots.

--Mr. C. Hehl, of Long Lake, requests us to say that the Eagle's account of an encounter of a Delano man at Long Lake should be turned around. That he engaged the Delano man to attend a lawsuit for him; that he did not appear and he thinks he is entitled to his money back.

—The symptoms now point to an early spring, wise farmers and gardeners will be prepared to take advantage of the first fine days and put in some of their gardens and crops as early as possible so they may reap the benefit in case there is no better chance later. We are promised a spring time and a harvest but we must be on the lookout to do our work when they are with us.

—The new council, from the yearly accounts, are to have $500 or $1000 fall off in the village revenues from last year by the decrease in the number of saloon licenses. This report comes as regularly as the election. Still high license is paid and saloons are run in open violation of the law every day in the year and seem to flourish. It seems if the city keeps their end of the contract by receiving the $500 licenses; that the saloons should close Sundays; at 11 o'clock at night, and stop selling to minors and habitual drunkards; and card playing in their saloons, or their licenses should be revoked, in accordance with their agreement.

—Rev. Soares will preach at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and evening.

—The sociable at Miss White's on Thursday evening was an enjoyable affair as usual.

—W. W. Lowe, an unfortunate young man minus both hands was in town this week supplying people with stationery. He done some business.

—Preaching in the M. E. church next Sunday as usual. Morning services at 10:30; evening servics at 7:30, subject for the evening, "Womanhood and the Christian at Home." Sabbath school at 12 o'clock. Everybody invited. J. W. POWELL, Pastor.

—John Turngren, Esq., Justice of the Peace for the town of Franklin demonstrated to our citizens on Tuesday, his ability to preside with fairness and dignity in a well fought trial, for assault in the third degree, William Murphy complaining witness and Len. Dedrick defendant. M. A. O'Hair for State, O. L. Billings for defendant. Defendant was fined $25, and costs of the action amounting to $45.64.

—In another place we publish a very interesting and instructive communication from Hon. B. F. Christlieb, now at Monrovia, California. Those individuals who each winter tell about going to California as soon as they can sell out, will do well to read this letter; perhaps they will conclude to let well enough alone, and remain in what this winter has proved to be the garden spot of the United States.

--Hi Dyer announced himself as a candidate for a "dam councilman" before election and received the nomination at the Peoples' caucus, and at the Democratic caucus received quite a number of votes, although he now is a pronounced rabid Republican. He was elected on Tuesday; so now the village has the most ardent worker for a dam on its council and a move will be made if it is in Mr. D's. power to have Hi water.

—Several of our enthusiastic politicians attended the People's caucus and helped nominate a ticket for village officers and then the next night attended the Democratic caucus and voted for candidates to be placed on that party's ticket. Even Republicans taking part in both caucuses; the result was as might have been expected; and as was fully shown by the election. A man had as well, in a battle of bullets fight on one side one day and the other side the next, as to do so in a battle of ballots.

—On Saturday, Fairday, an altercation occurred in Len Dedrick's place, whereby Wm. Murphy received a severe wound around the right eye. On Monday Murphy came to town and had Dedrick arrested for assault in the third degree, in Justice Catlin's Court. M. A. O'Hair for the State and O. L. Billings for Defendant. Defendant plead not guilty and proceeded to trial. After preliminary scurmishing the defendant made affidavit that from prejudice and bias he believed Justice Catlin would not decide impartially and got a change of venue. The justice sending the case to Justice Turngren of the town of Franklin. Justice T. after hearing the case imposed a fine of $25, and costs, $20.64 making $45.64.

—Farmers in this vicinity are preparing to diversify their crops this year still more than they have been doing. Here in the woods they have generally had a few cords of wood to sell and this helped them to some ready cash through the winter. Now many of them miss this income, and keep hogs, cattle, poultry, a few sheep and in this way they always have something to dispose of at cash prices in its season. Not many are depending entirely on wheat, but those who have corn, oats potatoes, beans and even garden vegetables find they are doing better than wheat raisers. Sorghum is a paying crop and in an early season like the present ought to be largely planted. No healthier food in this land seems to be raised at home, and none better appreciated by old and young where it is properly made. It always finds ready sale at fair prices. Much is used in lumbering camps north of us; or on the large prairie farms west of us.

—We are in receipt of a notice from A. W. Guthridge, organizer, C. T. A. U. Minnesota, which we gladly give space in the GAZETTE. Mr. Barth, the organizer for this district is well known here as a conscientious and earnest worker for temperance:

Mr. F. A. Barth, of Watertown, acting organizer for the Fourth District of the Catholic Total Abstanence Union of the Archdiocese of St. Paul, comprising the counties of Meeker, Carver, McLeod and Wright, has called a convention of the societies affiliated with the Union to meet in St. Charles hall, Darwin, on Tuesday, the 27th inst. A convention of the Catholic Temperance forces in the vicinity of Darwin will be something new and agreeable and shows the growth in sentiment there. Doubtless the fact that the National Convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Societies is to be held in St. Paul early in August, has something to do with this local gathering.

—An Epworth League has been organized in connection with the M. E. church here. Rev. J. W. Powell is president, with a good corps of assistants and it looks as if they intended capturing the village and the country around.

—The wonderful liberality of feeling displayed by some of our leading democrats enabled the republicans to get their usual majority of one, on the council. Now just watch them distribute the plums to good faithful members of the g. o. p.

—Some Hennepin county ancient history by John McGary is to be found in this weeks GAZETTE. Old settlers will enjoy reading over and refreshing their minds, perhaps they could help Mr. M. in unlocking the deeper recesses of his memory on a few points.

—Goodale & Mann's Phantasma Co. played to an audience of about 25 in city hall here Wednesday evening. The performance was strictly bum. During the hell'scene, which was made by the burning of a little powder, some of their wardrobe caught fire and the performance was brought to a close, when the play was about half finished, much to the great satisfaction of the audience.

—Crow River seems to have been a kind of headquarters for old settlers in the fifties and sixties. If those who are still here would get together and hold a meeting they could aid in getting up a corsect statement of some of their early experiences, on as good a plan as could be devised. Mr. McGary has already given us one chapter, we would be pleased to have more from him or others.

—Some of our citizens want a dam across Crow River at this place, and as one man, at least, and not a very small one either, on the new council, favors the project it might be well to call attention to a few of the arguments that might be used in its favor. It would cost quite a lot of money to build it, and be likely to require an an appropriation each year to keep it in repair thus making a fine sinking fund for our village moneys. In the spring and at other times when the water is high; when the Raging Crow rushes toward the great Father of of Waters, so rapidly it might serve to check its impetus in a small degree, and hold the moisture in the cellars and furnish navigation in the low places a couple of days longer; it would furnish a place in winter to gather ice already seasoned with the decaying vegetation and decomposing carcases of numerous defunct animals from the tadpols through the list of fish, fowl and beast, to the noble equine that has given up the ghost and has been deposited by his fond owner in the noble stream; all of which have settled in the still waters above the dam and been stirred up from time to time by the wheels and paddles of commerce and numerous young Americans by every device imaginable until the water has become as strong as the average beer or cider. In dog days the placid stream, above the dam will possibly be covered with a beautiful green scum (green is said to be good for the eyes) beneath which the polly wog wiggles, and through which the mud turtle can thrust his head while his body remains hidden from view and survey the wonders of lower river street, and through his green goggles gaze upon the smiling countenance of the portly Alderman Hi. from the 2nd. ward. The odor will at times obviate the necessity of expending wealth for fancy perfumes, and vie with the pig sty, slaughter pen and other manufactories of odoriferics of the variety furnished. While as a source of revenue the politician can ride to popularity on the rolling waves; the legal fraternity can fatten on the numerous damage suits for overflowage and other matters not forgetting those of the animal kingdom shipped from the upper country; the sons of Aesculapius can eke out a living by prescribing for the wealthy classes who seek pleasure on the mighty deep or reside on river side and whose heretofore sleek, fat sides are made to shake with "ager" while druggists receits will be still heavier than at the present time. While undertakers will reap a harvest on the sale of beautiful caskets and coffins, the last earthly home of many a victim to diphtheria, typhoid and other zymotic diseases whose germs would be transported to our previously healthy village, or be retained by the obstruction to the flow of water. Of course during dry seasons, and exceedingly wet spells any workmen engaged in the manufacturing business depending on the "power" furnished by the water, could suck their thumbs and wait for better times, while the proprietors worked off the surplus production. We don't wish to be understood as opposing any enterprise of intelligence, and that will aid the town. We would gladly see steam or electricity, wind, horse, or man power used to advantage; but would respectfully caution anyone against depending on the Crow River at this point for a steady power.

Personals.

Henry Invle, of Hanover, was over to see old friends one day the past week.

Adolph Hohl, of Rockford, was transacting business in Delano on Saturday.

B. Resler, of Minneapolis, was in town Wednesday. He speaks of buying property here.

Mrs. S. A. Thompson, of St. Paul, is visiting her daughter Mrs. Elmer Babb of this place.

Mr. Taylor was a caller on Wednesday, he is traveling in the interest of the Minneapolis Journal.

Presiding Elder Chaffee, of the Minneapolis district passed through town on his way to Watertown.

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor,
ARTHUR E. POWELL, Assis't.

Owing to teachers examination there was no school in the High School room last Friday, and consequently there was no meeting of the Senate, but the Senators being obliged to keep quiet so long, it is expected that the debate will be more interesting than ever this week. (Balance crowded out.)

County Cullings.

Maple Lake is becoming the best advertised town in the county though it has no paper at home. This week there is a fire and a murder, reported.

W. E. Culkin will furnish admission tickets for the McKinlev lecture to all desiring them. The lecture will be in Minneapolis March 28, at 8 P. M.

Joseph Reems, of Frankfort has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of L. W. Haefer, on the Board of County Commissioners. A good selection.

The Eagle accuses Frank Gorman of "hustling" about to get a county commissioner appointed before the spring elections. Frank reads the GAZETTE and probably got his cue therefrom. There could be no reason for waiting. Good for hustling Frank.

It seems as if Prof. J. A. Wharton of Buffalo is allowing people to go in ignorance of his "real reasons" for changing his political principles a good while. Possibly he has had another flop by this time. Good PRINCIPLES are usually as hard to flop as are good PRINCIPALS.

A man supposed to be Arthur Wright, from a letter written by his mother, found on the body, of Kuiron, Neb., was found dead on the track at Maple Lake. It is thought he was killed and the body placed on the track in order to cover the crime. Such cases should be thoroughly looked after. There are too many of them.

Among Our Exchanges.

Scheig who is now in Stillwater claims to have stolen $123,000 from the bank in which he was employed. A bank run as loosely as that should have its charter revoked and made to stop doing business.—St. Peter Herald.

The binding over of the effigy hangers of Nebraska City to the district court will tend to discourage irresponsible parties from similar amusement in the future. Why would it not be a pretty good thing to try the same medicine on the newspaper caricturists. Hanging in effegy is proclaiming one's merits besides some of the vile illustrations in many of the reputable papers.—Weepingwater (Neb.) Republican.

At a meeting held at the Mooers Prairie church March 1st, the following Resolution was unanamously adopted by a standing vote:

Resolved, That we the citizens of Stockholm and patronizers of Cokato business enterprise, earnestly oppose the granting of liquor license in the village of Cokato as it is detrimental to morality and disrespectable to the Skandinavians and all decent people. —Cokato Commoner.

"Shon my son," said a worthy German emigrant to his hopeful heir of ten years, whom he had overheard using profane language—"Shon, my son, come here, and I vill dell you a liddle stories. Now my son, shall it be a drue stories, or a makes-beheve?" "Oh, a true story of course," answered Jonn. "Ferry well den. Dere vas vonce a goot, nice oldt shentleman (shoost like me.) ### SENSIBLE HINTS.

Don't complain
About the weather
For easier 'tis, you'll find,
To make your mind to weather
Than weather to your mind.

Don't complain
About "the sermon"
And show your lack of wit,
For, like a boot, a sermon hurts,
The closer it doth fit.

Don't complain
About your neighbor,
For in your neighbor's view
His neighbor is not faultless—
That neighbor being you.

THE Scientific American says not nearly so many foreigners visited the world's fair at Chicago as were expected.

EGGS and cheese shipped from Australia to England are said to have arrived in prime condition. If the Australians can hit upon a plan to preserve their rabbits until they arrive in England they will be striking a bigger blow at the United States producers of meats.

IN an exhaustive article on the successor of Pope Leo, who it is expected will before long have to be chosen, the Pioneer Press says the "question is narrowed down to the choice between a distinctively Italian non-conciliatory pontiff as Leo's successor and a foreigner, who will represent a conciliatory policy, while resenting dictation by the triple alliance and the domination of the state. In this view the approaching consistory must be regarded as one of the most important in the history of the church of Rome."

THE Pollard-Brickinridge trial continues to drag its weary length along in Washington, and furnish columns of reading matter for such papers as will dish up food of that kind for its readers. Miss Pollard don't deny having sinned, neither does Mr. Breckinridge. Kentucky Presbyterian churches are announcing that his name was only allowen to remain on the list of members on account of the memory of his father. He having become better known to the country than his father they will now doubtless allow him to drop off. But how about his bosom friend the New York preacher who secretly married him to another woman while he was so interested in Miss Pollard?

Cooked Dunn.

People generally throughout the state had come to look upon Bob Dunn as the man who started the pine land investigation; who scented the game, followed the trail and aided in running down the game. And to look upon him as a probable candidate of his party for state auditor. But this week's Mille Lac County Times contains an article by N. M. Cook calculated to take the wind out of the sails of the aspirant for Land Commissioner Bierman's old shoes the article is a letter to brothers and friends of North Star L. O. L. No. 233. The writer says: "It is probably known to very few outside of our lodge that we were the investigators of the celebrated instigation, of the C. A. Smith & Co. school timbear deal. Our records show that in Feb. 1893 we appointed a committee consisting of Brothers J. B. Faltz, W. L. McCullum and James P. Mitchell, to furnish the facts in the matter to Hon. R. C. Dunn and urge an investigation by the Legislature. How tireless Mr. Dunn was in the discharge of his duty is a matter of public record. The first practical benefit of these labors begun by this lodge is that a few days ago this lumber firm paid to the state of Minnesota for her school fund $10,800. The next and greater result is that it has shut off pine land theiving, and will save us hundreds of thousands of dollars on timber to be sold in the future. This one act of ours proves the error of the impression held by many people that Orangeism is a menace to good government. It shows further that it is always the supporter of peaceful and loyal government where it exists." Who would have thought it? Verily "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

LATER.—We are in receipt of a letter from C. H. Warner, editor of the Times, asking us not to notice the above article, as it was a mistake from beginning to end, that is the part in regard to pine land investivations and was inserted during his absence.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 16, 1894.

Well, the expected has happened. The Senate has passed the Bland bill for the coinage of the seigniorage in the Treasury, without amendment, and the measure is now in the hands of President Cleveland. It was well known that when this matter was first broached the President thought it an unwise step to take and so stated to members of Congress, but he has been careful to express no opinion since the bill has been pending in Congress, and now those who are usually well informed express the belief that the President will, in deference to the large number of democrats who voted for the bill in both House and Senate, allow the bill to become a law without his signature, thus giving him the benefit of the doubt in his mind as to the wisdom of the bill.

The democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee had to resort to the very unusual expedient of asking the committee to adopt a resolution pledging each member to secrecy while the tariff bill is under consideration before they could stop the making public by the republican Senators of everything said and done at the committee meetings. Since the adoption of that resolution very little has leaked out of the committee room. The democrats on the committee wish in accordance with Senatorial custom, to reach an agreement with the republicans on the committee as to when the bill shall be reported and when the Senate shall begin its consideration. This they have up to this time been unable to do, owing to the unresponsible demands of the republicans who acted as though they represented the majority instead of the minority. The democrats will wait until next week and if the republicans continue obstinate will then report the bill and make their own arrangements as to when the debate shall begin. The democrats on the committee are still confident that the bill will become a law by June 30.

It may be necessary to change the wording of the clause of the tariff bill which repeals the reciprocity law, on account of the marked difference among democratic Senators as to what would be the effect if the bill becomes a law; while Senators Vest, Caffrey and others say that the repeal of the law will abrogate the treaties. This is a very serious question to the sugar makers; also in its effect upon the revenue expected from the tariff bill, inasmuch as about two-thirds of the foreign sugar that we use will come in free, regardless of the duty imposed by the tariff bill, if the treaties now in existence, including that with Hawaii, are to continue in force. The Senate Finance committee has inserted a clause in the tariff bill providing for the abrogation of the treaty with Hawaii, but it will be opposed by democratic Senators and it is by no means certain that it will be in the bill when it is passed.

Representative Tucker, of Virginia, is happy. His joint resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution authorizing the election of Senators by direct vote of the people will be favorably reported to the House.

Speaker Crisp has promised to recognize Delegate Joseph next Monday for the purpose of calling up the bill for the admission of New Mexico as a State. The republicans are opposed to the bill and will break a quorum if it is in their power, in order to prevent its passage. Efforts are now being made to have a quorum of democrats present when the bill is called. If they are successful there is no doubt of the passage of the bill, as it will receive the vote of every democrat present.

Secretary Herbert welcomes the opportunity given him by the House to effectually lay before that body and the country all of the facts connected with the fine imposed upon the Carnegie steel company because of its failure to keep the armor plates it made for the government up to the highest possible standard of quality. The facts are all creditable to Secretary Herbert and to President Cleveland who stood behind him. There is a popular misapprehension concerning those armor plates which caused the contractors to be fined. They were not defective. They all came within the contract requirements, but they were below the best standard that the contractors could produce; hence the fine.

The sensation lovers are enjoying the testimony in the Pollard-Breckenridge case, now being tried here, but thanks to Judge Bradley who is presiding over the court, the women are excluded from the court room and have to get the testimony from the newspapers. It is a dirty mess which should never have been carried into court.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

Neal Dow.

Next Tuesday, March 20, is General Neal Dow's ninetieth birthday. It is fitting that the day should be celebrated throughout the world by the friends of temperance and prohibition.

Probably no man living has done more for prohibition than has General Neal Dow. For more than sixty years he has been the most prominent man in his own state and to him more than to any one else is Maine indebted for the fame and popularity it enjovs through its prohibitory law. The wonderful influence which this man, almost singlehanded, exerted in his native state for a good cause shows what intense earnestness combined with courage and ability can do.

When Neal Dow was a young man Maine was considered one of the poorest states in the Union. He saw the tremendous waste caused by the liquor traffic and rightly concluded that if the manufacture of liquor could be prohibited the state would speedily be changed from one of the poorest to one of the richest members of the Union. At that time liquor shops were more common in the cities and towns of Maine than they are today in Illinois and other license states. The smallest hamlet was not overlooked by the men who made their living from the sale of rum. Distilleries were numerous and the black smoke of these manufactories of poison could be seen polluting the atmosphere of every valley.

A change took place and to Neal Dow is properly given the credit and honor of that magic change. He formed a bill prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor in 1851. It was presented to the legislature by Mr. Dow in person in manuscript form. The committee recommended its enactment by unanimons vote and refused to make any change in the bill as written by Mayor Dow. The vote in the senate was 18 to 10 and in the house 86 to 40, and it was promptly signed by the governor. From its presentation to its adoption was less than 48 hours and suddenly Maine stood before the world as the pioneer in a great forward movement which was to mean salvation and happiness to millions of human beings.

Do not wonder therefore if prohibitionists honor their champion and leader and celebrate his ninetieth birthday. They love Neal Dow and take delight in rejoicing with him in reaching this remarkable age with his natural force still vigorous, his intellect keen, his spirit enthusiastic, his love of mankind undiminished and his opposition to the demon of drink and the drink traffic as pronounced as ever.

A Unique Reference Work.

A work that is really new, and unlike any other, is the Nutshell Cyclopedia. It is not intended to take the place of any other general coclopedia, but to supplement every other, and whatever other you have you will probably want the Nutshell, and if you have no other you will surely want it. It treats only live subjects, the facts concerning which are constantly changing, and the latest information concerning which is important. Probably three-fourths of its contents will be found in no other cyclopedia, because the occurances, and facts described are of later date than the publication of any other cyclopedia. Though the entire work will comprise probably 2,500 pages, it is sold at a price so low that anyone can afford it, ranging from $1.75 for the complete work in Monthly Parts, to $3.20 for the same in four volumes, half morocco binding. The issue before us covers such important subject as Coinage, Colorado, Columbian Celebrations and Expositions, Commerce and Crops, bringing statistics down to 1894 (mostly a year later than to be found in any of the annuals) Congress, with list of the members, Connecticut, and so on. For sample Monthly Part send 4 cents postage to John B. Allen, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

CORRESPONENCE

HENRY LAKE ITEMS.

Miss Ida Anderson has returned from Minneapolis.

West Pugh, of Middleville, was a Henry Lake visitor Sunday.

Alfred McCay, of Kingston, is the guest of R. A. McCay.

J. O. Rice intends moving to Kingston this week.

Miss Bessie Bottomly has been engaged to teach the summer term of school in district 110.

T. J. Terry visited the city of Waverly Saturday and gazed on the wonderful sites.

Miss Tena Robinson, of Middleville, will teach the summer term of school in the Boam district.

Some of the Henry Lake girls say, 'this is a splendid spring to catch suckers, for they swim in very shallow water."

The young Widow Berg returned to Minneapolis last week and John Johnson is seen wandering about like a lost gander without a mate.

Mr. J. O. Terry and daughter, of Victor, spent Sunday with friends in this vicinity

Elmer Bawman, who had his leg broken in two places a short time ago is improving nicely.

Mrs. Hallbeck and son Al. departed for their home in Mindeapolis Monday after a visit of three months with friends of this neighborhood.

Quite a number of young people of this locality attended the taffy pulling at H. Ferrell's Friday evening and all report having had an excellent time.

A. March, who married the Widow Anderson a short time ago has left her on account of her not making him a deed to the farm that she owned previous to their marriage.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

It seems we are bound to have an early spring. The song of the Robin and whistle of the quail are strong indications of spring.

It is thought the sugar season will not be so good as last year.

Albert Strotron had a barn raising last Saturday.

Our roads in the country are not very good at this time.

O. Styner is sawing logs but expects to finish soon. B. P. Hosington has finished up his mill yard of logs.

Last week Armstrong had a moving bee, some four or five families were on the move.

Mr. Editor, can you tell me how many different kinds of sociables there are by name? I can count up 8 or 10 but hardly think that completes the list. The last one I can think of is Mother Goose.

Some people are trying to make themselves believe times are improving; but we farmers can't see it. A good many of the farmers are wanting to sow the blue stem wheat this spring. They think the fife has run out.

B. R. Hoisington and wife drove to Minneapolis last week.

Hennepin county people are beginning to talk up their candidates for county officers. It seems to me a little premature but then Hennepin is most always in the lead.

Farmers have not seeded any yet. Think we must have a line storm before we get any settled weather.

O. Styner's saw mill burned Monday night. We hear he will re-build.

Prof. Kennedy Heard From.

The Buffalo Gazette and Delano Eagle come to hand regularly every week, and I must say that words are inadequate to express the mingled pleasure and grief I have experienced on perusing their columns since I began my school work here on the 18th of last September. I am so well acquainted with the people of western Hennepin and eastern Wright county that every item of news concerning them is of the greatest interest to me.

John McGary's proposition that these two sections be organized into a county, with Delano for the county seat, is a wise one, and it seems to me should meet the hearty approval of every tax payer, especially on the Hennepin side, where our people have for years been bled unmercifully for the benefit of the city of Minneapolis.

And I would suggest that the new municipality be called McGary county, in honor of its projector. The First step, too, it seems to me, toward effecting this new territorial organization, should be the election of an assemblyman from each section of country concerned, without regard to political party affiliations, to champion the project in the next legislature. It occurs to me that Hon. John H. Mc Gary himself would be just the man for this place. But some may say that I have nominated him because he is a democrat, not so. I suggest his name because I know he possesses the ability requisite in one to whom the people would care to entrust their legislative interests and would be untiring in his efforts to effect the necessary legislation anent the organization of our new county. However, western Hennepin has no dearth of material to select good legislators from.

There is my genial friend George Florida, whose name and fame as a good citizen and a prince of good fellows are familiar to every man, woman and child along the Crow River for many miles. The highest ambition of his life, as it has seemed to me,—the noblest, too, that any man can possess,—has ever been to make his good mother and sisters comfortable and happy, without a thought for himself. In this he has been most successful. Why would not such a man make a good legislator, possessing as he does, in addition to the sterling qualities of mind and heart already enumerated, an extraordinary flow of language and an intimate acquaintance with influential people throughout the entire state both of which would be most potent in the work of effecting the desired legislation? But there are my German friends also in the town of Greenwood; who following the lead of Adam Hohenstein, Sr., "the grand old man" of the Crow River valley came, almost penniless into the deep forest at an early day, and, the A. P. A. assertions to the contrary notwithstanding, have added immensly to the wealth and well being of our country. No true patriot can travel along the well worked roads leading into the flourishing German village of Hanover and see the substantial homes and well tilled fields of these people in the town of Greenwood, where but thirty years ago stood the forest primeval, almost impenetrable for its heavy growth of timber and infested by thousands of Indian savages, whose depridations on the lives and property of the pioneers of those days are now chronicled on the pages of our country's history, without thanking God for such an accession to our population.

Before the era of railroads and steamboats, Henry Clay, on one of his journeys to Washington on horseback, suddenly drew his rein on the summit of the Alleghany mountains, and looking far to the eastward, tarried long with his hand to his ear in a listening attitude. And when asked what he heard, he replied: "I am listening to the tramp of the coming millions". He prophesied that our brothers from eastern lands would come like an army with banners and subdue the mighty forests of the west and ere the dawn of another century make the hills and valleys of the Louisiana wilderness blossom like the rose. The illustrious statesman's prophesy has been fulfilled, but nowhere more truly than in Greenwood where the sturdy sons of the Fatherland have reared their homes.

At the time of the Indian outbreak, I will say for the benefit of the few of your readers in western Hennepin and eastern Wright who are not already cognizant of it, most of the Greenwood settlers fled, but brave old Adam Hohenstein stood his ground alone and went ahead with his farming operations as unconcernedly as he does now in the midst of an intelligent and civilized community. But when Uncle Sam needed his services to aid in putting down the rebellion, he shouldered his musket, and leaving his home and young wife, went forth to fight his country's battles with a goodly number of his German neighbors. I know Adam would rather sit beneath his good wife's blooming oleanders and pass the long winter evenings reading, and talking with the school teacher, as he did with me several years ago, than be domiciled in the Merchants Hotel, St. Paul, during a long session of the legislature in the company of scheming politicians with axes to grind. But he is a man who would sacrifice any personal comfort to serve his fellow men. Why would he not make a good legislator? But it does not matter who is chosen to represent western Hennepin, so long as he is a good and capable man. Of such men western Hennepin has no lack. Let Mr. McGary's project of forming a new county be carried out.

I am grieved to learn of Mr. L. W. Haefer's death. He was a royal gentleman and an upright citizen whom the community can ill afford to lose. I was well acquainted with the family. The girls are older than the boys and have been very helpful to their father and mother in conducting the extensive business in which they have been engaged for many years at Hanover. Mr. Haefer, though not so well-to-do as at the time of his death, took care to educate his girls. The little boys were in school the year I lived at Hanover, and the two girls and Mr. Haefer conducted the entire business. Mr. Haefer invited me to take my Christmas dinner at his house. As we sat at the table I observed that every member of the family was apparently in full health, and I never dreamed that death would enter that family so soon. But Mr. Haefer's demise only serves to remind us that "in the midst of life we are in death." His obituary in the Eagle states that he joined the Catholic Church before he died. This must be a consoling fact, not only to his bereaved family, but to all his Christian friends, who are legion. It shows that he had thought for his soul's salvation and prepared to meet his Maker. We might all emulate his example in this with immeasurable profit.

It seems incredible that Hanover will see Louis Haefer no more. But such is life. We know not what a day may bring forth. So, like our departed friend, let us too be ready.

The Rockford correspondent states that there has been some "wild talk" in that burg the past week about school matters and in the same breath assures us that the patrons are unanimous in asserting that the school is better than it has been for several years back. I am acquainted with the present principal of the Rockford school, and have always held him in high esteem as a teacher and a gentleman. But as he is only a young man, almost a boy, and as his immediate predecessor was no less a person than Mrs. A. S. Beede, who has long been known as one of the very best teachers in the state. I venture to say that the Rockford correspondent's statement that the school is better than ever before will seem a little extravagant to those who are cognizant of Mrs. Beede's merits as a teacher, especially since it is made in the same breath with another assertion to the effect that there is "wild talk" about the school at the present time. In selecting the present incumbent to succeed Mrs. Beede as principal of the Rockford school, the board, in my judgment, (and I dare say I am voicing the sentiment of every one who is competent to judge) made the best possible selection; and notwithstanding the report about the "wild talk", I am confident that he is making a success of it. A correspondent who reports "wild talk" about a school leaves himself in a position to be suspected of being no friend of the teacher, no matter what his pretentions may be, and is not the kind of a correspondent who does the community where he lives any good.

I had occasion a little more than a year ago to criticise the action of the Delano school board in a matter that was being already commented upon by the press of the state; but I did it over my own signature and couched what I had to say in language that would admit of no ambiguous interpretation. The board wisely abolished the rule requiring the pupils to pay for books damaged in their possession. Mr. Gutzweller's argument that my logic in the matter was not sound because I was teaching in a "one-story building" did not seem to go with his associates on the board, and the rule was abolished. The Eagle has, through its correspondents, and also editorially, tried to cast aspersions upon my character several times since. I have never been able to ascertain why they hold such a grudge against me, except, as insinuated in their editorial, it was rather presumptious in me to criticise the Delano school board while I was teaching in a one-story school-house.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon geuing the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

AT Saltsburg, Austria, a man was recently liberated who had been kept a prisoner for fifteen years, during which he never saw a human face.

ACCORDING to recent statistics it takes 8,614,000,000 gallons of beer annually to supply the demand. Germany makes 1,222,000,000 gallons, and Uncle Sam 1,000,000,000 gallons.

THERE are about seventeen million milch cows in the United States, and yet we have to depend upon the product of the hog for our dairy butter. Are the cows attending strictly to their business?

PHYSICIANS say that persons struck by lightning can often be restored by artificial respiration. If natural respiration can be resorted to, however, the chances of recovery will be greatly improved.

A LADY died in California the other day from glanders, caused by a diseased horse sneezing in her face. It is very unmannerly to sneeze in a lady's face, and the horse ought to have known better.

JOHN PALMER, inventor of the railway check system, began life as a violinist for small country jollifications. He gave numbered checks for coats and hats, and subsequently applied his idea to railway luggage.

AMONG the most astonishing freaks of tornadoes are the stripping of feathers from fowls and of clothing from persons. As these effects cannot be produced by the wind they are ascribed to electricity.

BLONDE hair is to be fashionable again this spring and bangs are going out. On very high foreheads a tiny golden curl will take the place of the bang. For obvious reasons there will not be very many of those curls.

THE town treasurer of Middleboro, Mass., has discovered $300,000 in the treasury which he cannot account for. It will be necessary to coin a new word for his case. If the money had been missing from the treasury it would have been a shortage. The present discrepancy must then be a longage.

A FRENCH statistician estimates that if the past rate of decrease in the height of the human race continues, the average man in the year 4000 will be a trifle less than 15 inches in heignt. Perhaps he is right. At any rate, most men in the present generation have at times found themselves painfully short.

AN Oregon coroner's jury returned a verdict of "died of consumption" on the body of a man who had committed suicide by abstaining from food for thirty days. A verdict of "died from lack of consumption" would seem to fit the case more closely than the one rendered.

MRS. FREDERICK VANDERBILT devotes a generous part of her income to starting young girls in business. Through the pastors of foreign mission churches in remote corners of New York she hears of girls of ability who require only a start in life to render themselves honorably self-supporting. She usually gives each girl so selected $500. At least ten young women every year are thus provided for by Mrs. Vanderbilt. The money is always considered as a loan.

ACCORDING to a late report of the director of the mint, 19,570 silver dollars with the date 1804 were coined during that year. To-day less than a dozen of them are known to be in existence and each is worth a small fortune. There were 150,000 half dollars coined in the same year; at present but one is known. What ever became of the silver coinage of that year is one of the unsolved governmental mysteries. Thirty-two years later there were only 1,000 of the 1856 dollar pieces coined. Yet anyone who has five dollars to invest can get one of them for a pocket piece. A cool $1,000 would not buy an 1804.

DR. SEWARD WEBB, president of the Wagner Palace Car company, has the largest private park in the United States, if not in the world. The doctor's modest "cottage" is 200 feet long by 80 wide, and is surrounded by a spacious veranda. He makes his regular home at Shelbourne, Vt., on the shores of Lake Champlain, where he has an estate of about 4,000 acres. FRANCIS EDWIN BROWNELL, a man whose name became a historic one during the rebellion, died in Washington recently, aged 53 years. For some years Mr. Brownell has been a clerk in the pension office there. Mr. Brownell gained his fame in the earliest days of the civil war by avenging the assassination at Alexandria, Va., of Col. E. E. Ellsworth, the famous commander of the Ellsworth zouaves. The incident created a furore at the north and fanned into intensity the blaze of patriotism then sweeping over the land. Brownell was awarded a medal of honor by congress for his act.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, March 14.—In the senate the entire time was occupied in discussing the Bland seigniorage bill. A motion to reconsider in order that the bill might be opened to amendment was defeated. In the house the sundry civil appropriation bill was further considered, but no action was taken. A bill was introduced providing that no more than two persons shall be appointed receivers for any corporation.

THURSDAY, March 15.—The Bland silver seigniorage bill was passed in the senate by a vote of 44 to 31. The bill now only lacks the president's signature to become a law. A bill was also passed authorizing the building of a bridge across the Missouri river near Sioux City, Ia. In the house a bill was introduced to authorize managers of soldiers' homes to employ medical officers other than soldiers disabled in the service, as the law now requires. The sundry civil bill was further considered.

FRIDAY March 16.—The senate was not in session to-day. In the house the army appropriation bill ($23,677,284) was reported. Mr. Cummings (N. Y.) introduced five bills affecting the administration of naval affairs. The sundry civil appropriation bill was further considered.

SATURDAY, March 17.—No session was held in the senate. In the house Mr. Curtis introduced a bill to restrict immigration, saying he wanted to keep land for unborn Americans. A resolution authorizing the enlisted men of the army and navy to wear a badge on public occasions was adopted. The sundry civil bill was further considered, and eulogies were delivered on the late Congressman Enochs, of Ohio.

MONDAY, March 19.—There was no important business transacted in the senate, the entire day being consumed in the consideration of bills on the calendar, and most of these were measures of small importance. The house spent the day in discussing the sundry civil bill. The last paragraph was considered, but no defiuite action was taken on any item.

TO BE HELD IN CHECK.

A Watchful Eye Being Kept on the Movements of Coxey's Army.

MASSILLON, O., March 21.—In the center of the dark public square, beside the flaring light of a gasoline torchlight, Lieut. Carl Browne stood up and introduced the "great unknown" to the crowd below him. The members of the commonweal sent up a shout of joy and the stranger bowed and began his address. He spoke in a clear, loud voice with a slight German accent, and the words recalled the days of excitement before the Haymarket riot when Chicago was pulsing with the bitter invective of anarchist orators. He spoke in the course of his speech of having been in Chicago and told of his work for humanity. Said he:

"The people must rise up and crush with one terrible blow the outrages from which they have suffered for so many years. The rich must be brought low and the poor receive their just rights. What a great privilege it is to be here in the incipiency of the movement of this grand undertaking. It is like a little stream. Soon it will swell into a river and will roll into Washington with all the might and power of the Amazon. As Christ appeared in the world and gathered his disciples together, so do Brother Coxey, the embodiment of Christ, and Brother Browne, one of His disciples, and others, ready to complete the twelve, and they together will assemble the great army of converts that next Sunday will start the mighty march that will shake the very centers of these United States."

All Stark county is awakening to a genuine dread of the approaching reign of Coxeyism. Towns lying along the proposed line of march of the commonweal are actively engaged in organizing deputy sheriff reception committees for the nondescript peace army and its motley company of leaders. At Canton, the county seat of Stark county, where the army will stop during the first night after leaving this city, the feeling of apprehension is running especially high. Sheriff Hiram Doll has already made arrangements to call out companies "F," "L" and "I" of the Eighth Ohio national guard. He held a secret conference with Capts. W. H. Frease, H. S. Smart and C. R. Miller, of Canton, and agreed that each of the 150 members of the three companies should be formally sworn as a deputy sheriff.

The plan of proceedings is simple but the sheriff thinks it will prove effective. Next Sunday night, after the army begins its march, the militiamen, armed with carbines and provided with ten rounds of ammunition, will march in platoon organization from Canton along the state road until they meet Coxey and the commonweal. They will then deploy and attend the peace army into the city, where pickets will be stationed at hailing distances along the streets to prevent any depredations. No effort will be made to prevent Coxey's march or hinder him from holding a mass-meeting on the public square and addressing the crowd on the subject of "Road-Building and Non-Interest-Bearing Bonds."

The sheriff simply wishes to assure himself that the county's peace will not be violated. Capt. Frease came to Massillon this morning and spent the day in investigating the situation, with a view to making a report to the governor. It is not regarded as probable that the companies of the national guard in Akron and Alliance will be ordered out. In addition to the precautions taken by the sheriff of Stark county, Mayor Cassidy, of Canton, is preparing greatly to enlarge the police force of the city.

The chief of police in Pittsburgh has appointed a number of officers to join the army in Massillon and watch its movements and get acquainted with the officers and followers. They will travel incognito. The sheriff of Beaver county, Pa., is taking legal advice and will be ready for action. The sheriff of Fayette county, Pa., says that he will ask for funds to pay a force of special officers who will escort the army through his territory. If that force is not sufficient he will call on the governor for aid.

In the meantime the tramps of the country are slowly but surely drifting toward Massillon. It is now such pleasant weather that they can sleep out of doors or in straw stacks, keeping out of the notice of the authorities. The Pittsburgh train reaching Massillon Sunday evening was stopped four times between stations to let off tramps. Numerous petty cases of thieving have occurred in the city.

Gen. Coxey's wife is much opposed to her husband's enterprise and she has done her best to dissuade him from making any further attempts to carry forward his commonweal scheme. But the general will not be dissuaded.

CAUGHT IN AN AVALANCHE.

Disastrous Result of a Snowslide on Great Northern Railway.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 21.—A report has been received that the Great Northern freight train which left Snohomish Saturday night was struck by a snowslide near Skokomish and swept over an 150-foot embankment. Six men perished with it. The train is said to have gone entirely out of sight under the slide in the valley. The local officers of the road claim to know nothing of it, and they express doubt as to the truth of the report. The west-bound passenger train was delayed by a snowslide and bowlders on the track near Wellington. The bowlders were so large that they had to be blasted away. All attempts to get information by wire from near the scene of the wreck have failed.

No Work for Girls.

WOBURN, Mass., March 21.—The George A. Simonds shoe factory has started up after a brief shut-down, following the strike of girl employes, and the managers announce that in the future girls will not be given employment. Fifteen men went to work in the girls' places and sixty more will be engaged. The girls struck because of a 10 per cent. reduction in wages.

Sale of a Lead Mine.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, March 21.—The Poorman lead mine in the Cœur d'Alene district has been bought by English capitalists for half a million dollars.

Fatherless Boys Become Insane.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 21.—Alexander J. McDonnld died suddenly last Wednesday of heart disease. Saturday Daniel J. McDonald, a son, became violently insane, and now another son, Frank, is insane. Both boys are being guarded by the police.

Death of a Millionaire.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 21.—Hoadley B. Ives, the millionaire of this city who succumbed to softening of the brain a week ago, is dead. Mr. Ives never took a vacation or provided himself more than the commonest necessities of life.

SPURIOUS COINS.

Counterfeiters at Omaha Issue 500,000 Bogus Dollars.

OMAHA, Neb., March 21.—Half a million perfect silver dollars in circulation, unauthorized by the government, is the subject over which many detectives and Omaha bankers are disturbed. Last week the headquarters of the United States secret service bureau at Des Moines was combined with the Omaha station and all the special agents in both are in a hot chase after two gangs of counterfeiters who are flooding this city with the product of their work. It has been necessary to secure reinforcements and four special agents of the government, in addition to Marshal White's forces, have been cooperating with the division chief.

A good clew to one gang has been found and some arrests will be made within a few days; in all probability. This latter clique has been making a clumsy imitation of silver half dollars, which indicates that its members are amateurs in the business. But the other gang is regarded as a professional one, and its scheme is one of money making magnitude. It has practically established a little mint in Omaha right under the nose of Uncle Sam, and is working so smoothly with such clever product that the secret service men are mystified as well as amazed at the extent to which this monetary deception has been practiced.

For months Omaha and vicinity have been the hotbed of a smooth crowd of "minters." They have coined, so it is said, $500,000 or more of dollars which contain the same amount of silver and alloy placed in the regular dollar by the government mints. These men have simply started an opposition to the government and their money cannot be detected from the genuine. They are making money figuratively and literally.

It is said they realize fifty-one cents profit on every dollar they turn out. So cleverly have they worked that the cash drawers and banks of this city, Council Bluffs, South Omaha and elsewhere have been receptacles for thousands of these home-made dollars. It is a "seigniorage" on the sly, and has finally attracted the attention of the government.

The purchase of several thousand dollars' worth of silver at the Grant smelter in Omaha weekly by persons unknown to the trade gave the authorities the first clew to the affair. The dollars are exactly like those coined by the United States mint.

A SCORE KILLED.

At Least Twenty Lives Lost During the Cyclone in Texas.

DALLAS, Tex., March 21.—The storms which swept over northern Texas Saturday, Sunday and Sunday night were unparalled in severity. The death roll will reach twenty and the list of wounded over 100. Mayor Barry has called upon the citizens for contributions to relieve the sufferers, many of whom have been ruined and mourn the loss of members of their families.

NACOGDOCHES, Tex., March 21.—Sunday evening a cyclone passed through this county, and Monday morning another tornado traversed a wide scope of country. Every house of the Whitaker negro colony was blown away and a number of persons were severely hurt. In the Grimes neighborhood, 8 miles from here, there is not a fence or a house left. Dan Grimes was killed and his wife, who was confined to her bed, received fatal injuries.

Monday morning a cyclone began operations 2 miles east of here, wrecking all the houses in the McCuiston mill settlement. The corpse of a young woman, who died Sunday night, was mangled beyond recognition. Many inmates of the houses were fatally injured. "Jake" Ballinger, an old blind man, was killed by flying timbers.

A MICHIGAN CLOUDBURST.

The Village of Bear Lake, Near Kalamazoo, Inundated.

BEAR LAKE, Mich., March 21.—A tremendous cloudburst struck Bear Lake Saturday afternoon. The village is situated on the northern slope of a large hill, and down this hill the water began to rush at a terrific rate, soon rising to a depth of 3 feet in the streets. Immediately after a clap of thunder a great sheet of water descended. It burst in windows and flooded houses, the mud and water being 4 feet deep. No lives were lost, but the town is the most disconsolate looking place imaginable. Trees, sidewalks and fences were destroyed, and the first floor of every house is a place of mud and mire.

DEATH OF A VETERAN.

Commodore Whiting, of the Navy, Passes Away.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Commodore William D. Whiting, retired, of the United States navy, died on Monday. Death was the indirect result of being run over by a cab at Broadway and Thirty-fourth street last January. The shock of the accident developed into Bright's disease, the cause of death. Commodore Whiting was retired from the navy in 1881 on account of failing eyesight. He afterwards became almost totally blind. The commodore was one of the officers connected with Perry's expedition to Japan, and it was said that he was the first officer in the fleet to set foot on Japanese soil. He was born in 1824.

Forest Fires in Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, March 21.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Charleston, Kan., says the forest fires which have been raging on Connelton mountain for several days past continue unabated, and that twenty-five families have been reduced to destitution. No steps have yet been taken to stop the configration.

Woman Shot at Beardstown, Ill.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., March 21.—Miss Lizzie Church was shot and instantly killed here by Balt Morrissey at 7 o'clock Monday evening. Morrissey escaped after the shooting.

Have Been Married Fifty Years.

MUNCIE, Ind., March 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Mong celebrated their golden wedding aaniversary Monday in an appropriate manner with all the members of their family present. Mr. Mong is proprietor of a large planing mill in Muncie and has lived here many years.

Mangled in a Wheat Conveyor.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., March 21.—Will Hyland, a young man employed as oiler in the elevator of the Grand Republic mill, was killed in a spiral wheat conveyor. His body was horribly mangled.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Wards of the State.

The quarterly statement of the state correctional and charitable institutions has been received from the printer by Secretary Hart. The statement covers the six months from Aug. 1, 1893, to Jan. 31, 1894. The summary shows the expenditures for the year ending July 31, 1893, to have been less than those of 1892, but not less than those of ony preceding year, the total being $1,055,000. The prison census, taken Dec. 31, 1893, shows a total of 1,111. This includes 190 prisoners held for trial, 533 in prison or reformatory, and 388 in jails and workhouses. The ratio of prisoners to a million inhabitants was 795 in 1892 and 853 in 1893. A comparative statement of population of state institutions for seven years shows a yearly increase ranging from 175 in 1893 to 565 in 1894. The figures are taken on Jan. 31.

Masons Win.

Before Probate Judge Olivier at St. Paul there was an interesting contest over a legacy of $10,000 bequeathed to the St. Paul Masonic Buildihg association by the late Commodore Kittson, who was a prominent member of the Masonic order. Objection was made to the payment of the legacy on grounds that there is no such society as the St. Paul Masonic Building association. It was shown, however, that there is a St. Paul Masonic Temple association, and it was argued that the commodore had it in mind when he made the will and made a slight error in the name. The judge decided in favor of the association.

Another Coal Deposit.

It is reported that coal has been discovered in Lincoln county, between Lake Benton and Tyler. This at least seems to be true, that the owner of section 36 of that county sold his land the other day to outside parties for a high price, he not knowing at the time that there was any word of coal there. J. R. Forbes, of Island Lake, Lyon county, a young farmer lately from Scotland, has written the McKinleys, offering to pay them any reasonable sum if they will go to Island Lake and investigate the matter.

Sad Accident.

The daughter of C. M. Houston, a wealthy farmer living four miles west of Winnebago City, was married recently, and as they were enjoying their wedding supper they were disturbed by a crowd of boys who came prepared to give them an all night entertainment. Houston stepped to the door and invited them in, when some one in the crowd fired a revolver, and Houston dropped dead. He was troubled with heart disease, and the sudden scare killed him.

Prison Shoes.

Arrangements for the manufacture of boots and shoes at the Stillwater prison are progressing favorably, and the new industry, which it is calculated will give employment to the idle inmates, will probably be inaugurated some time the latter part of April. At no time in the history of the prison has the population been so large as at the present time, and this fact induced the board to adopt some new plan which it is calculated will provide work for those who are now doing odd jobs.

The New County.

The committee for the new county had a special meeting at Fairfax. As the petition sent to the secretary of state by parties from Gibbon failed, for various reasons, to be legal, it was agreed to circulate a new petition. The same will change the boundary lines of the proposed new county by leaving out West Newton and Ridgely townships of Nicollet county; Bismarck and Cornish of Sibley county, and taking in additional territory from Renville county.

Soldiers' Home.

Secretary Beebe, of the Soldiers' Home, has issued his monthly report for February, showing expenditures as follows: Paid for home support, $5,248.52; soldiers' relief, $4,664.25; home repairs, $53.20. There are now on the books for temporary relief, 1,860 families. Of these, three receive $15 per month; one, $14; two, $12; one, $11; 10, $10; 218, $8; 13, $7; 292, $6; 127, $5; 149, $4; making a total of 816 families allowed a total of $4,992.

After reading the following letters can any one longer doubt that a trustworthy remedy for that terribly fatal malady, consumption, has at last been found? If these letters had been written by your best known and most esteemed neighbors they could be no more worthy of your confidence than they now are, coming, as they do, from well known, intelligent and trustworthy citizens, who, in their several neighborhoods, enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of all who know them.

K. C. McLin, Esq., of Kempsville, Princess Anne Co., Va., whose portrait heads this article, writes: "When I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I was very low with a cough and at times spit up much blood. I was not able to do the least work, but most of the time was in bed. I was all run-down, very weak, my head was dizzy and I was extremely despondent. The first bottle I took did not seem to do me much good, but I had faith in it and continued using it until I had taken fifteen bottles and now I do not look nor feel like the same man I was one year ago. People are astonished and say, 'well, last year this time I would not have thought that you would be living now.' I can thankfully say I am entirely cured of a disease which, but for your wonderful 'Discovery' would have resulted in my death."

Even when the predisposition to consumption is inherited, it may be cured, as verified by the following from a most truthful and much respected Canadian lady, Mrs. Thomas Vansicklin, of Brighton, Ont. She writes: "I have long felt it my duty to acknowledge to you what Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Pleasant Pellets' have done for me. They almost raised me from the grave. I had three brothers and one sister die of consumption and I was speedily following after them. I had severe cough, pain, copious expectoration and other alarming symptoms and my friends all thought I had but a few months to live. At that time I was persuaded to try the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the first bottle acted like magic. Of course, I continued on with the medicine and as a result I gained rapidly in strength. My friends were astonished. When I commenced the use of your medicines, six years ago, I weighed but 120 pounds and was sinking rapidly. I now weigh 135, and my health continues perfect."

Mrs. Thos. Vansicklin

"Golden Medical Discovery" cures consumption (which is scrofula of the lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating and nutritive properties. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, nasal catarrh, bronchitis, severe coughs, asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

"Golden Medical Discovery" does not make fat people more corpulent, but for thin, pale, puny children, as well as for adults reduced in flesh, from any cause, it is the greatest flesh-builder known to medical science. Nasty cod liver oil and its "emulsions," are not to be compared with it in efficacy. It rapidly builds up the system, and increases the solid flesh and weight of those reduced below the usual standard of health by "wasting diseases."

To brace up the entire system after the grip, pneumonia, fevers, and other prostrating acute diseases; to build up needed flesh and strength, and to restore health and vigor when you feel "run-down" and "used-up" the best thing in the world is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It promotes all the bodily functions, rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the entire system.

A Treatise on Consumption, giving numerous testimonials with phototype, or half-tone, portraits of those cured, numerous references, also containing successful Home Treatment for chronic nasal catarrh, bronchitis, asthma, and kindred diseases, will be mailed by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of six cents in stamps, to pay postage. Or The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1,000 pages, 300 illustrations, mailed for $1.50.

FASHIONS AND FADS.

STREET dresses of Henrietta, cashmere, camel's hair and soft cloths are made up with moire, which is, at the moment, an extremely fashionable fabric.

A PRETTY suggestion for sleeves is a series of ruffles set upon a rather full foundation of the material, or, if two fabrics are used in the dress, the sleeves may be of one material and the ruffles of the other.

A NOVELTY in waist-trimming is a surplice-shaped cape collar. This is very full over the shoulders, crosses from right to left down the front, and either tucks in under the left arm or is fastened with a rosette.

THE EASTER OFFERING.

"LET me the offering bear," she asked.
And on the little face
The earnest wish of her young heart
Laid its own tender grace.

She was the youngest lamb of all
The flock I called my class;
As fair as any Easter bud
Was the wee, winsome lass.

So in her little dimpled hands
I placed our "offering" fair,
Sweet rosebuds, white and pure, and bade
Her to the chancel bear
Those emblems of her precious self,
A bud for Heaven grown,
And destined on some glorious day
To bloom before the Throne.

I watched the little figure speed
Along the marble aisle,
Her eyes like stars, her crimson cheeks
All dimpling with a smile.
I saw her lift her "offering" up,
And then—all joyously—
The baby voice rang out: "Please dive
These flowers to Dod for me;
And tell Him all us little dirls
Send Him our love!" and then,
With happy eyes, my little maid
Came tripping back again.

Content to feel that she had done
With us her little part,
And given, with her sweet "offering,"
Also her precious heart
To the dear Father, for whose sake
The Easter bells so clear
Ring out the tidings: "Christ, once de.d,
Is risen and is here!"

—Mary D. Brine, in Chicago Advance.

An Easter Lesson.

IT was the only child of the stately house who was carried slowly out that autumn day with a wealth of fragrant roses heaped on the lid of the white casket which shut from sight the face of the little lad who so short a time before had been in truth the sunshine of the home. And as the tear-filled eyes of the mother, walking closely behind in her deep mourning, rested on the six little bearers, Ray's Sunday school class, from her heart throbbing in fierce rebellion rose the cry that her lips almost uttered: "The children of other mothers are spared; why should mine be taken?"

MRS. DENBY ENTERED THE BREAKFAST-ROOM.

For Helen Denby was passing under the shadow of her first grief. A bright girlhood, a happy marriage had been hers. From her childhood friends and wealth had softened life's friction, lessened its care, made possible the gratification of its tastes and desires. To these a great, crowning joy had come in her child. From the first hour when she held him in her arms her whole existence had merged in his; her every hope and plan and ambition had been of his future. That he could be taken from her she had not believed till the last breath had fluttered out from the little body. But God had been cruel, the stroke had fallen, Ray had gone, gone beyond her sight, her touch, her care.

Always unconsciously selfish, in a grief as new to her as it was to the first mother of earth, Mrs. Denby felt it impossible that ever anyone had suffered as she did. And though a church member from early girlhood, and believing herself a truly Christian woman, the thought of submitting to God's will, much less of accepting it, was far from her mind. So the autumn and winter passed, and still she kept Ray's hat on the rack where he had hung it, his velocipede in the hall where he had last left it, and his pictured face looking down on her from out a funeral wreath. With the rains of autumn she wept thinking of her darling, so loved and sheltered, lying chill and alone under the beating skies. Through the storms of winter she sat by her fireside and shuddered, her heart going out to the little grave under the folded drifts. Shutting herself up from outside interest and occupation, daily she tore open her grief afresh, day by day she sat and looked not beyond the grave, but into it, shrinking from every child face as if it were a blow, and to all remonstrances of husband and friends made answer: "You can't enter into my sorrow; you don't know what I feel."

But at last the winter was past. The crocus were budding on the lawn, and the Easter lilies in the sunny bay-window were unclosing their white flowers. Spring had come and Easter was at hand. And looking at the lilies Helen Denby could but remember how only a year before Ray had watched their unfolding; and with what eagerness Easter morning he had carried the great sheaf of snowy, fragrant bells for his class table in the Sunday school. Ray had always loved Easter. From the first time, when hardly more than a baby she had taken him to its service, the music, the flowers, the whole atmosphere of the day had appealed to his sensitive responsive nature. That last Easter he had said to her: "Mamma, how beautiful it is!" And in the quiet afternoon, as holding him in her arms she had read to him the wonderful story of the first Easter, he had looked up in her face with bright, brown eyes, eyes that she now felt were already touched with a light not of this world, and exclaimed: "What it must have been to have seen the risen Christ; and to think that some day we too shall see Him!"

And now the lilies were in bloom again; the morrow would usher in the gladness of another Easter; and Ray was in his grave, and the spring grasses were slowing springing over the low mound above which heart and faith found it so hard to rise. Her tears were falling fast, but they did not dim the vision of the face that a year before had smiled at her over the flowers that later were to cheer the sick room of a little classmate. For Ray with all the luxury and fondness that had been lavished on him was a sympathetic, generous little fellow, always ready to share his own good times and abundance with those less fortunate. And especially dear to the frail, delicate child, touched it may be with some faint intuition that this earth life was not to be his for long, had been the circle of his own who had made up his class in the Sunday school.

Mrs. Denby recalled it now, and also with a pang that in all these months she had hardly given a thought to these boys that her own had loved so well, and who had returned his affection and grieved for his loss, nay, more, that she had shunned the sight of every one of them, for were not they spared while Ray was taken? How had it fared with them, she wondered. And with the question came the remembrance that Miss Davis, the teacher, while calling on her but a few weeks before, had remarked that she was on her way to see Sammy Sloan, whose back had been so injured by an accidental fall that it might be months before he would be able to walk without crutches, or come the distance from his home to Sunday school. And to Mrs. Denby's careless comment that she should think he could use a velocipede she had answered that no doubt he could, but that was something his widowed mother, on whose slender resources the necessary expense of his illness had been a heavy drain, was unable to afford. And the thought came to her, with lips that despite her efforts would tremble, "these flowers are for his Sunday-school, and I have just sent his velocipede and some of his books and clothes to Sammy Sloan. I knew you would approve, and I felt that Ray would wish it."

"Dear Helen," said Mr. Denby, "I know what this has cost you, but it will bring a blessing."

"Yes, Henry," she hid her tearful face against his shoulder, "it has already. I see now that my sorrow has made me blindly selfish to the world. Ray's grave filled all my vision; that he was dead was all that I could realize, and so I lost sight of the Easter truth that I hope never to forget again, that the grave is but a sign of the resurrection, and that it is through death that 'in Christ shall all be made alive.'"—Ela Thomas, in Christian at Work.

POCKETS AND ORATORY.

Distress Would Be in the Senate if the Former Were Abolished.

"Do you prefer side or slant or top pockets in your trousers?"

"I don't care, I'm sure. All I want is pockets that I can get my hands into."

This was the conversation I overheard the other day between a tailor and his customer, and I was reminded of it an hour later as I looked down upon the floor of the senate chamber and watched our grave and reverend lawmakers going through their work.

In the middle aisle, carrying on a triangular debate, were Senator Proctor and Senator Gorman, each with his left hand in his trousers pocket, and Senator Allison with both hands similarly encased. They were presently joined by Senator Brice, who had his right hand pocketed, while Senator Lindsay strode from the democratic over to the republican side with both hands in his pockets, almost running into Senator Lodge, who was carrying his in the same way.

I could not help thinking of the old story of Daniel Webster and the button on his jacket, which he always used to twirl while making his best recitations in school. It is said that a little girl who had long stood next to him in his spelling class, and who was ambitious to pass him, contrived one day to snip off this button; and at the next recitation, when Daniel felt for it and found it missing, he was so overcome that he missed the word put to him, and his clever rival went to the head of the class.

Suppose some malicious person bent on destroying the comfort and dignity of the senators should contrive to have the trousers pockets of the senators sewed up over night, what would become of American oratory and legislation the next day?—Kate Field's Washington.

PATTI AS A CHILD.

How She Meant to Get a Beautiful Wax Doll from London.

One day I was sitting on our front stoop with my big wax doll in my arms. I was only allowed to have her to play with when I had been very good indeed, and she was the biggest, most beautiful doll in the neighborhood, or that I had ever seen, even in shop windows. As I sat there Adelina came towards me with her doll in her arms. She stopped and said: "Show me your dolly?" I held her up and expatiated upon her beauties. I confess now that I felt a keen and wicked satisfaction that her doll had only a plaster head, and I knew, from sad experience, that it was the kind that got grimy and had to be washed off with sweet oil occasionally, and very often had a cracked head, and that she was altogether of an inferior class from my dolly. "She's pretty, isn't she?" said Adelina. "She's beautiful," I said, hugging my treasure, for she was my very own child to me. "How much did she cost?" said Adelina. "I don't know," I said; "a lady sent her to me from London. See, her eyes open and shut," and I gave a vigorous yank to the long wire which was concealed under her petticoats. "Show me how her eyes go?" Adelina said. And after opening and shutting those very inexpressive black eyes several times, she handed her back to me and said: "I shall have one like her to-night." My own eyes opened wide at this, and I said: "How will you get her?" "Oh, if Max don't give her to me quick, I'll scream."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Her Stratagem.

She met him at the door with a smile and a hug that brought a pleasant reminder of his courting days. When he was out of his wraps she jollied him thus: "Henry, why is it that you never entered politics? You are thoroughly magnetic, have a beautiful command of language, a charming address and a wonderful ability to adapt yourself to circumstances. You had just as well be in the enjoyment of both fame and fortune. No longer hide your light under a bushel, dear, but shine as nature and cultivation meant you to." "Now for the bill," he said, and knew just what he was talking about, for she flushed guiltily as he conned the items of a forty-dollar Easter hat.—Detroit Free Press.

An Easter Hymn.

"He is not here," the angel said
To woman weeping at the tomb:
"Behold the place where He was laid;
Why stand ye here in grief and gloom?"

Not here, but risen is the Lord.
Though on the tree He bowed His head.
Forget not ye His spoken word,
Nor seek the living 'mong the dead.

Yes. Thou art living, Lord, we know,
And to the world hast given life,
Its selfish will Thou bendest low,
Thou still'st the tumult, calm'st the strife.

Breathe on us, Lord, Thine own life's breath,
A weary road we long have trod;
Give us the life that conquers death,
The life that's hid with Thee in God.

—Christian Life.

Easter Bells.

Ring, gladsome bells of Easter-tide,
The Christian's pæan far and wide,
From Russia's plains of frozen snow
To fields where Easter lilies blow!
Christ is risen!

Laughing beneath the laughing sun,
The merry brooklets tinkling run,
And bursting buds reveal the sheen
Of summer's wealth of leafage green.
Christ is risen!

From the long night of winter's sleep
To life the fair spring blossoms leap;
So 'mid the night of pagan gloom
New light and life shine from the tomb!
Christ is risen!

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

In the Early Days of cod-liver oil its use was limited to easing those far advanced in consumption. Science soon discovered in it the prevention and cure of consumption.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with Hypophosphites of lime and soda has rendered the oil more effective, easy of digestion and pleasant to the taste.

The 2-ton Aermotor Steel Truck weighs 175 pounds, has 16 inch wheels with 2-inch face. When three of the wheels are on the floor, the other end one is about 14½ inches from the floor, thus enabling it to swivel easily. The body is 28 inches wide by 50 inches long. A bottom board is easily put in to make the bottom tight. If stakes are required, narrow boards can be put in slanting over the outer rail and under the inner one; or, if wide boards are used, they will practically make side boards. By making these stakes long enough and putting in end ones in the same way bulky material may be handled.

We are making this offer to show a sample of our work. We want to show how nice a thing we can make, and how reckless we are in the matter of prices. This Steel Truck is furnished at $3.50 cash (2 cents per pound), and 2 copies of advertisement No. 4, as per conditions named in No. 4. This is adv. No. 5.

Unlike the Dutch Process No Alkalies —OR— Other Chemicals are used in the preparation of W. BAKER & CO.'S Breakfast Cocoa which is absolutely pure and soluble.

It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, and EASILY DIGESTED.

DELANO DIARY

—Have your pillows renovated.

--The Ladies Guild will meet with Mrs. Davis tomorrow afternoon.

—Feather machine located in Mrs. Roehl's building.

—Rev. Soares preached on Sunday at the Presbyterian church.

—$1.30 cash will pay for the St. Paul Weekly Globe, and the BUFFALO GAZETTE for one year.

—I. E. Staples formally of Delano has been elected on the reform ticket by 29 majority Mayor of Little Falls.

—The K. of P. Lodge has made arrangements with Messrs Swedeback & Erickson to occupy their new hall as soon as it is put in condition.

—We have on hand a ball of the Stillwater, prison made, hemp binding twine. Farmers are to be supplied at a cost not exceeding $.07 to the pound. Call and examine for yourselves.

—Rev. Frank R. Millspaugh will hold Episcopal services at the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening at 7:30. This is the last time he expects to meet the Delano people for some time as he goes to Topeka, Kansas soon.

—A sociable will be held in the city hall on Thursday evening, by the Episcopal ladies. Everybody invited. The goods belonging to the Guild are to be sold at that time.

—People are beginning with indications of spring, to repair their houses and fix up generally. Several residences have been reshingled, among them those of Ole Erwig, and Louis Probst.

—The newly elected village council convened on Monday evening and transactad business as though they knew how. President Kohler understands expediting matters quite well. He appointed his standing committee for the year. Tom Lanway was appointed street commissioner, and Martin Nelson night-watch and lamp lighter.

--A few of our folks still insist that if Delano has a four or five foot dam in the river she will at once float near the top of manufacturing towns in this great state. This is a wrong idea. Do they not know that with all the "horse power" of Niagra Falls running to waste New York city with its millions is miles away? Have they never traveled? Have they lost the opportunity of visiting our neighboring little village of Rockford with its "dam" an older place than Delano yet not nearly so largely populated? Have they never been to Hanover one of the oldest and best, and largest water-powers on the stream and seen the steam outfit for running a well established milling business a portion of the time, though they have not only our Crow River but the North fork a much larger stream? And did they never count the houses in that beautiful little place and compare the numbers with our own village. By all means let us have improvements in our village. Something that will be of service, something reliable, and that will not be a flat failure and a laughing stock for the town and the country round. Several good wells with windmills would supply tanks in the more elevated parts of town with good drinking water, which could be let let down through pipes to every house in town, and in case of fire would furnish water for use by the fire companies and be a benefit to everybody interested. This method would be cheaper, better, and much more desirable than that of feeding the people on river water, which they do not choose to drink, even when they can waid out and dip it up in its normal condition. Or if wind mills, which would be much more reliable than Crow River for motive power are considered too fickle to be depended on we could have steam or electricity.

—To-day is Good Friday.

—Have your feather beds renovated.

--Democratic deserters deserve "docking".

--Next Sunday will be Easter. It comes earlier than usual this year.

--Twenty Franklin farmers have formed a stock company and bought a fine percheron.

—Call and see the Spring Millinery at Mrs. M. J. Mulford's every thing in the latest styles.

—Subscribe for the Weekly St. Paul Globe and the GAZETTE $1.30 for a year. This offer only good till May one. Old subscribers paying in advance same rates.

--P. M. O'Hair handed us the following notice, sent out by 1st assistant P. M. Gen., to all postmasters. It is of interest to all patronizers of Uncle Sam's mails:

Don't mail your letter or valuable package without having your own address written or printed upon the upper left hand corner.

This will insure its prompt return to you if not delivered, and will prevent its being sent to and opened at the Dead Letter Office.

--It is hoped by Delanoites that now that a grade has been establisned for the second time that some of the streets will be put in proper shape to remain for awhile, and obviate the necessity of filling holes on hills that should be graded down, and wasting gravel by filling deep holes with it. Surveyors usually established grades so as to have as little movement of dirt as possible and plenty to fill with while there is none to spare. If proper attention is given to this matter some of our streets can be finished up adding much to the beauty of our village.

Personals.

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor,
ARTHUR E. POWELL, Assis't.

The Senate met as usual last Friday. Woman's Suffrage was still under discussion. All sorts of "not very complementary" things were said about the women, such as, "brains not large enough to have as great intellect as man" and "don't know anything about politics," etc. But we hope that the Senators who made such disparaging remarks do not really believe them and only said them for the sake of argument.

The Senior class motto, colors, officers, flower, and yell are as follows: Officers—Most Exalted Mogul, Edward Freeman; Most Worthy Juk Slinger, Roy F. Wilder; Handler of Spondulix, E. M. Cunningham; Seer, Vernon Wilder. Colors—Purple and Gold. Class Flower—Pumpkin Blossom. Motto—Ave, vene tuam parteum illic omnis honos est. Yell, Ninety Four! Ninety Four!

Bing, bang, boom, roar!
Siz, whiz! Ninety Four!

Some etching was done in the chemistry room some time ago, the names of the class in chemistry were etched upon a pane of glass by covering the glass with bees' wax, writing the names upon the glass and then placing it over powdered flour spar and sulphuric acid, which are heated together gently.

PROFESSOR—"What is meant by a sinnate leaf?"

SENIOR—"One that is wavy—only more so."

Monthly examinations occurred last week.

During the pleasant weather which we had some days ago, the play grounds were very merry. Jumping rope and foot-ball seemed to be the prevailing games, although cracking the whip was tried but with disastrous results to some of the High school scholars.

Mrs. C. J. Brickley and Miss Stella Jacobs made the school a pleasant call last week.

The Seniors are lamenting that the Junior class are nearly all girls, because they would like to indulge in a cane rush.

We have received our encyclopedias, they consist of fifteen volumns and are very beautifully and substandially bound and from a hasty glance through them they seem to meet our requirments. It is called the "International Encyclopedia."

We, the dignified Senate, feel slighted to the extreme in that our constituents fail to drop in to see us, even when we are in their midst. Parents and friends of our school are invited to come to this important assembly whenever it convenes, which it does every Friday afternoon at three o'clock.

Those connected with the plays are in real earnest and are confident of their success under the management of Mr. Dewey.

The members of the "Pickwick Club" are especially requested to attend the meeting next Friday to be held at Grace O'Hair's.

Not Understood.

It appears I was not understood in my remarks about the Odd Fellows order. I am not opposed to that institution, as such. I said all the good things I could about it. But my point is, that the thing is over done. The lodge engrosses all attention to the almost entire neglect of the church and all religious things, and thus a good thing is made an evil thing. The lodge is merely a social and secular institution, and in no sense a church. It was not organized to save men, or to lead them to Jesus Christ. This is the work of the church. The church, of all things, should not be ignored, nor neglected. The lodge, and all other moral institutions owe their very existence to the Kingdom of God. If Chsistianity should die out, the lodge would die with it. Frst of all things, it is the duty of all men, to support the church. "Seek first the kingdom of God." Am I not correct?

J. W. POWELL.

Unclaimed Letters.

List of letters remaining unclaimed in this office:

Mr. August Tasch, Mr. Chaales Tiderman, Mr. Nick Koch, J. Brynildson, John Hodge, Rev. J. S. McCormack.

M. A. O'HAIR.

County Cullings.

Cokato lost the Post office and several business houses, said to be worth $10,000, by fire Wednesday.

C. A. Pidgeon, of Buffalo, has shied his castor into the Republican ring for Clerk of the Supreme court. It is about time some Wright county man would receive some recognition from outside the county. C. A. would make a compitent clerk.

The County Commissioners met at Buffalo on the 14th.

Resoluuions on the death of Louis Haefer were passed. Ole Mattson was elected chairman. $125 was voted Rockford, and $75 to Frankfort for county roads. C. A. Cummings was granted auctioneer's license. The most of the bills for quarantining diphtheria were rejected.

They held another meeting on the 19th. Joe Reems was absent on account of sickness and a dead lock occurred which will have to await the presence of the newly initiated commissioner to break.

Resolutions passed by County Commission.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS; Death has entered our midst and removed from us the worthy chairman of this board, Louis W. Haeffer of the second district on March 1st., 1894. Therefore be it

RESOLVED. That while we humbly bow to the decree of Him who doeth all things well, we deeply deplore the severance of official relations which have ever been of the most pleasant character.

RESOLVED. That we as individual members of the board desire to bear testimony to the faithfulness, honesty and uprightness of character of the deceased made manifest not only in the discharge of his duties as a member of this board but in his private walks of life.

RESOLVED. That we extend to the widow and sorrowing children our deepest sympathy and condolence and assure them of our appreciation of the irreparable loss they have sustained.

RESOLVED. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this board, that a copy of the same be furnished the county papers for publication and that an engrossed copy of the same be furnished the family of the deceased.

Among Our Exchanges.

T. E. Bowen, of Duluth, spent last Sunday in Tower, and will soon be with us to take charge of the BUDGET.—Bede's Budget.

H. C. Bull was taken suddenly and severely ill Monday with pneumonia. Dr. Kauffman, of Dassel, was called, and under his care the the sick man is steadily improving.—Cokato Herald.

Fergus Falls Journal: Ashby gave the saloons a very blackeye. According to all reports they have been conducted in very much the same manner that the Fergus Falls saloons were the year before license was voted out. One or two tough saloons will do more to carry no license than an army of prohibition talkers.--Pioneer Press.

The farmers of the town of Pleasant Hill, at the annual meeting held this week, adopted the following novel resolutions:

Resolved, That that the farmers of the town os Pleasant Hill are solely interested in agriculture, and it is for our interest not to give in our agricultural report to the assessor for the purpose of the wheat gamblers of Chicago to speculate on our labor; and, furthermore, we will not pay the assessor for taking said report.—Minneapolis Journal.

Is there no Irish Catholic prelate in New York courageous enough to brave the spirit which demanded that the flag of Erin should be floated from the city hall on St. Patrick's day by saying to the Irishmen of New York as Archbishop Ireland said to those of St. Paul: "One nationalism is and must be supreme in our civil and social matters, and that is American nationalism. On this condition has America admitted foreighers to citizenship. No political segregation of citizens on foreign lines can be allowed. It is wrong to have a socalled Irish American vote. No one should vote as an Irishman or seek office as an Irishman." There is the ring of genuine patriotism in these golden words. They need to be impressed not upon Irishmen alone, but upon the people of every nationality who import the clannishness of their foreign nationalism into American politics.—Pioneer Press.

Notice.

The Minnesota State League of Republican clubs will hold its regular convention at Minneapolis on Mar. 28, 1894, at 10 a. m., in Harmonia Hall. Each Republican club in Wright county is entitled to five (5) delegates in said convention, three of whom are to be elected by each club and the other two (2) being the President and Secretary of each club, ex-officio. It is hoped that every club in the county will be represented. In localicies where no club exists, Republicans are urged to organize and elect delegates. With proper organization Republican victory in Wright county is assured.

In the evening of March 28, at 8 p m., the Republicans of Minnesota will be addressed by Gov. Wm. McKinley, of Ohio, at Exposition Hall, Minneapolis. Admission will be by ticket. All delegates to the convention and all club members and other Republicans attending can obtain tickets for seats of the undersigned at Harmonia Hall. The committee is informed by the State League officers that no seat tickets will be issued untill the 28th. Ladies attending from Wright county will be provided with seats, and every effort will be made to provide friends of other political views with seats to hear the great republican. Half fare for the occasion on all roads.

WM. E. CULKIN,
League Ex. Com.
Dated Mar. 12, 1894.

FROM the present outlook St. Paul will have a good mayor the next term. Either Ex-Governor McGill, Hon. O. O. Cullen or Robert G. Smith will doubtless be chosen. Mayor Wright declines re-nomination.

JUDGING from the long countenances of some of the Franklin farmers on returning from McKinley's lecture yesterday morning we think the apostle of protection failed to make them see how his bill is helping them at present, or ever would benefit them if kept in existence.

OUR Republican orators and papers told us two years ago that the hardest times we ever had were in 1857 and that they were caused by the Walker tariff bill of 1846; that it took eleven years to find it out! McKinley's bill seems to have operated more lively and after two years and a half has found some pretty tough times.

A GOOD plan is proposed in the Representative, by A. R. Holston, a former Delanoite, for holding caucuses and conventions. His plan is suggested for the People's party but is equally apapted and as badly needed by other parties. The Wright county democracy would find it a good thing. It is to have all caucuses held on the same hour and day throughout the state; and all conventions held at the same time, in all counties, thereby preventing political trades, and wire pullers from manipulating the wires in more than one caucus or convention. He also suggests the propriety of having the business done with a less number of conventions than is generally held; as a means of saving time and expense.

THE Bland bill permitting the coinage of seigniorage on hand at Washington has been in the hands of President Cleveland for almost the limited time awaiting his signature or veto. It seems seigniorage of silver at the national capitol is something like the toll taken by the country miller. In order that the government may be on the safe side and loose nothing by coining money enough seigniorage (toll) is allowed to make the government safe. Owing to the depreciation in price of silver enough more could be bought for the former price of a dollar so that an amount of silver has accumulated sufficient to make, if coined into money, $55,000,000, and which the government has as good a right to use for that purpose as has the miller to grind up the wheat he has taken for toll and sell it for money.

LATER.—This morning's papers say that Grover Cleveland's veto was attached to the bill. His reasons, because of the looseness of its construction which would permit the robbing us of our gold.

IT must have been a very trying occasion indeed for Governer McKinley, of Ohio, to come into Minnesota to start his presidential ball a rolling by proclaiming to the people that "protection" will produce and maintain prosperity, and find even the weather cold, and disagreeable, and that the average farmer wasmot very happy on account of the low prices he is obliged to take for what he sells now. Although the McKinley bill is now in full force, wheat having a tariff of 25 cents per bushel hardly brings twice that price in the market, and with a tariff of 5 cents per dozen on eggs they are selling at 7½ cents per dozen. And then to have Governor Nelson, once his collegue in Congress who voted for the Mills bill and thereby made himself solid with a large portion of his own party in Minnesota, sit by and hear him rehearse his old arguments. No wonder the Governor did not loom up as some expected he would. These are trying circumstances to surround a man with and calculated to cool his aspirations for office at a very rapid rate. Perhaps the object of the meeting was to freeze him out and make room for another candidate.

THE idea of making the legislature of our great state upon which so much depends, nothing but an electorial college is all wrong. Last year men unsatisfactory to the majority of voters even of their own parties were placed on tickets and carried through to an election because it was claimed they would support certain men for the United States Senate. This year our other Senator's time expires and the same tactics are already being used to manipulate the primaries and caucuses. If you would have fit men in the legislature, men who will not trade off your best interests for their own personal gain or advancement, don't fail to attend your caucuses and see to it that only representative men are sent as delegates to make your ticket; that only representative men are placed on the ticket, then you will have laws made for our own state that will not have to be declared unconstitutional by the supreme court. They will choose a good man for U. S. Senator. Don't be caught twice in the same trap.

Political Reformers.

Many men when they have reached the age when they are allowed to cast their first ballot seem to think they will, at once, by the simple casting of that ballot reform the politics of the entire country. After the ballots have been counted and they learn that their vote was on the side of the minority they change their minds; and often times become discouraged at the outset, and when the next election day rolls around, hoping to be on the winning side, and not having thought much about party principles; or believing those of the opposite party anxious to secure them.cast their vote with the party against which they voted before. This time they fare the same. The majority is on the other side, and they are left out in the cold. Then they make up their minds that politics need reforming and the way to accomplish anything is to join the reform party. In this way many young men are led away from principles they honestly believe in; to run after illusions and to vote for something else than that they want in the hope of reforming the country. They expect to reform the country first and the people afterwards. He thinks it is easier to purify the mass than to cleans from his sins the individual. They expect while tippling and drinking moderately themselves to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the land. They expect while paying a larger percentage of their possessions, in tariff taxes than does the millionare, to grow rich. They think while flitting about from one party to another to reform politics. They are wrong. That is what ails politics now, the lack of principles to stand by. It has become the fashion to nommate for office any man who any loud mouthed politician says he thinks can get elected whether or not he thinks so. Put him on the ticket because he is Scandinavian or Dutch, or maybe blue bellied Yankee. Because he is Catholic or because he aint; because he is Mason, Odd Fellow, K. P., Orangeman or because he is a temperance man or because he can carry the saloon vote; or for any reason but that which which should determine his selection, his fitness for the position. Honesty, faithfulness ability in office are overlooked, thrust aside for, availability. The man who can get there is selected though after he is there he may be a disgrace to those putting him in office; while the man who would be an honor to his town, county or state is left at home. Did those young men starting in life but choose a party for its principles rather than its profits, and unflinchingly, earnestly and honestly try to reform themselves, their caucuses, and conventions, places where they can do something instead of beginning by trying to reform the country first, things would soon look different; and they themselves would in the end be more honored members of this grand republic.

Temperance Convention at Darwin.

The Sixth District Catholic Total Abstinance Convention, comprising the counties of Carver, Wright, Meeker and McLeod, was held at Darwin, March 27, 1894. The convention was called to order by the district organizer, F. A. Barth, of Watertown, who presided, and Joseph Murphy, of Forest City, was elected secretary. Delegates from the following socities were present, Darwin, Forest City, Mannanah, Glencoe, Waverly and Watertown, in all 36. On account of bad condition of the roads some socities were not represented. Many able discussions for the interests of the cause were taken up by the convention and a very able and lenghty paper on the subject "Woman's Part in Total Abstinance Work" was read by Miss Anna Walsh, of Glenco. Ringing resolutions were also adopted. The society of Darwin with their pastor, Rev. Father McCabe as leader, done every thing possible for the entertainment of the delegates and before the convention adjourned resolutions of thanks to the people of Darwin was unaminously adopted for their kind hospitality. After the convention adjourned the Darwin Society presented a fine temperance drama in six acts which with songs and recitations closed the First District Convention of the Sixth District which was without doubt a notable gathering for these four counties and will do a great deal of good in the cause for the future. Many notable workers of the cause were present all of whom it is impossible to mention in the scope of this short item.

Dassel Boycotters.

LITCHFIELD, March 23.—Particulars furnished the Globe representative by a thoroughly reliable party indicate that a state of affairs prevails in the village of Dassel, in this county, which is a disgrace to our modern civilization, growing aut of the recent election. Previous to this event the feeling over the license question ran so high that some of the advocates of no license went to the merchants of the town and cautioned them that if they voted for license they would be boycotted, and upon being informed by the latter that they intended to vote for license, the prohibs went to another merchant, whom they informed that if he voted no license, marking his ticket in a manner agreed upon, the prohibition trade would be turned over to him. It is said that the bait was greedily swallowed, and the required vote cast. The result of election was a victory for the license forces by a majority of four, and since election the prohibs have been carrying out their threats in a very faithful but offensive manner. An organization has been perfected which embraces farmers in the surrounding country, as well as citizens, and the members have pledged themselves to pay a fine if they trade at any other stors except the one designated. Cases have been known where ladies of the no-license faith have entered the stores of the interdicted merchants, and enticed lady customers away to do their trading with the favored one, who, in consequence of his bargain, is doing a very lucrative business.—Globe.

Observance of National Laws Admonished.

ROME, March 23.—The pope's encyclical letter addressed to the bishops of Poland, Russia, Austria and Parssia, was published here today. His holiness says, in brief, that the mission of the papacy is not to teach anything against the power of princes or the utility of nations, but to provide for the prosperity of all. The pope then recalls the agreement with Russia by which the position of the clergy was immensely improved. This agreement the pope declares, was obtained through requests directly addressed to the czar, whose spirit of friendship and justice is highly extolled.

The encyclical proceeds to exhort the bishops to avoid any spirit of hostility to the civil authority, and to inculcate among the Poles the observance of the Russo-papal agreements. Addressing the Catholics of Austria and Poland the pope enjoys them to feel gratitude for the religious zeal of the emperor, and concludes with urging the Poles in Prussia to trust to the equity of their emperor and to observe the laws.—Globe.

Baldwin on Pensions.

Congressman Baldwin of the 6th Minnesota district made a speech a few days ago in Congress on the Pension question. He was a soldier himself and cannot be charged with not knowing what he is talking about. He seems to be quite humerous in his remarks, but decidedly pointed. He evidently keeps his statesman's weapons in as good order as did he the weapons of war wielded by him a generation ago. And finds the enemy, at least as determined and presistent on carrying their points, on many occasions, as were the Johnnies in preserving their homes in the sixties. Below we quote a portion of the closing clauses:

Again, Mr. Chairman, when I witness these wild and reckless charges of the gentlemen on the other side of the House whenever pensions are mentioned, I wonder why it was that during the war our commanders did not let slip these dogs of war, these thu derbolts. In imagination I can see them charging upon the serried columns of the enemy, breaking through the squares of infantry; catching the solid shot from the very mouths of the belching cannon; carrying death and havoc everywhere, until the enemy, bleeding, confused, and routed, in sheer desperation surrender. [Laughter.]

Why, Mr. Chirman, that terrible war, which cost so many lives and such vast treasure, extending over four years, might have been terminated in as many months. Alas! for the incompetence of our commanders, the war now seems interminable. Grim-visaged war will not, nor will PUCKER smooth his wrinkled front. [Laughter.] I beg you, gentlemen, hang up your bruised arms for monuments and change these stern alarms to merry meetings. I beg the gentlemen to consider that annual pension expenditures are now in excess of $139,000,000, and under your administration would soon exceed $240,000,000. Already it is charged that this is the price of the soldier vote to the Republican party. You must answer to the people for this recklessness and for the pension frauds which have been committed in the name of patriotism.

Nothing is too good for the honest worthy, deserving soldier. Give them ample pensions—no apothecary's scales in their cases. Give them employment; give them homes; cherish and honor them, but best serve and protect them by striking from the pension rolls the name of every man who is there through fraud, no matter whether their number be thousands or hundreds of thousands; and I say to you, under President Cleveland's Administration, aided by Hoke Smith and Judge Lochren, this will be done, and the honest, deserving soldier will yet admit that these men were their benefactors and their friends indeed. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

With myself the war ended nearly thirty years ago. Many phases of it I delight to review with old comrades about the hearthstone or the campfire of the army post. On a former occasion I referred to our army experiences as the happiest and the jolliest of all our lives. But looking or thinking from another standpoint, as a fraternal strife, a war of brothers, I am filled with sorrow and regret, and I would mourn in silence for those who have fallen and in silence glorify and honor the survivors. In the name of God and suffering humanity let us have peace. [Prolonged applause on the Democratic side.]

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23, 1894.

President Cleveland has devoted the greater part of this week, night and day, to listening attentively to arguments for and against the Bland coinage bill, although it is known that he has long been a close student of the question involved. It is because of the differences in opinion among democrats on the matter that he has been anxious to hear all that both sides have to say. Up to last night he had not indicated what disposition he would make of the bill. In view of the record of the President it is a waste of space to say that there is absolutely no foundation for the stories sent out from Washington making him a party to a bargain with the silver men in Congress. They are simply sensational libels upon the President as well as upon the silver men. No man ever occupied the White House who was clearer of bargaining, either for personal or political gain, than is Grover Cleveland, and while his decision must necessarily be against the wishes of many good democrats, it can be set down in advance that it will be the result of his honest convictions, and there is little doubt that it will be so accepted by the democratic party at large.

Since the tariff bill was reported to the Senate the republicans have been making desperate and concerted attempts to make it appear that there is formidable democratic opposition to the bill in the Senate. That the bill will be changed before it passes the Senate is altogether probable, inasmuch as it will produce, in its present form, according to the latest estimates, something like $30,000,000 more than will be required, and it is the policy of the democrats only to levy sufficient taxes to raise the money necessary to run the government. Democratic Senators who favor changes looking towards a reduction of the revenue to the amount required will state their reasons and ask their democratic colleagues for their votes to make them, but it is not believed that any of them will seek republican votes to get those changes, or will vote against the bill shoul I the changes desired not be made.

The four appropriation bills—the District of Columbia, the general pension, the fortification and the sundry civil—already passed by the House, represent a net reduction of $24,334,958 from the total amount carried by the same bills for the current fiscal year. This shows that chairman Sayers and his democratic colleagues on the House Appropriations committee are carrying out democratic ideas of economy in public expenditures.

Mr J. W. Ady, who pretends to think that he has a claim of the seat now filled in the Senate by Hon. John Martin of Kansas, is in Washington, he says for the purpose of contesting Senator Martin's right to the seat, but in reality merely to get a little notoriety which he hopes to be able to turn to account in Kansas in the near future.

Hon, Daniel Magone, who was collector of customes at New York city during the first Cleveland administration, and who has for many years been a recognized authority on the politics of his State is in Washington. He says of politics: "There is no sort of doubt in my mind that New York is a democratic State.. Occasional losses are due to local causes, but do not affect the party as a whole. The New Democracy, too, stands squarely for tariff reform. There is no backing down with us on that issue. The one thing now for Congress to do is to pass the tariff bill at the earliest practical date. With that out of the way, so that trade may resume its normal condition, there is no reason to be apprehensive about democracy."

The successful trial of the thirteen inch cannon made at the Gun Shop of the Washington Navy Yard, which was made this week, at the proving grounds, a few miles down the Potomac river, marks an epoch in the history of fine gun making in the United States, besides establishing the wisdom of the Government making its own guns. Secretary Herbert and a distinguished party numbering several hundred were present at the trial. Experts pronounce it one of the finest guns ever made.

Representative Breckenridge is now having his inning in the sensational trial of Miss Pollard's suit against him for breach of promise of marriage. He denies in toto the main charges against him, and if the evidence to be submitted by him sustains his denial, as his friends believe it will, he may succeed in getting a verdict, notwithstanding the terrible testimony of the defendent.

Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, is dangerously ill. He was this week stricken with paralysis, and his physicians have little hope of his recovery.

"Coxey's" Army is regarded in Washington as a sort of All Fools day hoax pulled before it was ripe, and nobody has the remotest idea of making any preparation for its reception, for the very simple reason that no one believes it will ever come here in any such numbers as its originator now talks about so glibly.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS E. A. STACY.

You cannot make rum and religion mix.

Are we trying to mend the liquor trafic or to end it?

The licensed saloon is a tollgate on the highway to hell, and the receipts go to keep the road in repair.

While it is a good thing for the Christian temperance man to get on his knees, it is a better thing for him to get up and go to work.

The church that sleeps in the presence of crime deserves to die and be buried in the nearest ecclesiastical potters field.—Hearst.

We know that in discussing this license question the average man favoring license simply calls attention to the revenue covered into the treasury, which it is claimed helps reduce our taxes, pays for improvements that otherwise the town could not afford, etc., without referring to enormous expenses entailed on the county through the pauperism and crime caused by the licensed saloon. License fees will not begin to cover the expenses growing out of prosecuting men made criminals and caring for the paupers that numerous saloons have made. The murders in Wright county, for which the saloons are responsible, will no doubt cause more expense than the entire receipts for license. Then consider the utter insignificance of all this in comparison to the disgrace, heartache and helpless misery of these homes caused by the licensed liquor traffic.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

The Summing up of the Evils Resulting Therefrom.

It creates no wealth, it earns nothing, it lives upon the earnings of other trades; it adds nothing whatever to the wealth or power of the state, nor to the prosperity or comfort of the people. This trade is wasteful like war; it destroys more of the wages of the people and the results of useful industries, than "war, pestilence and famine combined;" it creates more than three-fourths of the poverty, pauperism and crime of the country, and more than one-half of the insanity; it inflicts a premature and shameful death upon more than sixty thousand people annually; it transforms hundreds of thousands of good industrious citizens into drunkards, vagabonds and tramps; it sends an infinite misery into hundreds of thousands of homes; it puts the people down and keeps them down; its effect is to make the people ignorant, coarse, vulgar, brutal enemies to law, order and good government. Such are part of the certain effects of this trade.

There is not now and never has been in this country a locality where the policy of license has diminished the liquor traffic or the evils coming from it. No one has ever suggested that under license the demand for liquor would not be fully met and amply supplied. The friends of temperance in Maine will never consent to establish by law and give legal protection to a trade which inflicts far more evil upon the community than comes from all other causes of evil combined.—Neal Dow.

GLORIOUS OLD MAINE.

Gen. Dow Tells What Prohibition Has Done for the State.

1. We had many distilleries. Now we have not one in the state, nor has there been for many years.

2. At the same time a great quantity of West India rum was imported. Now not even one puncheon is imported nor has there been for many years.

3. Before prohibition, rum-shops were everywhere in the state, wholesale and retail; no hamlet so small or retired but the rum-seller found it and established a grog-shop there Now in more than three-fourths of our population the grog-shop is unknown. An entire generation has grown up there, never having seen a saloon or the effect of one.

4. The quantity of liquor now sold in the state is not one twentieth so great as before prohibition. In Portland, the largest city, the quantity sold is not one-hundredth part so much as it was, the city being twice larger than it was at the time the law was made.

5. Our people used to spend in strong drink the entire valuation of the state in every period of twenty years, as the nation is now doing in every thirty-five years. But now one million dollars will far more than pay for all the liquor smuggled into the state and sold in violation of law.

6. Our state saves annually, directly and indirectly, more than twenty millions of dollars, which but for prohibition would be spent, lost, and wasted in drink.

7. Maine is now one of the most prosperous states in the union; but before the adoption of prohibition it was undoubtedly the poorest.

8. Before the law there were conspicious indications everywhere of dilapidation, unthrift, and decay in shabby churches, shabby schoolhouses, shabby dwellings, neglected and shabby barns. Now there is nothing of all that, but everywhere are seen conclusive proofs of industry, activity and thrift.

9. In 1884, after an experience of the benefits of prohibition for thirty-three years, that policy was put into our constitution by a popular vote, the majority being 47,075, the affirmative vote being three times larger than the negative. There can be no more convincing proof than this that prohibition in Maine has not been a failure, as the distillers and brewers declare it to be, but on the contrary a great success. NEAL DOW.

FIGS AND THISTLES.

Character is capital.
Loafers are never happy.
The glory of God is love
Old men are always lonesome.
The devil has no well-fed sheep.
An aimless life is a fruitless life.
There is no rest in doing nothing.
A covetous man never owns anything.
Thoughtlessness is the curse of the age.
Looking away from sin is looking towards Christ.
We do not love God unless we love to do his will.
No one who truly knows the Bible can ever doubt God.
God will not forgive any more sin than you confess.
No heathen language has any such word as love in it.
You never fine any happy old men in the devil's service.
"To him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward."
A great many people pray most for the things they do not need.
"To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, it is sin."
The devil never runs from the preacher who goes to the theater.
The Bible has no message for any but earnest, willing minds.
"He healeth the broken in heart and bindeth up their wounds."
A man is very small if you can put all there is of him into a coffin.
A great many giants become very small when you get close to them.

Binding Twine.

Henry Wolfer, warden of the penitentiary, at Stillwater has sent out a lot of samples of the prison made binding twine. The twine is of hemp, grown in Minnesota, Iowa and Kentucky, mostly. Mr. Wolfer says:

"This twine will be sold the present season at a price not to exceed 7 cents per pound, and lower, if necessary, to meet competition of any twine of any length and quality that may be placed on the market, said price to be finally determined by the Board of Managers June 1, 1894. All the purchasers of twine previous to that date will be entitled to the benefit of any reductions below seven cents that may be made by the Board. There need, therefor, be no hesitancy in placing orders now, as the prices will be adjusted as above indicated." Farmers who will need twine this fall, if they like the twine, will do well to place their orders in time. Call and get a sample at the GAZETTE office. We have a full ball for examination. 26tf

RECENTLY a workman in Pittsburgh engaged in preparing wood for a piano found a pine knot which contained the portrait of a woman. This was no vague semblance, but a woman dressed in the style of the day. She sat, one hand at her side; her head, draped in lace, rested on the other. But the thing particularly noticeable was her huge puffed sleeves and slender waist.

THIS is indeed a fast age. Philip D. Armour and his party of tourists returned to Chicago the other day, having been absent thirty days and traveled 7,300 miles, an average daily of 265 miles. Fifty years ago such a journey would have been regarded as an Arabian Nights' tale. Yet this is nothing compared to the possibilities of the future through the development of electrical force.

MAINE used to boast of its hard names of rivers, lakes and towns, but Alaska's simplest names are longer and harder than most of those for which Maine is famous. A few of the longest and hardest of Alaskan names of villages are these: Ahgomekhleanaghamute, Ahgulakpaghamute, Chokfoktoleghamute, Kahlukhtughamute Kennachanaghamute, Kyktoltowtin, Quiechogamute, Teeushotozna and Akgulurigiglak.

COMPETENT authorities estimate that not less than 400,000,000 of human mummies were made in Egypt from the time of the beginning of the art of embalming until its discontinuance in the seventh century. Herodotus and Diodorus both agree in the statement that there were three grades in the embalming process, the first costing not less than a sum equal to $1,225, the second about one-fifth that amount, and the third cheaper than common earth burial.

THE construction of our new navy continues to furnish interesting episodes in the successive stages of its growth. Some two years ago there were armor trials exciting general interest; now comes the test of our first 15-inch gun at the proving grounds below Washington. This is one of the twelve guns ordered for the battleships Indiana, Massachusetts and Oregon, and beyond these no guns of so great caliber will probably be built. If ironclads grappled, as did the wooden ships of our grandfathers, this gun could put its shot through a 25-inch steel coat on its adversary.

OF all the exhibits at the California Midwinter fair probably the most interesting to eastern people is the old mining cabin occupied by John W. Mackay when his circumstances were such as hardly a day laborer would envy. But the rude comfort and hospitality of the cabin had a genuineness about them that his daughter does not seem to have found in the palaces of an Italian prince. Another interesting cabin in this same exhibit is that occupied nearly half a century ago by Senator Perkins. Both the millionaire and the senator built these humble homes with their own hands.

THE water of Niagara falls is to drive canal boats between Buffalo and Albany. At first sight this seems quite a trick, but when you get the connecting link you ask why they didn't do it before. The fact is you were off your trolley. The original power is to come from the falls, the Cataract Electric company being the agent. It is from the mighty dynamos of this new concern that the wires of the Erie canal boats are to get the power that is to retire the mule as a hallowed and picturesque memory. Speaking of monopolies, as one does sometimes, that power company has a fifty-year cinch.

SOLSVILLE MIRACLE.

Restoration of Philander Hyde from Paralysis.

Helpless and Bed-Ridden—His Recovery from This Pitiable Condition—A Remarkable Narrative.

[From the Syracuse Standard.]

During the past few months there have appeared in the columns of the Standard the particulars of a number of cures so remarkable as to justify the term miraculous. These cases were investigated and vouched for by the Albany Journal, the Detroit News, Albany Express and other papers whose reputation is a guarantee that the facts were as stated. Different schools of medicine and some of the brightest lights in the profession had treated these cases, unsuccessfully; and their recovery later on, therefore, and its means, have created a profound sensation throughout the country.

The Standard has published the above accounts for what they were worth, and are happily able to supplement same to-day by an equally striking case near home. The case is over in Madison county, at Solsville, and the subject is Mr. Philander Hyde, who told the reporter the following:

"I will be 70 in September. I was born in Brookfield, Madison county, where all my life was spent until recently, when, becoming helpless, I came to live with my daughter here. My life occupation has been that of a farmer. I was always well and rugged until two years ago last winter, when I had the grip. When it left me I had a sensation of numbness in my legs, which gradually grew to be stiff at the joints and very painful. I felt the stiffness in my feet first, and the pain and the stiffness extended to my knees and to my hip joints, and to the bowels and stomach, and prevented digestion. To move the bowels I was compelled to take great quantities of castor oil.

"While I was in this condition, cold feelings would begin in my feet and streak up my legs to my back and would follow the whole length of my back bone. I could not sleep, I had no appetite, I become helpless. While in this condition I was treated by a number of prominent physicians. They did me no good. I soon became perfectly helpless and lost all power of motion even in my bed."

"The physicians consulted pronounced father's case creeping paralysis," said Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, "and when we brought him home he had to be carried all the way in a bed. The doctors said they could only relieve the pain, and for the purpose he took a pint of whiskey a day for three months, and morphine in great quantities. When he began taking Pink Pills we stopped giving him morphine or any other medicine, and cut off all stimulants. In ten days after father began taking the pills, he could get out of bed and walk without assistance, and has continued to improve until now he walks about the house and the streets by the aid of a cane only."

"Yes," said Mr. Hyde, "and the pain has gone out of my back and the numbness out of my legs. I have no more chills, my digestion is good, and I have an excellent appetite." And then, after a pause, "But, ah, me, I am an old man; I have seen my best days, and cannot hope to recover my old vigor as a younger man might, but I am so thankful to have the use of my limbs and to be relieved of those dreadful pains."

Others in Solsville are taking Pink Pills, notably the mother of Abel Curtis, who is using them with satisfactory effect for rheumatism, and Mrs. Lippitt, wife of ex-Senator Lippitt, is using them with much benefit for nervous debility.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, and that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

These Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade-mark and wrapper at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk or by the dozen or hundred.

FROZE THE FRUIT.

Fears That the Cold Has Proven Fatal to the Buds—Wheat Growers Scared.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 28.—Reports from all parts of Indiana announce that fruit has been killed by the cold weather of the last three nights. In southern Indiana peach trees were in bloom and the farmers believed they were to have the largest crop of recent years. The temperature has been down to within ten degrees of zero and experts say that not only will the fruit be killed but early vegetation of all kinds will suffer seriously. Encouraged by the warm weather many gardeners had vegetables in the ground.

CHICAGO, March 28.—It is feared that the recent cold snap, following a season of warm weather, greatly damaged the winter wheat crop, but it is too soon to give even an approximate estimate of the injury. Even those in the best position to judge differ in their opinions and are disposed to await later and more definite advices. The crop is thought to have been damaged in western Kansas and Oklahoma, though a ray of hope is found in the fact that the ground was dry. Central and eastern Kansas is reported to have escaped without serious loss. Opinions on the Minnesota crop are contradictory, but it is likely to suffer if the cold weather is followed by a sudden thaw. Some farmers think that in the absence of alternate freezing and thawing the wheat has escaped damage. It is thought the Ohio crop was not far enough advanced to be injured. In eastern and central Nebraska wheat is believed to have suffered severely, but farther north and west the recent snowfall has protected the growing plants. It is feared that Indiana wheat has suffered considerably, but if the cold has not reached the roots, as is hoped, the damage may not be as serious as feared. A report from Sparta, Ill., says the crop is badly damaged, in one locality to the extent of 50 per cent. It is thought Michigan has escaped without serious injury. North and South Dakota are not in the winter wheat belt. In the latter the melting snow will benefit spring wheat. In the former planting is backward, and the acreage of spring wheat will be one-third less than last year.

BENTON, Ill. March 28.—Careful investigation by expert horticulturists confirms the general fear of fruit men throughout the southern Illinois apple belt that the crop is entirely killed. Thousands of young trees will share the same fate as the growing crop. The loss falls all the heavier from the fact that the crop has been almost a total failure for three years past, and many seriously contemplate abandoning the business. One of the largest growers of small fruits said that all told there would not go from this section a carload of berries, apples, peaches, plums and pears combined. During an ordinary good year something like fifty carloads a day leave during the season.

HILLSBORO, Ill., March 28.—The oat and clover crops have been ruined by the severe freeze and it is also believed that peaches, pears, cherries and apples have been killed.

ST. LOUIS, March 28.—The cold weather which began here Friday last reached its lowest point Sunday night with a local temperature of 10 degrees above zero. As a result reports are coming in from all directions of damage to fruit. Crops of berries and fruits given an early start by the recent warm weather are now an absolute loss.

DETROIT, Mich., March 28.—The fruit belt of Michigan is in danger from the fall of the thermometer to within 3 degrees of the zero mark. The range was 11 degrees above that. Everywhere the peach buds on the trees of the earlier varieties are frozen stiff. They were in an unprecedentedly advanced stage owing to the warm weather of the previous ten days. Apples and cherries are also considerably injured, but the full extent cannot be told until the sun warms them up. Along the Lake Michigan shore, where there was a heavy fall of snow, strawberries and shrub fruits were protected, but farther inland and approaching the eastern border of the state they were left unprotected and were badly frozen. The same is true of winter wheat. It was never in better condition than Saturday and is mostly covered by snow.

POMEROY, O., March 28.—The temperature fell to 18 degrees above zero Sunday night. Peaches, which are in full bloom, and other early fruits are probably killed in southern Ohio. The ground is white with snow.

CINCINNATI, March 28.—The thermometer Sunday night fell to 16 degrees above zero. Fruit and berries are killed, but the damage to wheat and other crops was not serious, although they are further advanced than usual.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 28.—Reports received from Enterprise, Macon, Utica, Columbus, Brookhaven, Yazoo City, Madison, Canton, Oxford and Corinth, Miss.; Dallas, Tex.; Monroe, Gibbsland, Alexandria, Clinton and Bayou, La.; Pensacola, Fla., and Dallas, Tex., are to the effect that a severe frost visited those sections Monday morning forming ice half an inch thick, destroying early vegetables, strawberries, the fruit crop, and in some places early corn and oats and peas.

Fishermen Drowned.

HOLLAND, Mich., March 28.—A party of four men went fishing in two small boats Sunday morning in the awful storm that was raging. The boats have just been found capsized. The boats were frail concerns, and it is supposed that all the occupants were drowned, as none of them have returned to their homes. The names of the lost are: Charles Petrie, married; Jean McKay, single; J. C. Shafer, married; Irwin Thakes, single. Thakes was the only support of his father and mother. Petrie and McKay were brothers-in-law, as were also Shafer and Thakes.

Sixteen Pleaded Guilty.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Andrew Scott Jamieson, the Gravesend constable convicted last week of perjury, was Monday sentenced in the court of oyer and terminer at Brooklyn to eighteen months in the penitentiary. The eighteen indicted election inspectors of Gravesend were then called upon to plead, and all pleaded guilty with the exception of Frank T. Clarke, who pleaded not guilty, and Patrick Tighe, against whom the indictment was dropped. The sixteen were indicted for conspiracy and misconduct as election officers.

A VACANT CHAIR.

Georgia Loses One of Her United States Senators.

Death at Washington of Senator Alfred H. Colquitt After a Second Attack of Paralysis—Brief Sketch of His Career.

COLQUITT IS CALLED.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, who was stricken with paralysis for the second time about a week ago, died at his residence here at 7:10 a. m. Monday. The senator's condition, which had been regarded as somewhat hopeful at midnight, changed for the worse soon afterward, and his colleague senator Gordon, was sent for and arrived about 2 a. m., bringing his daughter with him. Mrs. Colquitt and the children, three unmarried daughters and a married daughter, Mrs. Marshall, of Chicago, were around the bedside when the end came. There were also in attendance his nephew, Mr. Bunn, and his private secretary. Unconsciousness set in some hours before death and the senators end was apparently painless.

SENATOR A. H. COLQUITT.

The remains will be taken to Macon, Ga., for interment and will be accompanied by committees of the two houses of congress and the family of the deceased and that of his colleague, Senator Gordon.

[Senator Alfred Holt Colquitt, of Atlanta, was born in Walton county, Ga., the son of the Rev. Walter T. Colquitt, April 20, 1824. He was graduated from Princeton college in the class of 1844 and admitted to the bar in 1845. During the Mexican war he served as a staff officer with the rank of major. He was a member of the Georgia legislature in 1859, and was elected to the house of representatives in the XXXIIId congress. He was a member of the secession convention of the state of Georgia and later entered the confederate service as captain and was soon promoted to be colonel of the Sixth Georgia infantry. Later he served as brigadier general and was commissioned as major general. He was elected governor of Georgia in 1876, served four years and was reelected under the new constitution for two years. At the expiration of his term as governor he was elected to the United States senate for the term commencing March 4, 1883, and was reelected in 1888. His term of service would have expired March 3, 1895.

Senator Colquitt was stricken with paralysis in July, 1892, and since that time had been unable to walk without assistance. He had been able, however, to continue in a large degree his attendance on his senate duties. He had been wheeled in and out of the senate chamber in an invalid chair; had attended the meetings of committees of which he was a member, but had not made a speech or been able to take any active part in debate on the senate floor. He was even wheeled into the chamber several times to help keep a quorum during the nights when the senate sat in continuous session. His seat in the senate was the one on the democratic side nearest the vice president's chair, where he could easily secure recognition without rising. A few weeks ago his strength had so greatly increased that he was able to dispense with the invalid chair and walk into the senate on the arm of a doorkeeper.

He had announced to the state legislature that he would be a candidate for reelection for a third term. Senator Colquitt leaves a wife, one son, Walter T. Colquitt, and four daughters. Mrs. Marshall, wife of Capt. Marshall of the United States army, Misses Laura, Hattie and Dorothy Colquitt.]

CUT DOWN BY CLEVELAND.

The President Saves the Carnegie Company Over $200,000.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—President Cleveland's decision in the case of the navy department against Carnegie, Phipps & Co. has been made public. It is in effect a conviction of the workmen in the employ of that corporation of an attempt to defraud the United States government for the benefit of Carnegie, Phipps & Co. It was the workmen who stopped up blow holes with plugs, who "fixed" sample plates in order that the inspectors might be fooled into passing groupes of plates which these specially treated samples were supposed to represent, who cheated the government officers and deluded even Mr. Frick. Consequently the fine of $400,000 against the companies is cut down by the hand of the executive to $140,000.

TO LOOK AFTER JENKINS.

Subcommittee Will Begin Investigating the Judge's Action in Milwaukee.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The investigation by the subcommittee of the house judiciary committee, into Judge Jenkins' anti-strike injunction against the Northern Pacific railway employes will be held in Milwaukee, beginning Monday next. The subcommittee, consisting of Messrs. Boatner, Terry, of Arkansas, and W. A. Stone, of Pennsylvania, will leave here for Milwaukee Saturday. The committee is considerably hampered by the fact that it has but $500 at its disposal. It will, therefore, be unable to provide transportation for those witnesses who live at any great distance from Milwaukee. It is for this reason, principally, that the committee decided to go away from Washington to conduct the investigation.

Geary Likes the Treaty.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Representative Geary, of California, framer of the Chinese registration act, causes some surprise by coming out inapproval of the new Chinese treaty. He doesnot agree with those who have argued that it amounts to an abrogation of the Geary law, but looks upon it rather as a recognition of the registration principle, which is the feature of the law that bears his name. He regards the proposed treaty as an advance on the present one, in that it allows the total prohibition of Chinese immigration, while the present treaty provides only for its suspension.

Fast Time for a Sailing Vessel.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28.—The barkentine Tropic Bird returned from Tahiti gayly decorated because of her remarkable run from this city to the islands in January. The distance is 4,200 nautical miles and the journey occupied seventeen days and twelve hours, said to be the fastest time ever made by a sailing vessel on the Pacific.

Changed the Date.

DENVER, Col., March 28.—Date for the Denver meet of the League of American Wheelmen has been changed from August 30-September 1 to August 13-18.

FINE BREAD AND ROLLS.

These Receipts Are the Result of a Housekeeper's Experience.

Here are some recipes which I feel confident will be helpful to many a housekeeper who has been rendered almost desperate by repeated failures in her attempts to make good bread and rolls.

Put two quarts, somewhat heaped, of sifted new process flour into a bread bowl. Make a well in the center, pour in one pint of lukewarm water, in which has been dissolved one tablespoonful of shortening—butter, clarified beef drippings or lard—and one coffee cupful of lukewarm water, in which has been dissolved one-half of a cake of compressed yeast; sift in one medium sized boiled potato, cold or hot; add one tablespoonful of salt and two of sugar.

Stir this, wetting with a spoon, mixing in a little of the flour, and, lastly, covering with some from the sides, thus leaving the sponge surrounded by the flour.

Do this in the evening, and put it in a warm place to rise over night. In the morning stir it up with a knife. It should be so stiff that it will seem as though it were almost impossible to mix in all of the flour and it will look rough when finished.

Set it again in a warm place, and let it rise until extremely light, probably three or four hours, according to the temperature. Then carefully divide into two parts with a sharp knife; do not knead it at all, but form lightly into loaves in the hands. Place in warmed, greased pans and set once more to rise. When very light, certainly twice its former size, and air bubbles can be seen through the almost transparent crust, put it into a rather hot oven and bake from three-quarters of an hour to an hour.

Boil one pint of milk and let it cool until blood warm. Put two quarts of sifted, new process flour, into a bread bowl; make a well in the flour and pour in the milk, in which has been dissolved one tablespoonful of butter or clarified beef drippings, also one cup of lukewarm water, in which one-half of a cake of compressed yeast has been dissolved; add one-fourth of a cup of sugar and one teaspoonful of salt.

Put it in a warm place to rise over night. In the morning stir it up with a knife, and let it stand till two hours before the rolls are to be baked. If the interval will be seven or eight hours they must be set in a cooler place than if to be but two hours, as otherwise they will be overlight and lose the power of rising the third time. Two hours before baking turn them on to a moulding board and roll as thin as doughnuts; cut into rounds, butter the edges and double them over; place on greased dripping pans, cover close, that they may not get too dry on the outside, and set in a warm place to rise.

When very light, the crust transparent in places, bake about fifteen minutes in a very hot oven. Then, with a clean feather or soft napkin, brush them over with a little milk.

If milk be not at hand, excellent rolls, preferred, indeed, by some persons, can be made of water alone by following the directions for bread, as above, but using twice the quantity of shortening (lard should not be taken for rolls, as it does not give a fine flavor) and three times the quantities of salt and sugar. If butter be used, lessen the amount of salt.—N. Y. Herald.

CHINTZ CLOSET LININGS.

Hangings That Also Act as Wardrobe Perfumers.

Have you ever tried lining your closets with gayly-flowered cretonne, bright chintz or silesia? If not, take the advice of one who has adopted the plan, and make your closet interior as attractive as you please. It is well to remove the closet door if you can; then put up pole and rings, from which may be hung curtains of the material selected for the lining. While none too heavy as door hangings, cretonne may be found a trifle cumbersome within the closet, especially if space is limited. For this reason it would be well to use chintz altogether. There are such dainty patterns nowadays in this fabric, embracing so many hues, that it would not be difficult to get a chintz in perfect harmony with the tone of the room decorations.

Within the closet arrange a series of curtains to hang from the front and sides of the top shelf. The drapes, if swung in straight line from tiny rods, will be especially convenient, hiding from view the clothing that gives such a muddled appearance to the interior, pushed aside when you wish to secure some necessary garment. The fastidious woman makes her closet hangings act as perfumes to her wardrobe, as well as furnishings. Each curtain, before it is placed on its rod, is padded with cotton batting and given a generous powdering of her favorite sachet.—N. Y. Advertiser.

The lady whose portrait heads this article is Mrs. Mary F. Covell, of Scotland, Bon Homme Co., S. Dak. She writes to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., as follows: "I was sick two years with 'falling of the womb' and leucorrhœa previous to taking your medicines. I took six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and was entirely cured of both in six months; it is four years this month, since I was entirely well of both those diseases and have never had any signs of their appearance since and I am satisfied the 'Favorite Prescription' saved my life, for I could hardly walk around when I commenced taking that medicine and I think it is a God's blessing to me that I took it.

I was pronounced incurable by the best doctors here in the West. I gave up all hopes and made up my mind that I was to be taken away from my husband and baby of two years old. I was sick all of the time—could not eat anything at all. In one week, after beginning the use of the 'Favorite Prescription' my stomach was so much better that I could eat anything; I could see that I was gaining all over, and my husband then went and got me six bottles; I took three of them and my stomach did not bother me any more.

We sent to you and got the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, and found my case described just as I was: we did what the book told us, in every way; in one month's time I could see I was much better than I had been; we still kept on just as the book told us, and in three months I stopped taking medicine, and to-day, I can proudly say I am a well women, yes, am well, strong and healthy.

When I began to take your medicine my face was poor and eyes looked dead. I could not enjoy myself anywhere. I was tired and sick all the time. I could hardly do my house-work, but now I do that and tend a big garden, help my husband and take in sewing."

The following will prove interesting to feeble women generally, and especially so to those about to become mothers. Mrs. Dora A. Guthrie, of Oakley, Overton Co., Tenn., writes: "I never can thank you enough for what your treatment has done for me; I am stronger now than I have been for six years. When I began your treatment I was not able to do anything. I could not stand on my feet long enough to wash my dishes without suffering almost death; now I do all my housework, washing, cooking, sewing and everything for my family of eight. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine to take before confinement that can be found, or at least it proved so with me. I never suffered so little with any of my children as I did with my last and she is the healthiest we have. I recommend your medicines to all of my neighbors and especially 'Favorite Prescription' to all women who are suffering. Have induced several to try it, and it has proved good for them." Yours truly,

Dora A. Guthrie

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate leucorrhea, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions and irregularities, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness of the ovaries, accompanied with "internal heat."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For morning sickness or nausea, due to pregnancy, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia and kindred symptoms, its use will prove very beneficial.

A MEXICAN ADVENTURE.

Story of an Encounter with a Gentlemanly Bandit.

Some secrets are well kept. Among this number is surely to be reckoned the reason why a certain New York mining company, which several years ago secured rich gold prospects in the foothills of the Sierra Madres, in the state of Durango, Mexico, suddenly discontinued their active plans to develop those prospects, and after a lapse of about a year as suddenly resumed operations. There was, at the time, a mystery about this fickleness of procedure which baffled the assayist who assayed the samples from the prospects and found them to be of remarkable richness; and when, after this interval of a year, the mines were fully developed and operated with immense profit, the general mining public was at a loss to understand just why this interim of inactivity had been allowed to elapse. Certainly it was not for lack of capital, for the company had millions at its command, nor was it from any desire to speculate, for it resolutely refused the most tempting offers for its prospects.

Not long since, at his solitary camp fire in the Black hills, I spent a night in company with the mining engineer who had been sent to Mexico in charge of the initiatory operations for this New York company.

He was habitually as uncommunicative as a chunk of quartz, but I had overtaken him when his supply of tobacco had been out for the space of a day, and I was fortunately able to supply him with his favorite cut; therefore his lips were unsealed, and as he puffed the soothing leaf he related the history of his apparently futile Mexican expedition, which I give, as nearly as may be, in his own words:

"My first business, after arriving in Mexico, was to secure a competent guide and servant and animals, proceed to the prospects, secure extensive specimens of the mineral, and forward them, along with my report, to the company at New York. If my findings were favorable, I was promised that the word would be speedily sent back to push extensive developments, of which I was to have full charge.

"I was fortunate enough to secure as a guide a gruff, hardy old chap, who went by the name of 'Sassy Sam.' Almost his whole life had been spent on the plains as a United States government scout.

"We made the journey to the prospects without accident or incident worth mentioning. The prospects were far more flattering than I had anticipated, and we started back to the outskirts of civilization with pockets and pack saddles full of fine specimens.

"Just before crossing the Sierra de la Candela range my horse stumbled on a sharp stone and bruised itself sufficiently to cause a severe lameness.

"This necessitated my walking much of the way over the range, which was rough and precipitous. Whenever I was compelled to dismount in order to spell my disabled horse 'Sassy Sam' followed suit and kept me company on foot.

"We had scaled the ridge of the range and were beginning to descend the homeward side of the decline, having fallen probably about a mile behind the mounted Mexican servants.

"Our rifles were balanced over the knobs of our saddles, and we were plodding along in silence, drinking in the magnificent view of scenery which stretched away on every hand, when suddenly my guide gave a low exclamation of surprise.

"I glanced up in time to see a couple of uniformed Mexicans step into the trail a few rods in front of us, and cover us with their rifles.

"It was with poor grace that Sam recognized that they had the drop on us, for his hand seemed instinctively to reach for the trigger of his rifle.

"Their uniforms at once suggested to me a hopeful possibility. Were they not the revenue patrols of the Mexican government, who suspected us of being smugglers?

"I whispered in English my hopes to Sam, but he shook his head with a hang-dog, defeated air, and sententiously replied:

"'They're Contreres' men. He's the biggest bandit in the range. But I've a powerful notion to try a fling at 'em. I'd ruther be shot in an uneven fight than to be stripped, tied to a tree and left to be chawed up piece-meal by mountain lions and coyotes.'

"He was on the point of opening a spirited conversation with the 'Greasers,' in verification of his nickname, when I summarily silenced him, and asked him to remain passive and trust to me to see ourselves out of the scrape by stratagem—of what sort I had not the slightest idea.

"However, as our interceptors, keeping us under cover of their carbines, conducted us down the trail, I still cherished the hope that 'Sassy Sam' was in error, and that we were in the hands of government agents instead of Contreres, the bandit.

"But a sharp turn in the trail, which brought us in view of a ravine below, speedily dispelled that illusion, for there were our Mexican servants, stripped to the skin, while their clothing was being rummaged by a group of highwaymen.

"In marching the intervening distance I did more double-distilled thinking than I had done in the whole journey before—I might say in my whole life—but to no avail; for, think as I might, all plausible plans of escape eluded me with fatal perversity, and as we were marched up to the group of men I was about giving up all hope of concocting a scheme of escape, and wished that we had followed Sam's reckless impulse and made a bold break for liberty while we had only a couple of captors to deal with, instead of a score of them.

"We halted, and a tall, athletic, handsome young fellow stepped from the posse and called out:

"'Strip!'

"I confess that the fellow's imperious, but almost indifferent manner, as he gave the brief command, crossed his legs, leaned the tip of his elbow against the perpendicular face of the mountain, and rested his left hand on the knot of his rich saltillo zerape, while his right hand toyed with the jeweled hilt of his cuchillo, inspired me with a desire to accommodate him as quickly as possible, and my hands sought my vest buttons with spontaneous obedience, knocking my knuckles soundly against the specimens of quartz, with which my every pocket was bulging.

"My guide, however, was in quite a different mood. First muttering under his breath something in English about not allowing any 'dog of a Greaser' to talk to him in that way, he broke out into Spanish, in which he cursed the chief of the banditti roundly, and refused to stir a finger toward undressing.

"Contreres laughed quietly at this spirited rebellion against his commands, and remarked:

"'I like to hear a man talk that way. He might prove quite a companionable fellow.'

"But he did not descend to argument. At a nod of his handsome head a trio of his lieutenants seized the guide and made short work of the stripping process.

"Meantime the rap of my knuckles against the samples in my pocket started my ideas in a new line.

"'Senor,' said I, 'will you allow me to make a statement to you?'

"'Certainly; proceed,' he answered.

"Taking the samples from my pocket I said:

"'I am the engineer of a New York mining company and am returning from their prospects just beyond this range. These samples and those in the saddle bags, yonder, will satisfy you of the truth of this statement. I had already decided to make a favorable report upon the property, and it strikes me that it would be many times more to your profit to permit me to go on my way and make a report which will result in the operation of the mine and the hauling of gold bullion through your stronghold, than to leave us to the cougars and coyotes.'

"I was surprised at his answer, which was no answer at all, but simply an evasion in the form of another question.

"'What do you think your company would pay for a good prospect in this section?'

"'I could answer that only after seeing the prospect, and then only approximately,' I replied.

"He pulled his long, heavy, black mustache reflectively for a few minutes, and then said:

"'I have a prospect up here in the hills which is simply being worked in a crude way. It has never been examined by an expert, so far as I know. The fact is, that my intercourse with gentlemen of your profession has been confined strictly to passing interviews.'

"I smiled my appreciation of his joke. This seemed to please him. Perceiving that he was on his good nature, I determined to risk my chances on a bold, frank proposition.

"'Senor, I make you this proposition: Set my men and myself free, make us your guests instead of your captives and I will make a thorough examination and candid report upon your property. If I find it equal or superior to that which I have already examined I will recommend the company to purchase and operate it, in which case you are to guarantee them immunity and protection from all depredations. And in any event you pledge your honor as a gentleman to allow us to go our way in peace after I have made the examination and written the report, irrespective of what the latter may be.'

"Again he relapsed into meditation, and in his posture of elegant repose I was forced to the inward acknowledgment that he looked, every inch of him—to be a caballero, a perfect gentleman!

"Then, with the positiveness of the man of real decision of character he said:

"'Senor, I accept your proposition,' and enforced his words by stepping forward and giving me the embrace and handshake—the customary friendly greeting of a Mexican gentleman.

"My guide and servants were immediately released and their clothes were restored to them.

"We were then conducted through the mountains to where several peons were engaged in working his prospects, in a very crude way. During the nine days in which we remained his guests we were as hospitably entertained as the rude conveniences of a mountain camp would permit, for, of course, he was too shrewd and cautious to introduce us to any of the secrets of his stronghold, save that of the mine—and I must confess that I could not keep from liking and even admiring the man, who was not only a born leader of men, but a thoroughly cultured gentleman, who had fallen into high-handed ways through the doubtful practice of 'proclaiming' towns in periods of high political excitement and upheaval. His active followers numbered no less than one hundred, and probably most of the nearest rancheros were in league with him, as a matter of self preservation, if for no other reason.

"When my investigations were completed I made out my report to the company, recommending that they pay him eight thousand dollars for his claims and guarantee of protection.

"He was satisfied with this and we bade each other farewell with hearty embrace and hand-shakes.

"The conservative stockholders in New York debated long over the unique problem of faith in a gentleman's word of honor, but at last concluded that if the mine was rich enough to tempt them to risk their capital in its development, the output, in bullion, would be sufficient to tempt Senor Contreres to forget his fair promise of protection and swoop down upon the pack trains and appropriate the bulk of the profits of the enterprise.

"Therefore we decided to hold on to their property, but discontinue all efforts at development and wait for something to turn up.

"About a year later something did turn up, much to the discomfort of our genial host, Senor Contreres, in the shape of a formidable company of government scouts, who finally succeeded in routing the famous bandit from his stronghold and sending a bullet through his handsome body.

"Then the company resumed operations under charge of a new superintendent, and have developed the mine into a finely paying property.

"That is the secret of their long delay, which has perplexed many well-posted mining men. So far as I am concerned I believe Contreres would have kept his word to the last. He was just that kind of a man—a perfect gentleman."—Forrest Crissey, in Banner of Gold.

A GAMBLER'S MISTAKE.

He Was Actor Joe, and He Had Too Many Aces of Hearts.

They had been talking about western experiences when the commission merchant related the following, the truth of which he vouched for:

"It was in Nuggetsville, Cal., in 1849," he said, "and the gold craze and gambling were at their height. One day the law and order committee was summoned to Burns', a notorious gambling den, to inquire into the death of a man who, owing to his resemblance to the generally accepted type of tragedian, had received the title of 'Actor Joe.' He was a character who had dropped into the camp with apparently no other ambition than to make as much money from poker playing as his victims would permit. He was almost invariably successful, and the frequency with which he held four aces was remarkable.

"The inquiry was entirely too superficial, since the gentleman who had brought Joe's career to an end so suddenly had left town for parts unknown, but it brought to light the fact that the largest 'jack pot' ever staked in Nuggetsville was left to Joe and the unknown' to play out. The latter 'called,' and Joe laid down four aces, two of them being hearts. A search revealed three others of a different suit in his vest pocket. The verdict was that he had 'simply made a mistake.' A burial permit was given and the body was buried by popular subscription.

"Having occasion to pass the grave on the following day my attention was attracted by a card attached to the wooden slab that marked the spot on which some wag had written the following epitaph:

'Here lies an actor,
Who in life played many parts;
He held four aces once too oft,
Since two of them were hearts.'"

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

DELANO DIARY

—The GAZETTE and Weekly Globe $1.30

—The Eagle is nest hunting this week. Shoo! don't bother her.

—We print in another place a special from Darwin. Thanks to the sender.

—$1.30 cash will pay for the St Paul Weekly Globe, and the BUFFALO GAZETTE for one year.

—Maple syrup in abundance has been in town during the week past; few buyers are on hand. It brings $1. per gallon.

—LOST—A yellow memorandum book, with letter addressed to my wife. Finder please return and get reward.
26-p2 J. A. MAYER.

—On Wednesday morning our citizens found their sidewalks needed cleaning and at once the snow shovel that for several weeks had been resting was brought into use.

—Several cases of sore throat have been troubling people in this vicinity the past week. It is well to be careful during the changeable weather of spring and not catch colds.

—C. G. Roosen's letters in the Eagle, written from Europe, are much enjoyed throughout the county. As a letter writer the banker is about as successful as he is in figuring interest.

—Quite a sprinkling of Republicans attended the McKinley lecture at Minneapolis on Wednesday evening. Owing to the cold, stormy weather, probably, some were deterred from going.

—The Missionary services at the M. E. church on Easter Sunday evening were well attended and enjoyed by all present $3.21 was added to the fund for spreading the Gospel among the heathens.

--Reports from Howard Lake say that Forest and Fannie Staples are down with the diphtheria and under quarantine. The school closed; and Miss Ames one of the teachers is visiting home at Rockford until the scare is over.

--One prominent Republican gives as his excuse for not attending the protection lecture on Wednesday evening, at Minneapolis, that he never liked to be jammed about in such a crowd. Several others had business at home. One young lady went with the folks but preferred the Bijou theater where "Kentucky" was played.

--A petition has been numerously signed this week asking the city council to call a special election for the purpose of voting on the issuing of bonds not to exceed $10,000 for the purpose of supplying our village with water and electric lights. They should at the same time they place pipes in the ground for the other purposes arrange sewer pipes for draining the town perfectly. Let the good work go on.

--The city council expect to visit Litchfield soon to examine their electric and water plants. Don't fool away too much time and money riding around. Get circulars and find out by correspondence what you want and who has it before you make expensive trips. Delano wants the best or none. Sewerage should be provided for at the same time. It never can be put in so cheaply afterward, as at the same time the excavations are made.

—A special election has been called by our new city council on petition of numerous voters for Tuesday, April 10, to vote on whether or not the village shall be bonded for $10,000 for the purpose of securing a system of water works and electric lights for the village. It would be well to examine into these matters carefully and thus get the best while we are at it. Monticello we are told has not used her electric light plant for a couple of years. St. Paul it is said has discarded electric lights for street lighting. If these reports are facts the reasons should be enquired into before rushing into buying until it is fully understood.

—Pulling the ears of scholars is not a proper method of punishing them.

—George P. Schaffer has received a fine new line of goods. Spring styles.

—All is not harmony at the school house. The board will have to do some arbitrating at its next meeting.

--At the meeting of the Delano Choral Society held Monday evening the constitution and by-laws were read and adopted; officers were elected to serve until the first meeting in July; the evening for meeting was changed from Monday to Wednesday, and the time for meeting will be 7:30, no one being admitted after 8 o'clock. Only members of the society will be admitted to the practices.

Personals.

William Ziebarth visited Hanover today.

Charles Eppel visited the cities on Wednesday.

Frank Brazie, of Monticello Sundayed in Delano.

Postmaster J. C. Johnson and wife of Lyndale visited Delano yesterday.

Rev. Sherrill shook hands with friends at the depot Monday on his way west.

S. S. Breed, of St. Paul, was in town on Tuesday looking after his property interests.

Miss Rose Eppel returned to Howard on Tuesday. She says Howard does lots of Post Office business.

George Blackwell took in the McKinley meeting and then rode on to Litchfield returning this morning.

F. G. Nott, Howard Lake's, thoroughbred travelling man, interviewed his Delano customers on Tuesday.

Nick Frank, of St. Bonifacius and John Coolen, Jr., of Lester Prairie, lumber merchants, Sundayed at home.

John Campbell and a couple of ladies from Watertown passed through town on Tuesday, for Darwin and Litchfield.

Miss Carrie Galley of Royalton and Amanda Peterson of Dassel, were among those attending the social at the city hall last night.

Curtis B. Grafft, of Hamline, has been visiting Delano relatives and friends this week. Grover was terribly tickled to see him.

Harry Haines left on Monday for a promotion in St. Paul. His many friends here are sorry to loose him but glad to see him do well.

F. S. Herrick, of York State is holding down the day job on the G. N. in place of Harry Haines. This is his first experience in the West.

Johnston Mealey, of Howard Lake, drove through town Tuesday. He rides a sulky like an old timer and his colt has the appearance of something fast.

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor.
EDWARD FREEMAN Assis't.

At the meeting of last Friday's Senate, some articles of the Tariff bill were discussed, but a motion was made that they be laid aside until next meeting.

Several new bills were read and then "Woman Suffrage" was again discussed. This has been debated several times but it is such an important and apparently inexhaustible subject that a very animated debate ensued. The bill was passed and caused great rejoicing among those who are anxious to become citizens of the U. S. in reality.

A bill proposing the anexation of the Hawaiian Islands was then read and after some argument was passed.

A bill advocating the prohibition of the manufacture of liquors was read, but not much time being left, it was left to be decided at the next meeting.

Senate adjourned at the usual time.

Arthur Powell, our former assistant editor, has found it necessary to leave school. He has gone to the cities where he expects to find employment.

One of our dignified Seniors is seen quite often attempting to "trip the light fantastic toe" and seems to be progressing wonderfully.

The pupils in the botany class during the warm weather were in hopes they would be able to botanize soon, but as winter appears to have returned they must wait a while longer.

Prof Dewey went down Wednesday evening to hear Mr. McKinley.

The plays are now being rehearsed in the city hall so as to be accustomed to the arrangement of the stage.

Mark Twain's works are to be taken up at the next meeting of Pickwick. A most interesting program is expected.

The delightful odor of hydrogen sulphide has filled the chemistry room this week.

Rev. Cowley and F. A. Barth of Watertown passed through town, on Tuesday, on their way to Darwin, to attend the Catholic temperance meeting.

Among Our Exchanges.

The Republicans who think they can elect a majority of the next House by bunco methds are doomed to a rude awakening.—St. Cloud Times.

Bob Ingersoll, who sulked in his tent for several years, has again become a strong Republican, but in other respects the party is doing quite well. – Minneapolis Tribune.

Apaism is rapidly growing weary of itself and seems destined to die a very easy death. Candidates for office now make sworn statements that they never belonged to it.—St. Peter Herald.

The county auditor received a draft from the state auditor Saturday for sum of $230, that being the state's proportion of the wolf bounties paid out since January 1.—Elk River, Star-News.

Prof. Geo. B. Aiton of Minneapolis, State Inspector of High schools, spent Friday in town inspecting the Monticello school. He expressed himself highly gratified at the work being done under Prof. Newkirk.—Monticello items, Sherburne County Times.

Hon. Beriah Magoffin of Duluth is in the field as a candidate for collector of the port and the contest is now between Thomas, Olund and Magoffin. The latter is an excellent and worthy gentleman and is a Democrat too, but he doesn't work much at it. That is where Morris Thomas has the better of him. Morris is what you may call a game Democrat. –BEDE'S BUDGET.

O. A. Phipps, who was married, last October to Miss Lizzie Bertram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bertram, of Monticello, dropped dead last Sunday while visiting at the home of his brother in Paynesville. Mr. Phipps was also a resident of Paynesville and one of the leading businessmen of that village. The funeral was on yesterday and notwithstanding the inclement weather, there was a large company of friends and neighbors in attendance. —Buffalo Journal.

1. C. Staples was elected mayor of Little Falls last Tuesday, defeating N. Richardson by a majority of thirty. It was a very close election and a red hot fight. On account of the steady rain the vote was light, only 896 votes being cast. Staples is a democrat, and Richardson is a Republican. The contest was not based on party lines, however, the issue being for the enforcement of the laws regarding the saloons, gambling and the social evil Mr. Staples was pledged to reform in these particulars, and if he stands by his pledges Little Falls will get a great turning over.—Brainerd Journal.

Revival services will be held at the M. E. church every night next week. Rev. Koch and Presiding Elder Shannon will assist in the services. All are invited.

Eighth-one persons united with the Presbyterian church in this city last Sunday, the largest number of persons that ever united with a single church in Brainerd in one day.

The revival services conducted in the Congregational church in East Brainerd by Rev. Archibald Speers are proving very successful. It is expected that the meetings will be conducted all of next week. A number of conventions have taken place. –Brainerd Journal.

At the teachers examination held here last week a rather peculiar method was adopted in distributing the question the second and last day. The subjects for the day were physiology and hygiene, hygiene, theory and practice, civil government and reading, some for the morning session and some for afternoon. In this case some of the applicants were given questions on afternoon subjects during the morning session and the folly of such a course is evident. Applicants, for instance, who have finished civil government before the noon hour are able to furnish questions to those who have not yet reached that subject, and under these circumstances would not have any difficulty in passing the examination. When teachers are scarce and a point has to be strained in granting certificates, this might possibly be excusable; but under the present conditions it would seem that a more careful selection should be made. The reason given for following this method at the recent examination was that an insufficient number of questions forms had been furnished by the State superintendent. By copying the questions on the blackboard they would have been in the reach of all and could have been disposed of at the proper time.—Howard Lake Herald.

The Color of Gold.

"Most people suppose," says an assayer, "that all gold is alike when refined, but this is not the case. An experienced man can tell at a glance from what part of the world a gold piece comes, and in some cases from what part of a particular gold district the metal was obtained. The Australian gold, for instance, is distinctly redder than the Californian, and this difference in color is always perceptible, even when one thousand fine. Again, the gold obtained from the placers is yellower than that which is taken directly from the quartz. Why this should be the case is one of the mysteries of metallurgy, for the placer gold all comes from the veins. The Ural gold is the reddest found anywhere. Few people know the real color of gold, as it is seldom seen unless heavily alloyed which renders it redder than when pure."—The Rams Horn.

Still Not Understood.

I cannot help but reply to the remarks of Mr. J. W. Powell in your issue of March 23. I think he should first understand that he may be understood. He starts out by saying that he is not opposed to the I. O. O. F. as an order and said all good things he could about them. But that is overdone. Now I think if Mr. Powell knew the teachings of Odd Fellowship he would not make the statement. He is also very far from having any knowledge of the principles of Odd Fellowship when he makes the statement that it is merely a social and secular institution. First Mr. Powell should be versed in the principles and teachings of Odd Fellowship before he condems it from everything else but a social institution.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

Vick's Floral Guide, 1894.

It contains descriptions that describe, not mislead; illustrations that instruct, not exaggerate. This year it comes to us in a suit of gold oriented in eight different colors besides black. Colored plates of Chrysanthemums, Poppies and Vegetables. On the the front cover is a very exquisite bunch of Vick's New White Branching Aster and on the back is the New Double Anemone; 112 pages filled with many new novelties of value as well as all the old leading varities of flowers and vegetables. We advise our friends who intend doing anything in the garden this year to consult Vick before starting operations. Send 10 cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Vick's Guide, it costs nothing, as you can deduct the 10 cents from the first order. It certainly will pay you. 29-tf

VARIOUS TIMES.

WRITTEN FOR OUR HOUSEHOLD.

What troublous times!
What tiresome times! to which all things are Tom credits Bill, he credits Lee, [due.
And thus this state of things you see,
And even worse—were driven to.

What wretched times!
What trusting times! to which these things are
The merchant trust the farmer men [due.
And in his turn gets trust again.
Oh dear what shall we do?
What clashing times!
What broken times! this state of things leads
The banker breaks and goes to smash, [to
The merchant says all trade is cash
Or else he'll smash up too.

What scurring times!
What mortgaged times! all trades are driven
The farmer gives dwhy his wheat, [to
And thus he can't his payments meet,
And when he fails all trades fail too.

What joyful times!
What peaceful times all this may lead us to.
When every man the cash shall pay
For all he buys on that same day;
Then none we'll owe and "nought's to pay"
That state of things will do. H. T. A.

AN examination for candidates for appointment to the Annapolis Naval Academy is to be held at Duluth April 18.

THE new whisky law in South Carolina don't seem to be altogether a success. The State's saloons can't control things much better than private parties. Governor has been obliged to order out the militia.

THE Union Veterans League of Minneapolis it is said threatens to disband on account of the treatment they received on the occasion of McKinley's visit to Minneapolis, when some of them couldn't get a seat in the Exposition building.

SOME spicy communications have appeared in the Minneapolis dailies lately by "old soldier not a coffee cooler" and others. Some call others "liars." This looks bad in print boys. You ought not to get so excited over seats to hear McKinley.

IT has been whispered about the country lately that Arch-Bishop Ireland owns a controlling interest in both the St. Paul Globe and Pioneer Press. It seems John Ireland is becoming about as great a man as John G. Saxe's famous "Nick Van Stann."

SPEAKER CRISP was appointed by Gov. Northern, of Georgia, to fill the unexpired term of Senator Colquitt. The speaker has concluded not to be promoted at present but to hold on to the Speakership of the House where he thinks he can be useful. A wise conclusion.

SENATOR BALDWIN is said to have been again successful in obtaining an office for his applicant. This time Emil Olund for collector of customs at Duluth. If he can now succeed in securing free trade a little nearer than we have he will be pleasing his constituency.

THANKS to that enterprising sheet the Minneapolis Journal, we who staid at home, 30 miles from Minneapolis could toast our toes and read McKinley's greatest effort of his life, at the same time the apostle of protection was reading it to his audience in the Exposition building.

THE ministers seem to be getting their eyes open, some of them have them already wide open, and have been opening their mouths in terrible denunciation of the rule of the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul under Mayors Eustice and Wright, both of whom are Republicans.

BEDE'S BUDGET comes to our table this week with a full account of Bede's banquet, which must have been a very interesting affair. T. E. Bowen has become editor and publisher, J. Adam still being proprietor, of the Budget which will be kept up to its well earned reputation as a readable and reliable Democratic paper.

IT is rather amusing to us country folks to read the desperate efforts of the Pioneer Press to side-track ex-Gov. McGill in his candidacy for mayor. The P. P. claims that it is a friend of the ex-Gov. but fears the effect upon the voters when the Democrats come to cry out that he is a Minneapolis man, because he lives in some St. Paul suburb between the two cities. These suburbers are fine fellows so long as they vote to suit the P. P.—but when they want an office they live too far from the P. P. office.

WE intimated last week that perhaps the McKinley meeting was intended for the purpose of freezing out some other candidate. Sure enough, the announcement is already out that Tom Reed will lecture in St. Paul soon after the 4th district congressional nomination on the Republican ticket is made. The weather will be warmer; farmers will likely feel better; times be improving and things generally more favorable for Mr. Reed. Beside it is said he is after the speakership of the next Congress. Of course; but with a weather-eye out for the larger fruit. We think both candidates are picking their persimmons rather green.

THE Litchfield Indedendent in an able article on the subject of pine land dealings after giving the committee appointed by the Legislature its dues for the good work done, says: "Isn't it time for the public press to come to their assistance, take up the cudgels and make the public sentiment of the state too hot for the scoundrels, who have so long infested it?" Let there be such an agitation of the question that all these political parties shall make it an issue and send ta the next legislature only those who are pledged to take up the work where the committee will be obliged to leave it for lack of funds." It seems to us a legislator should be a man able and willing to discharge his duty on all questions that may come up before the legislature while he is a member. The idea of electing a man to the legislature to vote for W. D. Washburn to go to the U. S. Senate; to vote against the new capitol bill; to vote for an appropriation to catch pine land thieves with; or for prohibition; or for any other single object alone while others of more or less moment and upon which his vote may decide are left for him to do as he pleases with. The ideal legislator is a man who will fearlessly do right, so far as his conscience dictates; the best way to do is to elect men to the legislature, and to other offices, who have consciences of their own, and allow them to follow their own consciences. Then will there be less need for investigating committees to use up all the money they find stolen in hunting for and obtaining it from the parties who wrongfully became its possessors.

Miserly Meanness.

When some old man alone in the world, begins to think he might live to an extreme old age and become poor, and an object of charity begins to save up his meagre earnings; to lay in what he can; to live a little more frugally than has been his wont, that he may have sufficient to last through his declining days and with which to give him a decent burial his neighbors and acquaintances almost invariably begin to call him stingy, mean; and soon he is known throughout the neighborhood as a stingy, mean old miser.

When a man moves his family onto a farm far out upon the prairie, and plants out a big lot of trees to furnish himself with firewood, and raises cattle, horses, sheep, poultry, swine, and corn, wheat, potatoes and every thing he needs to live on, and to feed his family with, and never leaves the farm nor permits his family to, he is very soon set down as a crank, and an ignorant old fool, and such other expressive terms as those knowing the circumstances can think of, and when his boys and girls are large enough he teaches one to do the carpenter work, the blacksmithing, and to build a loom for the large girls to weave the clothes for the family, and a spinning wheel for spinning the wool grown on the sheep on their own farm. And if any young man wants to visit the house the frugal farmer orders him away. No book peddler or insurance man or even a preacher dare come on to the premises. If one should happen to make his way to the house he would find the family af wild as the animals in the pasture and as much afraid of a stranger.

When a colony of people band themselves together and move onto the frontier and try to live within themselves, and have a minister, a lawyer, a doctor, a miller, merchant butcher, blacksmith and what ever else they think they may need, all their own, they are not calculated to advance in the scale of civilization very rapidly. They soon become known, far and near, as the people who are trying to live alone; those clannish folks. In the early settlement of this county even, and to a large extent yet, we hear of little communities where people of a particular kind are congregated together, and so long as they do not become clannish all is well, but when they begin to think they must live entirely among themselves; have nothing but their own home made tools to work with, read nothing but their own literature, books and papers, all printed in their own mother tongue then do we hear of this settlement and that settlement who are led around by the nose by this or that man who happens to be most prominent among them.

And when one state in this union sets herself up to dictate to her people that they must live entirely alone, that what they want they must buy at home then does the law of the land step in and say oh, no! We will have inter state commerce; we will buy what we want of our neighbors, we will bring our apples and grapes from California, or we will have fine tender beef from Kansas or Montana, and we will have no laws interferring with us doing business where we please, and all the people agree.

But when it comes to national matters there are those who try hard to make us believe that our own interests demand that we do all our own work at home; that we live on what we can get at home and pay whatever price those who manufacture see fit to ask. It is claimed that our country is better off when it has a home market, when it eats up all it raises each year, clean; when it lives from hand to mouth; when it don't buy from its neighbors. When it don't have any ships to carry freight and passengers to and from the different countries on the face of the globe. When it keeps foreigners away from here as far as possible. They want the nation to be clannish; to live by itself; to make its own goods and wares; to read its own literature; to be American as distinct from all other peoples, many of whom we can, and have, learned much from. They want the nation like the farmer above to live within its own inclosure, to use up its own wares; to live in ignorance of the rest of the world. They want the nation to be a mean, miserly, clannish, contemtpable old nation with a Chinese wall of protective tariff around it, so strong as to prohibit many useful and needful articles from being brought here, and effectually blocking our ports against the commerce of the world. For what nation would load her ships for our ports when they could not unload until they had given half their cargo for tariff? And what ships would come empty to our country for our wheat and other products when they could get them where they sell their own products?

Pro. Kennedy Some More.

According to the evidence, Madaline Pollard was, when Col Breckenridge took her out riding in a closed carriage that fine summer evening, a fine, stately, vivacious, well developed young woman, of about twenty or twenty-one years of age, and was as eagre as he to go the way of the transgressor. I have heard people say, who have kept track of the case, that almost any man would have done the same as Col. Breckenridge, had he been in the Colonel's place that night. But I think that is putting it too strong. There are men, (such as Mr. Gutzwiller, of the Eagle, and Supt. Lewis, of Hennepin county), whose lives have been so pure that, with a due appreciation of the "value and force of truth," I think I can say, would have stopped the carriage and got out and walked back to Covington on foot.

Deacon H. M. Wilcox recommends Dickens' "Childs History of England" for use in the Hennepin county schools for occasional reading lessons. Of this book the Irish Standard of Minneapolis says: "Dickens' Childs History of England, as a history, has no merits at all, and very many grievous faults, and it abounds in the grossest insults to Catholicity." The Deacon has always been in sympathy with the anti-Catholic movements, but as he is just now seeking the Republican nomination for superintendent, which he could not hope to get in Catholic Hennepin without some Catholic support, his efforts in behalf of the A. P. A. are given on the sly. He is also very private in recommending anti-Catholic books, and would doubtless deny my statement about the Dickens' Childs history, but I have his, (the Deacon's) letter to a Maple Plain gentleman to corroborate my statement. The letter was written on the 26th ult., in reply to the Maple Plain man's inquiry as to whether the book was a proper one to be used in the public schools. Deacon Wilcox, before he was installed as assistant superintendent, was not known to the people of Rural Hennepin to speak of, at all. He had lived and taught school in a neighborhood in the southern edge of Minneapolis for a number of years, in a district through which the southern corporation line of the metropolis passes, and which is a veritable hotbed of A. P. Aism. His association had been almost altogether in the city, and with anti-Catholic zealots. He is a great admirer of G. L. Morrill and Wayland Hoyt, the two Minneapolis preachers who have become so notorious for their uncalled for abuse of Catholicity. The latter lectured before the Teachers' Association todav, by invitation of the assistant superintendent and his chief. But Father Cleary has also lectured to the teachers. They got him hoping to secure some Catholic votes thereby. Wilcox is going about saying to every Catholic he meets: "I like Catholics." He has said this so often, I am told, that his words are echoed all over the county. The other candidates for the Republican nomination are confronted at every turn with the question, "Do you like Catholics?"

The Deacon is getting there. He wishes the Catholics to remember him in the convention, and they will.

Wilcox is Deacon of the Baptist church in Richfield, on the southern line of Minneapolis.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30, 1894.

President Cleveland, after hearing everything that could be said on every side of the question, and after deeper study than he has given to any single measure passed by this Congress, has finally disposed of the Bland bill for the coinage of the seigniorage. His disposition of the bill is necessarily unsatisfactory to many prominent and influential members of the party. That could not have been avoided. It would have been precisely the same, only it would have been a different set of democrats who would have been disappointed, had his action been reversed The situation was not unlike that wich preceeded Mr. Cleveland's celebrated tariff reform message, and he acted just as he did then, taking the course he believed to be right and proper, believing that time will, as it did with the tariff, bring the dissatisfisd democrats around to his way of thinking. Some democrats in Congress are allowing their disappointment to run away with their discretion, and are saying things that they will regret when they see their words used by republicans against the democratic party.

Probably no more representative gathering of prominent democrats ever assembled in Washington than that which attended the housewarming of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee held in their new headquarters this week. The committe which received the guests was composed of Senator Faulkner, chairman of the Congressional committee; Hon. W. F. Harrity, chairman of the National committe; Hon. Chauncey F. Black, president of the National Association of Democratic Clubs, and Mr. Lawrence Gardner, secretary of the Congressional committeee. The committee is now ready for business, and a quorun of the executive committe will be at headquarters daily until the close of the Congressional campaign.

Representative Sayers, of Texas, believes with his great democratic predecessor at the head of the House committee on Appropriations, the late Samuel J. Randall, that the system of permanent or continuing appropriations is wrong and should be done away with, leaving all aporopriations to be made annually, and his bill providing for the change will probably be favorably reported to the house at any day, and he believes it will pass. The late Samuel J. Randall introduced a similar bill in the Forty-seventh, Congress, and it passed the House, but not the Senate The amount of these continuing appropriations over which Congress can, under the present system exercise no detailed supervision, is $130. 000,000, a year. Some of these continuing appropriations are nearly a century old and are senseless and in some cases wasteful. Chairman Sayers' bill is thoroughly democratic and ought to become a law. It will save money and reform a bad system.

Senator Morgan believes that his Nicaragua Canal bill will become a law and that the canal will be well under way before the close of the Fifty-third Congress. The bill is now being considered by the Senate committee on Foreign Relations. It provides for the guaranteeing of the bonds of the canal company to the extent of $100, 000,000 and gives this government practically the control of the canal, both while being built and after it is in operation.

The oppposition to the new treaty with China, this week favorably reported without amendment by the Senate committee on foreign relations has been greatly exaggerated. No democrat so far as known has any serious objections to the treaty, except several from the Pacific coast, and they say that with a slight modification the treaty would be acceptable to them.

The Pollard-Breckenridge trial has reached its dirtiest stage this week, and notwithstanding the request of the judge that the filthy details be suppressed, several of the local papers published them in full. The end of the trial is not yet in sight.

The seat in the Senate chamber that was occupied by the late Senator Colquitt is still draped in mourning. Not much interest is expressed in who will fill out his unexpired term, because the new Senator will have less than a year to serve and it is understood that neither of the gentlemen known to be candidates for the full term—there are at least two in the House—will be appointed by the Governor of Georgia to the vacancy. Although it could be considered in the light of a promotion Speaker Crisp's friends are urging him to declare himself a candidate. Representative Turner is understood to have entered the race.

The unexpected resignation of Sixth Auditor Brawley, of the Treasury department, to take effect upon the appointment of his successor, has made a lot of gossip. The position is an important one, and Mr. Brawley has held it less than a year.

TRIP TO LITCHFIELD.

Delano Council Royally Entertained.

Mayor Kohler, Councilmen Coffin, Dyer, and Horsch and Recorder Mealey made a trip to Litchfield Wednesday morning returning home Thursday morning bright and early. The object of the trip was to, in their official capacity, examine into the workings of the Litchfield water and electric light plants, with a view of supplying Delano with these great essentials of modern civilization. The Litchfield people took great pains to show them about and impart to them much valuable information on the subject of their use, and how to get them and keep them running etc., etc. The entire company including ye editor who accompanied them, were taken care of at the Litchfield house in good style, without expense to them or the village of Delano; quite an item these hard times. Messrs. E. P. Peterson, president of the council, and Aldermen Frank Simmonds, Henry McGannon and S. J. Betts and M. E. Baum, chief of fire department, and engineer Will Miller, took particular pains to explain the minutia and intricate workings of the systems; and most of them accompanied the party to the City hall, the fire department quarters, the city lockup and the city park; all the newspaper offices, where editors Mullen, Peterson and Joubert and there entire working forces received the visitors in the most pleasing manner. The P. & K. iron works were visited and looked through with much interest. The proprietors Messrs Parsons & Kellman came to Litchfield three years ago and have built up a good trade in their line. They run a regular foundry; Some section posts marked and ready for placing at the corners of sections throughout the county were exhibited, they are rather larger than old fashioned wooden ones, ond cost already for use, $1.25 each. Lots of trouble would be saved by having them in all counties. They make a neat blacksmith forge; and a specialty of a patent grindstone hanger, the patentor Mr. O. H. Hanson being a Grove City man: this pleased the mechanical part of the crowd vastly. A new creamery was pointed out. Mr. Grono the tombstone man was not entirely forgotten. He has a nice business in his line; and some fine work. Dr. Kennedy a pioneer of '56 has just returned to the city and opened up an office. Dr. Robertson who has an extensive practice, and a fine residence supplied with city water, a convenience which he prizes highly, joined the party and aided the Delanoites in having a good time generally. Ye editor leaving on the 4 o'clock train did not see the plants in operation but the council inform us that they witnessed the throwing of a stream of water over the water tank 115 feet high, proving that the protection was good in case of fire. The lights are for the streets are lights, for indoor use incandescent lights requiring two costly machines to make them. They gave our council the impression that they would be a fine thing to have in town.

Binding Twine.

Henry Wolfer, warden of the penitentiary, at Stillwater has sent out a lot of samples of the prison made binding twine. The twine is of hemp, grown in Minnesota, Iowa and Kentucky, mostly. Mr. Wolfer says:

"This twine will be sold the present season at a price not to exceed 7 cents per pound, and lower, if necessary, to meet competition of any twine of any length and quality that may be placed on the market, said price to be finally determined by the Board of Managers June 1, 1894. All the purchasers of twine previous to that date will be entitled to the benefit of any reductions below seven cents that may be made by the Board. There need, therefor, be no hesitancy in placing orders now, as the prices will be adjusted as above indicated." Farmers who will need twine this fall, if they like the twine, will do well to place their orders in time. Call and get a sample at the GAZETTE office. We have a full ball for examination. 26tf

Still Not Understood.

Your correspondent from Annandale still persists in not understanding my position on Odd Fellowship, I ought to be acquainted with the principles of the order, as I was a member for many years, and own a clearance card now, and would be a member still, had I always found a lodge in the towns where I lived. But for the first time in these forty years have I found a person claiming Odd Fellowship to be equal to the church of Jesus Christ. It never was designed to be a church. Then it must be as I claim, a social and secular institution, having the Bible as its moral basis. So may a bank or a store be run on a high moral basis, but would they not still be a secular business. The life insurance and benevolent feature of the order is for the secular and personal benefit of its own member. There can be no objection to this. But was the order organized for any spiritual of saving purpose, and to persuade and lead persons to be Christians in the higher spiritual sence. All know that it was not so intended. Would the members of a lodge permit the "Noble Grand" to call up mourners and have an alter service to get souls converted, and allow the Chaplain to administer the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper? Odd Fellowship has its place in society, and its proper work as a social institution. I do not condemn it. But my criticism in Delano was, the excessive interest taken in the lodge to the almost entire neglect of the church, and of some men resting in the lodge as if it would save them. I had no design to slur the order but to correct a wrong. Give proper attention to the interest of the lodge, but don't neglect religion and the church of Jesus Christ. Put the church and its interests always first. "Seek first the Kingdom of God and his righeousness," but neglect not the social and seeular intereste of life. But if either has to be neglected, let it not be the church of God. I hope I will now be understood, and this discussion will cease. J. W. POWELL.

Hennepin County Affairs.

The regular meeting of the Board of County Commissioners held this morning was uneventful. A report submitted by the register of deeds shows receipts amounting to $1,544 90 and disbursements of $1,249.54 The report of the clerk of court shows receipts of $1.429.39 and expenses of $1,249.54. The poor farm has received $604.27 and expended $424 80, and has at the present time 68 inmates.

The Merrill Abstract Company had a grievance, which was referred to the committe on finance. The company claims that the clerk of courts has been charging it 25 cents for making judgment searches and 25 cents for each judgment found. It is claimed that this is contrary to law, and the company wants the excess money paid since Jan. 1, 1893, returned. The clerk claims that even at the figures charged the county gets far the worst of it, as there is a vast amount of work connected with securing the desired information. It is not probable that the board will allow the rebate.—Minneapolis Tribune, April 2.

Literary Note.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE A CONTRIBUTOR TO THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE.

The singular good fortune has fallen to the lot of The Cosmopolitan Magazine of presenting one of the most remarkable pieces of fiction ever written—remarkable because of its author and remarkable because it has remained unsuspected and undiscovered for more than a hundred years, only to be given to the world at last in an American magazine. During a recent call at the office of the editor of The Cosmopolitan, he mentioned that he had on the presses in the April number a literary treasure, and asked me to guess the name, saying that it was written by a most distinguished person. After a moment's thought I ventured:

"President Harrison?"
"Greater than he," was the reply. "Guess again."
"Blaine?"
"Greater than Blaine."
"Gladstone?"
"Greater than he."
"Bismarck?"
"Greater than he."
"Emperor William?"
"Much Greater."
"Pope Leo XIII?" I guessed wildly.
"Greater than he."
Then I was at a loss, and hesitated.
"You must not confine yourself to living men," he interrupted.
"You say it is a piece of fiction and by a man greater than Bismarck, Gladstone, the Emperor William? I confess you puzzle me."
"Well suppose I say it was a Corsican story." The riddle was solved. A story was actually in existence by Napoleon Bonaparte. The Manuscript had survived the vicissitudes of war and exile. Had remained locked up for a hundred years and was now about to be brought to light in America. It appears from the researches made by the French Napoleonic scholar, Frederic Masson, who vouches for the fact over his own signature, that Napoleon, when a young lieutenant, wrote a Corsican story. The manuscript of this he confined to his uncle, Cardinal Fesch, then Archbishop of Lyons. When Cardinal Fesch died in 1839, his papers were intrusted to his Grand Vicar, Abbe Lyonnet. Napoleon's manuscript was sold by the abbe to Libri, a member of the Academy and Inspector of French libraries. Libri sold this and some other manuscripts to Lord Ashburnham for $40,000, and from 1842 to a recent date Napoleon's manuscripts slumbered in Ashburnham Castle. The Cosmopolitan maintains staff editors in both London and Paris, men of wide acquirements, who spend their time in searching exclusively for what is likely to be of great value to the magazine To the Paris editor belongs the honor of securing for an American periodical the interesting manuscript from the pen of the world's greatest personality.

THINGS are not always harmonious when great men meet. On Emerson's last visit to England he sought out Ruskin and went to his house to see his pictures and other works of art there. IT is well-known that girls of a marriageable age do not like to tell how old they really are, but you can find out if you will follow the subjoined rules; First, tell her to put down the number of the month in which she was born, then to multiply it by 2, then add 5, multiply by 50, then to add her age, then to subtract 365. Next have her add 115 and then tell the total amount left. In this grand total the two figures to the right will tell you her age and the other the month of her birth. For example, if the amount is 822, she is 22 years old and was born in August —the eighth month.

IN Germany there is a yearly average of 2.71 suicides to every 10,000 of the population, while in France, Austria, England and Italy the averages are 1.87, 1.63, .76 and .46 respectively. As regards suicides in the army, Austria comes first, with 12.53 to every 10,000 men, followed by Germany with 6.33, Italy with 4, France with 3.33 and England with 2.09. As far as known the fear of punishment for misconduct plays the chief part in driving soldiers to self-destruction. And it is worthy of notice that twice as many non-commissioned officers as privates fall by their own hand during the year.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.
Regular Session.

WEDNESDAY, March 28.—Resolutions were introduced in the senate asking the secretary of war whether subordinate employes and laborers engaged by engineer officers have been employed or discharged for political reasons; directing the finance committee to prepare a bill for the repeal of all laws authorizing the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds or other interest-bearing obligations without specific authority, and one calling for information regarding changes made in the weight or fineness of silver coins of silver standard countries. A bill to provide for the free and unlimited coinage of silver was introduced by Mr. Stewart, of Nevada. In the house an attempt to discuss the two election cases of O'Neill vs. Joy and English vs. Hilborn showed the lack of a quorum

THURSDAY, March 29.—In the senate the pension appropriation bill was reported, and the house joint resolution appropriating $10,000 additional to carry out the provisions of the Chinese exclusion act and the McGarrahan land claim bill were passed. In the house the president's message vetoing the Bland silver seigniorage bill was received. No business was transacted.

FRIDAY March 30.—The senate was not in session to-day. In the house Mr. Bland gave notice that on April 3 he would move to pass the seigniorage bill over the veto. No business was transacted.

SATURDAY, March 31.—No session was held in the senate to-day. In the house bills were introduced for the free and unlimited coinage of silver dollars of 413½ grains and for an additional district judge for the Northern district of Illinois. The river and harbor bill was reported, and the remainder of the day was devoted to eulogies upon the life, character and public services of the late Representative O'Neill, of Pennsylvania.

MONDAY, April 2.—Senator Voorhees (dem., Ind.) opened the tariff debate in the senate and in his speech denounced the protective system of tariff taxation. The nominations of Thomas E. Benedict, of New York, to be public printer, and James D. Yeomans, of Iowa, to be interstate commerce commissioner, were received from the president. In the house a fruitless attempt was made to secure a quorum in order to bring the O'Neill-Joy contested election case to a close.

THE BALLAD OF BENJAMIN.

Into the west rode Benjamin H.,
On his iron steed so fair,
He rode all day and he rode all night
To see what might be there.

Into the west rode Benjamin H.,
And he trimmed his words with care,
For the speeches he spake and the talks he talked
Said nothing of getting there.

Into the west rode Benjamin H.,
And grandpa's hat went, too,
But he kept it hid in a dark valise,
Entirely out of view.

Into the west rode Benjamin H.,
And Maj. McKinley sighed;
For he had some doubt of what might be
The result of such a ride.

Into the west rode Benjamin H.,
And Mr. T. B. Reed
Scratched his dome of thought reflectively
And gave the matter heed.

Into the west rode Benjamin H.,
Some pointers for to get;
He rode all day and he rode all night,
And he hasn't "got there" yet.

THE FAILURE OF PROTECTION.

The McKinley Theory Based Upon a Disaster Producing System.

It is interesting to note that while the United States is engaged in the attempt to shake off the incubus of the McKinley law, all Europe is in "an economic ferment," as some writer has phrased it. It is well known that all the principal nations of the continent have high protective tariffs. According to the doctrines which have dominated our legislation since 1861 they ought all to be happy.

On the contrary, they are all unhappy. France is giving another turn to the screw, showing that the tariff of 1891 has not brought about the blessings expected. Quite the reverse. The chamber of commerce at Marseilles declares that since its adoption there have been a constant reduction of commercial operations, a lack of new enterprises, a suppression of many that previously existed, that no new factories are building, that those burned down are not replaced, that the number of idle ships grows larger every day; in short, that there has been a change for the worse in foreign commerce, attended by a similar condition in agriculture and internal commerce. The remedy now proposed is a still higher tariff, another turn of the screw, an expedient certain to aggravate the evils now prevailing.

In Italy there is chaos. Uprisings have occurred to resist the outrageous taxes on the necessaries of life, and these have to be put down by military force. At the same time there is a deficiency in the revenue, and while it is proposed to reduce expenditures the proposed economies are admitted to be insufficient to avoid a deficit. New taxes are proposed, to be levied upon a people already exhausted by excessive taxation.

Fifteen years ago Germany entered upon the enterprise of making the people happy by protective taxes. This was largely in the interest of agriculture, which demanded to be shielded from the curse of cheap food. The system ran its usual course. It did not answer expectations, and its advocates said it was not high enough. So in 1885 rates were put up again. Two years later it was thought necessary to make a further increase.

These constantly augmenting imposts on the necessaries of life have caused great distress among the poor of Germany. But what effect have they had upon agriculture? For answer let us turn to the recent speech of Dr. Miquel, in the reichstag. He has been counted on in some quarters as an opponent of the treaty with Russia, as he is known to be in sympathy with the agrarians. He said that the main task of the Prussian government for the next few years must be to devise effectual assistance for agriculture. In spite of this he favored the treaty. "In any case," he added, "the treaty can not render the condition of husbandry any worse than it is."

Such is the effect of fifteen years of high protection upon German agriculture. Even in the opinion of its warmest friends its condition cannot be any worse. This is but a repetition of the experience of the United States. We have had a continued demand for higher rates, and they have been advanced from time to time. The McKinley bill went to the extreme of high protection, and what is to-day the condition of our industries? According to the statements of the parties interested they were never worse. They are waiting for the repeal of the McKinley act that they may have a chance to revive.

It is alleged, of course, that business depression is due to the prospective reduction of the duties. To what then is it due in Italy, where there is a prospect of an increase? To what is it due in France, where an increase has just been made? There is no fear of tariff reform in France, but there is a paralysis of industry and trade. To what shall we attribute the depression in Germany, where agriculture, its chief beneficiary, is admitted to be in so desperate a condition that no commercial treaty can make it worse? The limit has been reached in putting up duties, both in Germany and the United States, but the expected blessings have refused to materialize.

There is a deep philosophy underlying this "economic ferment" that prevails in all protective countries. The theory of creating prosperity by high taxes is breaking down. Protection has been tried and found wanting.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

IN POWER ONE YEAR.

Splendid Record Made by the Democracy Since March, 1893.

One year ago the democrats assumed control of the national government after a total or partial exclusion from power for over thirty years.

They found the tariff taxes higher than at any previous period in the history of the government. They found a treasury deficiency impending where they had left a surplus. They found the free gold excess of nearly $100,000,000, turned over by President Cleveland four years before, scattered in foreign lands. They found the country on the verge of a monetary panic owing to the operations of a republican silver-purchase law. They found on the statute book the skeleton of an elections force law which the republicans had desperately endeavored to strengthen with federal bayonets at the polls.

What is the record of the year?

The World has not shunned the duty of criticising the administration and the democrats in congress when the honor and welfare of the country required it. But in spite of blunders and delinquencies it is true and it deserves to be said that not in half a century before has the first year of a new administration and a new congress been so rich in important public services as has the year which has just ended.

The Sherman silver-purchase act has been repealed. So mischievous had this law, passed solely by republican votes, become that business men of all parties united in demanding its repeal. The firm attitude of the democratic administration secured an unconditional stoppage of silver purchases, and for the first time since the passage of the Bland act, in 1878, the currency of the country was relieved of the danger of debasement.

The elections law has been repealed. With it disappeared the last vestige of centralized coercion, the fruit of the war. Elections are hereafter to be free. The threat of "a bayonet behind every ballot"—of the party in power doing, as Speaker Reed said the republican party intended to do, "its own registration, its own counting and its own certification"—is removed. This achievement alone is enough to have made the first year of the democratic restoration memorable.

A genuine tariff-reform bill has passed the house. The Wilson bill is the most scientific and just tariff measure that has passed either house of congress in thirty years. If enacted into law it will free the great body of the people from needlessly burdensome taxes, it will relieve our manufacturers from a hindering handicap, it will enlarge the activities and increase the rewards of labor. It executes the mandate of the people. It fulfills the oft-repeated pledge of the democratic party.

There has been a promising start in pension reform. The greatest source of extravagance and fraud in the entire federal system has been boldly and honestly attacked. The pension appropriation bill reported to the house is nearly $15,000,000 less than the amount appropriated for the current fiscal year.

This is a record of which the democratic party has a right to be proud, despite the shortcomings and wrong-goings in other directions.

As to the reverse side of the picture there is this to be said: Every mill that is closed was shut up under the operation of the McKinley fifty per cent. tariff. Every workingman that is unemployed is idle under the law that was framed ostensibly to "protect" him. Every dollar of increase in the public debt represents a dollar of the republican deficiency. Every lack in the treasury is due to the republican law which cut revenue by raising taxes. Every expedient to obtain gold to maintain the public credit is the necessary result of the net loss of gold to the country during the republican administration of over $122,000,000. Every deficiency, increasing payment from the public treasury, bears the sign manual of a republican president.

That there are dangers ahead of the democratic party none will deny. But the record of its first year in power challenges comparison with any similar period in the history of the country.—N. Y. World.

HIGH-TARIFF PRICES.

How the Farmer Is Injured by the Operation of the McKinley Bill.

It is not to be denied that recent prices of wheat are extraordinarily low. The statement that they have been lower lately than they ever were before is also true in a sense, but the statement needs qualification, because otherwise it is misleading.

Conditions have changed essentially within the last fifty years. Our railroad system was then in its infancy, and where railroads existed freight rates were much higher than they are now. Consequently there was a corresponding difference in the price of wheat in farmers' hands and the export price. For the period before the western exchanges were established, we depend to a large degree upon the export price, or, in other words, the price at New York, the chief port of exportation. Now, the export price of wheat has been lower this year than ever before. But it does not follow that the price in farmers' hands in all parts of the country has been less.

How this operates is illustrated by a glance at the conditions existing in the summer of 1846. The New York Commercial Bulletin learns from reports of sales made in New York city at that time that on June 11 2,500 bushels of Indiana red wheat, part inferior, sold at 75 cents. On July 15 red wheat sold at 83 and white at 95. This shows the condition of the market at the seaboard. But it would be a great mistake to suppose that the state of the market in the west could be ascertained by deducting the difference now existing between eastern and western markets. A correspondent of the Bulletin says that about this time a man was sent to the Illinois and Mississippi rivers to buy wheat, and that he purchased a large quantity at 25 cents for red and 37½ cents for white, that being the difference then in the market value of the two varieties. At the same time 1,000 barrels of flour were bought on the Illinois river for $2.75 to $2.87 per barrel. In the next spring and summer, he says, flour sold in St. Louis at $6.12½ per barrel.

The great difference between prices east and west at that time is highly instructive as showing the enormous strides since made in our methods of transportation. It cost to transport grain from fields near the Mississippi river to New York something like fifty-two cents per bushel. From other wheat-producing regions rates of freight, of course, varied greatly, according to the distance and facilities of transportation. Prices of grain would also vary greatly according to local demands. They were not necessarily low at a distance from New York; because in an isolated region, where the production of wheat was insufficient to supply the home demand, the high rates of transportation would tend to put up the price instead of putting it down.

These low prices in 1846, it may be noted, were shortly before the passage of what Mr. Blaine used to call the "free-trade tariff" of 1846. The country was then under the blighting influence of the high tariff act of 1842, as it is now suffering from the effects of the McKinley bill. The bill became a law on July 30. It had been predicted that it would ruin the country, but it had just the contrary effect. A period of general prosperity followed; wages were increased, prices of farm products became remunerative, more factories were built, and existing ones enlarged, and the country came to realize the fact that prosperity is not attained by destroying, but by promoting, commerce.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The republican newspapers are now engaged in carrying next November's elections for their party. This is not the first time the republican party has attempted to anticipate the output of the political incubator.—N. Y. World

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Valuable Instrument.

A remarkable discovery was made by Herman Schifferl, a violin maker of Minneapolis. A violin was left with him for repairs and while working on it he found the following inscription: "B. Gratiana, Pisa, 1874." On the side was scratched: "Salisbury, 1867." Mr. Schifferl says the violin is one of only 40 made by a man whose fame, had he lived, would have exceeded that of any other famous violin maker, Stradivarius, Guarnerius, or any other. Gratiani died at 21, very poor, and after he had made only a few instruments. Now those he did make are worth many times their weight in gold, and there are only two or three out of Italy. There are possibly half a dozen in London and Paris, but no more. The most remarkable part of this adventure is that Schifferl was mainly responsible for bringing this violin away from Pisa, and this was the first time he had seen it since 1867.

A Youthful Financier.

Wally Johnson, an 8-year-old boy residing in North Minneapolis, has brought himself under the ban of the United States postal laws and called out special inspectors from Washington.

The boy had a mania for collecting stamps, and in order to procure money for buying certain stamps which he had seen advertised, he filled out checks, just as he had seen his father do, and sent them to a stamp collecting firm in St. Louis as payment on an order. Suspicions were aroused by the manner in which he had made them out, and correspondence with the bank on which they were drawn stamped the juvenile financier as a forger.

The affair is considered more as a joke than a serious matter, and on account of his youth he will not be prosecuted.

Diamond Robbery.

Two unknown men entered the bagnio of Ida Dorsey, in Minneapolis, and at the point of revolvers demanded her diamond ear rings, which she had on at the time, valued at $1,200. To frighten the woman a shot was fired by one of the men, when the diamonds were seized and wrenched from her ears.

A struggle ensued and the woman fought desperately with the thieves to recover her valuables, but her antagonists proved too strong, and breaking rushed from the house. An electric alarm was sent in from the house for the police, Lieut. Walton, of the South Side station, immediately sending officers to the scene. The robbers made good their escape, however.

Smallpox.

The Union Park hotel, at the Midway district between St. Paul and Minneapolis, has been quarantined on account of smallpox. The persons quarantined at the hotel number seven, six of whom are men (laborers) and one a young boy.

Dr. Kelley states that everything was being done for the quarantined people The hotel keeper and his wife, he says, were attending to their wants when he called. Every precaution is being taken by the St. Paul health department. Guards are stationed around the hotel, and no one is permitted to enter save the officers of the health department and Dr. Stockton. With these stringent rules of quarantine the disease can be kept within its present limits.

"Monte Carlo."

South St. Paul is not content with earning the sobriquet of "The Monte Carlo of Minnesota." It has higher aspirations, and recently took the first steps toward securing the Corbett-Jackson fight for the championship of the world. The plan is to have the fight take place on a government island in the Mississippi river, the contest to be for a purse $45,000, to be offered by the newly incorparated South St. Paul Athletic club.

To Prevent Wheat Stealing.

The grain and warehouse commissioners held a conference at St. Paul with representatives of several of the local railroads to discuss means of preventing the stealing of wheat from cars. Besides the commissioners there were present M. D. Grover, of the Great Northern; W. H. Truesdale, of the Minneapolis & St. Louis; E. D. Parker, of the Soo, and Supt. W. A. Scott, of the Omaha road.

News in Brief.

Bank Examiner Kenyon's report on the condition of the state banks for the month ending Feb. 28, shows an increase in the cash reserve of 31.9. There 143 bank, with resources and liabilities of $34,501,879.05.

The city council of Moorhead reduced the liquor license from $750 to $500.

G. A. Cousins, who runs a billiard hall at Duluth, has fallen heir to $135,000 left him by an aunt in Ontario.

Jacob Pozer, of Princeton, was lodged in jail at St. Cloud for safe keeping until the grand jury meets at Princeton. Pozer bit off a part of a man's ear at Princeton in a fracas.

The residence of Victor Bruber, near Red Wing, burned to the ground with all its contents, including over $600 in money and notes. Four members of the household came very near perishing. The mother let down a little boy from the upstairs window, dropped the rope and cut off escape for the others. They got out on an adjoining roof just as the floor caved in, and they were compelled to jump to the ground.

The St. Stanislaus parish at Winona has decided to erect a cathedral that shall cost in the proximity of $50,000. The parish, though composed mostly of the poorer classes of the city, is free from debt, and has raised over $30,000 for the erection of the new edifice, which it is contemplated to make the finest in the city, both architecturally and as to interior arrangement. Plans, though not in detail, have been drafted and construction will be under way in a short time.

A commission was issued by Adjt. Gen. Muehlenberg to Inspector of Small Arms Orris E. Lee, as with rank of first lieutenant of the 3d regiment.

N. J. Forbes, of Duluth, receiver of the Northern Pacific Elevator company, has applied to the United States circuit court at St. Paul for an order directing the division among secured creditors of $325,000 which is in his hands. These secured creditors are largely eastern banks, which hold receipts issued by the company before it went into the hands of the receivers and for which there is no wheat.

Nick Berzonic was fined $100 and ordered to spend 30 days in the Duluth jail by the United States court, having been found guilty of selling liquor illegally.

ENGLAND'S GREATEST ENEMY.

Russia Has Always Been Formidable—Her Insatiable Appetite.

The one formidable enemy of Great Britain is Russia. The recognition of this obvious truth does not of itself involve any censure. It is the result of a natural law which has been repeatedly and emphatically recognized by the governments of India and Russia, as well as by our military and naval departments. To fancy that the two empires can thrive and develop in concord and amity is to trust that the egg may be hatched and the chicken grow up to hen's estate without ever breaking the shell. Russia's appetite for land is as insatiable as Erysichthon's hunger for food.

The story of her advance in central Asia during the last quarter of a century is the record of broken promises, violated treaties, deliberate deception and every known category of double dealing. To hope to stay her further progress by journalistic eloquence or diplomatic tact is about as reasonable as Mrs. Partington's attempt to drive out the Atlantic ocean with a mop. We have placed implicit trust in those commendable methods for over twenty-five years, with no better results than the sharpening of our wits, the blunting of our territorial appetites, and the deepening of our insight into the unexplored labrynths of human casuistry.

Even Russia's radical friends in England candidly admit that it is hopeless to attempt to induce her to content herself with her present frontiers in the east. And for the best of possible reasons. Conscious of her civilizing mission, she has cast her bread upon the waters and is determined to find it after not too many days. During the last forty years she has annexed 140,000 square miles, and 3,500,000 inhabitants —a barren conquest, which, in ten years (from 1868 to 1878), resulted in a deficit of no less than 67,000,000 rubles. In this new territory there are vast stretches of wilderness, where on a march of 437 miles camels can only twice get water to drink. Now, is it conceivable that Russia should squander money and blood for such a ruinous possession unless she regarded it as the stepping-stone to something else? And what is the final goal, the Ultima Thule, but India?

This is neither a rhetorical exaggeration nor a false alarm. It is candidly admitted by the highest military authorities and politicians in Russia; it is constantly before the eyes of the Indian government; it is looked forward to with fatalistic resignation by those Russophile radicals at home, whose influence upon the foreign policy of Great Britain is either far too little or far too great.—Fortnightly Review.

Bad Effects Entirely Eliminated by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—In April last, through the effects of a dose of strychnine taken in mistake for another drug, I was laid up in St. John, N. B., for ten days. After this I never seemed to regain my former health, and continually suffered from indigestion and heart palpitation, for which I could get no relief. I thought I would try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking one bottle, I felt a little better, so continued using the remedy until I had consumed six bottles. I found myself gaining strength and flesh every day, and am now as healthy as I was before taking the poison." F. V. WARMOLL, representing the Seely Perfumes. 30 Melbourne Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

It will, perhaps, require a little stretch of the imagination on the part of the reader to recognize the fact that the two portraits at the head of this article are of the same individual; and yet they are truthful sketches made from photographs, taken only a few months apart, of a very much esteemed citizen of Illinois—Mr. C. H. Harris, whose address is No. 1,622 Second Avenue, Rock Island, Ill. The following extract from a letter written by Mr. Harris explains the marvelous change in his personal appearance. He writes: "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery saved my life and has made me a man. My home physician says I am good for forty years yet. You will remember that I was just between life and death, and all of my friends were sure it was a case of death, until I commenced taking a second bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' when I became able to sit up and the cough was very much better, and the bleeding from my lungs stopped, and before I had taken six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' my cough ceased and I was a new man and ready for business.

I now feel that it is a duty that I owe to my fellow-men to recommend to them the 'Golden Medical Discovery' which saved my life when doctors and all other medicines failed to do me any good.

I send to you with this letter two of my photographs; one taken a few weeks before I was taken down sick in bed, and the other was taken after I was well." These two photographs are faithfully re-produced at the head of this article.

Mr. Harris's experience in the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" is not an exceptional one. Thousands of eminent people in all parts of the world testify, in just as emphatic language, to its marvelous curative powers over all chronic bronchial, throat and lung diseases, chronic nasal catarrh, asthma, and kindred diseases.

Eminent physicians prescribe "Golden Medical Discovery" when any of their dear ones' lives are imperilled by that dread disease, Consumption. Under such circumstances only the most reliable remedy would be depended upon. The following letter is to the point. It is from an eminent physician of Stamps, Lafayette Co., Ark. He says: "Consumption is hereditary in my wife's family; some have already died with the disease. My wife has a sister, Mrs. E. A. Cleary, that was taken with consumption. She used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and, to the surprise of her many friends, she got well. My wife has also had hemorrhages from the lungs, and her sister insisted on her using the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I consented to her using it, and it cured her. She has had no symptoms of consumption for the past six years. People having this disease can take no better remedy." Yours very truly,

W. C. Rogers M. D.

From the Buckeye State comes the following: "I was pronounced to have consumption by two of our best doctors. I spent nearly $300, and was no better. I concluded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I bought and used eight bottles and I can now say with truth that I feel just as well to-day as I did at twenty-five, and can do just as good a day's work on the farm, although I had not done any work for several years."

Truly, your friend,

William Dulaney

Mr. Dulaney's address is Campbell, Ohio.

"I had catarrh in the head for years and trouble with my left lung at the same time. You put so much faith in your remedies that I concluded to try one bottle or two, and I derived much benefit therefrom. I used up three bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, five bottles of your "Golden Medical Discovery," and in four months I was myself again. I could not sleep on my left side, and now I can sleep and eat heartily. So long as I have your medicines on hand I have no need of a doctor; I do not think my house in order without them. Yours truly,

A. H. Heard

Marlow, Baldwin Co., Ala.

If it would be any more convincing, we could easily fill the columns of this paper with letters testifying to the cure of the severest diseases of the throat, bronchia and lungs, by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." To build up solid flesh and strength after the grip, pneumonia, ("lung fever"), exhausing fevers, and other prostrating diseases, it has no equal. It does not make fat like cod liver oil and its nasty compounds, but solid, wholesome flesh.

A complete treatise on Throat, Bronchial, and Lung Diseases; also including Asthma, and Chronic Nasal Catarrh, and pointing out successful means of home treatment for these maladies, will be mailed to any address by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of six cents in stamps, to pay postage.

MRS. DECK'S NEW LEAF.

How Tommy's Sickness Taught His Mother a Lesson.

Mrs. Deck was troubled about many things. She craved the newest fashion in sleeves, not only for herself, but for her little girls, and wanted to have every sort of dish and silver appliance fancy has invented to clutter the table, and enrich the shopkeepers. She belonged to two missionary societies, and to the musical and literary clubs, and she delighted in giving dainty afternoon teas, and little dinners. Mr. Deck often said, with smiling pride, there was nothing slow about Sally, and then he would give an odd little sigh as if he unconsciously regretted his Sally's ability to keep up with life's procession. But no one noted that sigh, unless it was little Tommy, whose quick ears and sharp eyes noticed everything.

Tommy was so often called an awful boy, it is probable he had his faults. To sail on a mud puddle on a bobbing bit of board, he would scour the little city over, and if there was a ticklish job of tree climbing necessary to the rescue of some fellow's kite, Tommy was always the boy to undertake it. He would tuck nails in the pockets of his Sunday clothes, and drive them into impossible places with the potato masher, if no other hammer was available, and the times he had flooded the house from the bathroom and given himself the croup and twisted his ankles skating could not be counted. But Tommy never told lies. He never even told tiny fibs when by so doing he could have saved himself unpleasant punishment. Tommy's eyes were big, and the sort of gray that often looked black. His hair was brown and as thick on his head as it could be without being solid, and over his nose was a thick sprinkling of freckles. The little boys all liked Tommy, and so did the cats and dogs, and so did Miss Bramhall, his teacher, though he was stupid in number work. But his sisters usually spoke of him as "a little plague," and his mamma, without being aware of it, felt him to be a great hindrance to everything she wanted to do. If she was practicing a sonata, he would break in upon the adagio by beginning to sing "After the Ball," to the best of his ability. He had no voice whatever. Or, he would, beset by some demon of unrest, steal to the stairway and take that opportunity to slide down the baluster rail, and leave upon it etchings drawn by his buttons. If she were studying a page of Browning, or trying to write an essay upon art, it did seem as if Tommy always chose the moment that would disturb her most to play wild Indian with a select party of friends, just under the window. So it fell out that by degrees Tommy fell more and more to the charge of Molly, the nurse, and consoled himself when in trouble by visiting the Tuckers, who lived just around the corner in a brown house. Mrs. Tucker somehow kept bread in the mouths of her brood of six by washing; and what she called "days' works." At night they gathered about her, and the one lamp, and in all Shoreleigh there was not a happier group. She was busy at something always, patching usually, but it was wonderful the amount of work she could get through with swarmed upon by six pairs of arms, and talked to by six eager tongues.

The literary club was going to hold its annual banquet at Mrs. Deck's, and that lady determined to make the occasion one long to be remembered. "There may be costlier ones by and by, when Shoreleigh is a great city," she told Mr. Deck, "but there shall not be a prettier one."

"Well," assented Mr. Deck, "so it don't cost too dear, Sally, I've nothing to say. I do not mean in dollars, for you are always sensible about spending them, but yourself. You spend yourself too lavishly sometimes." Mrs. Deck only laughed at this, and went off to the florists' and spent the whole morning deciding whether she would have roses or chrysanthemums for decoration.

"Chrysanthemums is newer, mum," said Mr. Higgs, rubbing his hands together so they rustled. "An' you gits great wariety. Take this 'ere white. Looks like a big dahlia, an' this 'ere white again ere like a mop o' 'air a droppin' back from a gal's face, an' this 'ere one again is piled up like a lot o' thin-sliced cabbages, an' this one again are like a sunflower for its shapes, an' pink an' white, or orange, or—then again all lavender pink, or all gold color is 'andsome. Roses ain't what you can call old, but they ain't no ways new, though I ain't one as is too ready to force my opinion. Ladies knows what they has and what they wants."

While Mrs. Deck listened to Mr. Higgs, Tommy was busy far away sailing a mud puddle lake with Harry Tucker, for it was Saturday, and when he went home Mollie was too busy finishing her new dress to note that his feet and legs were wet. It ached in Tommy's head the next morning when he got up, but he did not think to tell anyone about it. His mamma had been too busy thinking of her part in the coming entertainment to ask if he had learned his Sunday-school lesson. He had an old-fashioned teacher, had Tommy, and had to commit six verses to memory each week. For quiet he retired behind the curtains in the bow window, and no one thought of the redness of his face when he came out. But when at dinner he ate little of his chicken, and said he was too sleepy to wait for his pie, his father discovered that Tommy was a sick boy, and sent off for Dr. Sanders.

"Is it something contagious? Will I have to give up having the banquet here?" asked Mrs. Deck, when the doctor had felt of Tommy's pulse, and looked at his tongue and his breast.

"The symptoms are rather obscure, just now," said the doctor, who never told anything of which he did not feel very sure. "There's a good deal of scarlet fever about and measles, and I'm bound to say there's smallpox over in Bagdad."

Mrs. Deck threw up her hands, exclaiming: "Smallpox!"

"Yes, but I suppose he has not been over in that region. It may be simply a slight stomach trouble. Children, especially of a nervous, sanguine temperament, are liable to fever for slight causes."

"Have you been over to Bagdad?" demanded Mr. Deck of Tommy.

"Yes, sir," replied Tommy, unfalteringly. "I went yesterday morning with Harry Tucker. We wanted to see the thing old Uncle Lijah Blake's made. It's a man sawing wood and goes by wind like a paper windmill. Uncle Lijah said he'd whittle me one for two nickels."

"Bless my soul!" exclaimed the doctor. Then he looked at Tommy's vaccination spot.

"It never took good, you know," said Tommy's mamma. "The girls' were all right, but Tommy's was contrary."

Now, if anyone can have the heart to hold a rose over a hot fire and see it quickly shrivel and wilt, he can have some idea of what befell Tommy Deck within the next week. He did not have the smallpox, but something nearly as bad, scarlet fever, and after that first day he knew no one. He clung, however, closely to his mother, whom he took to be Mrs. Tucker, and he wrung her heart by imploring her not to go away. "I like you so," he would whisper, huskily. "I 'spect I'd like mamma, if I could get a chance to get acquainted with her. But she's awful busy, and I guess she don't like boys as well as girls. I forget and rumple her bangs and her frills, and I do forget about the forks and spoons. But you're so cozy to have 'round, Mrs. Tucker, and please do tell me that story about the wild bear of county Clare again."

Unluckily, Mrs. Tucker herself was kept close at home with her boy Harry who was sick with the dreaded smallpox, so the story of the wild bear could not be repeated. Plenty of other stories were, however, and dust gathered in the pretty parlors, and the spring bonnets came, and still Mrs. Deck thought of nothing but Tommy. But at last there came a day, and what a happy day it was, when he knew her, and old Dr. Sanders announced that, if he did not catch cold, and if he did not have the dropsy, or half a dozen other complications, he would soon mend and be about again. To look at Tommy was a sorry spectacle. His hair had grown so thin it looked like the wiry seed vessels of wood moss, and stuck straight up, dry and dead. His cheeks were thin, and his fingers were skinny, and, for that matter, the whole of his body was peeling. He trembled when he tried to sit up, and he wanted to do a thousand things he could not, and if he had never really been an awful boy, he became one during the weeks of his convalescence. But it was his mother who read to him, played dominoes with him, and taught him to use his paint brushes. All things end, even unhappy things, and after sulphur had made the whole house sweet, and whitewash and paint and scouring had purified Tommy's sick room, and Tommy himself was allowed to go out on sunny days, Mrs. Deck scared him and surprised his sisters and Mr. Deck by the declaration that she was going to turn over a new leaf. Tommy, with quick remembrance of the days before his illness, broke out impetuously: "O mamma, don't! Just go on."

"Well, perhaps that's what it will amount to. The parlors are the pleasantest rooms in the house, and I have taken down everything in them that can be easily soiled, or broken, so we can enjoy them every evening, and I am going to stop making frills of any sort, fancy cakes, fancy frocks for girls, and all sorts of things that take a great deal of care and time, so we can have leisure for more stories and study together."

"Good," cried Tommy. "That'll be a love your home club, Mamma Deck, won't it, your new leaf?"—Elizabeth Cummings, in Interior.

The Return of a Projectile.

The question is often asked: "Will an object thrown into the air (either from the hand, a volcano, or even when shot from a rifle or cannon) return to the earth with the same initial velocity with which it left?" The answer is: A projectile thrown vertically upwards into the air will return with a velocity less than the initial. The word less is emphasized because this view of the matter is contrary to the one generally accepted. In the air the accelerating force which acts during the descent is not equal to the retarding force during ascent. The retarding force is the same for the weight of the projectile and the atmospheric resistance—both acting in the same direction. In the descent the accelerating force is the difference of these two since they act in opposite directions. In a vacuum it would be different. In that case, the weight of the projectile being the only force acting, this force would generate in each foot of the ball exactly the same amount of velocity that it had lost in its passage upwards. Thus, the final would find it with a speed equal to its initial velocity.—Detroit Free Press.

April.

The first month of Spring was named April by the Romans because, as one of them expressed it, "omnia aperit"—it opens all things. It is in this month that nature (in the temperate zone) awakens from her winter slumber, throws off the icy fetters that have bound her, and testifies her joy at meeting the returning sun by sending forth leaves and buds, promise of flowers and fruits to come. And along with the rousing of nature, man, too, shakes off the torpor of winter, comes forth from his hibernation by the coal stove or the steam radiator, and starts on his travels, either for business or pleasure. The first day of this month is known far and wide as All Fools' Day, but, generally as it is thus known, the reason for the appellation is much in doubt. Some say this was the day on which Noah sent out the dove from the ark for the first time, and she returned, having found no rest for her foot—"April fooled." Others say the name was given the day in 1564, when the French calendar was changed so that New Years Day came January 1st instead of April 1st, thus leaving the opening day of April destitute of its former festivities,—"fooling" those who expected a holiday. But there will be no "April fool" about a journey on the Burlington Route, and whether you go on business or pleasure to any principal city, before you start write for routes and rates to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DELANO DIARY

—The GAZETTE and Weekly Globe $1.30

—Regular services at the M. E. church next Sunday evening. Subject, "Some Lessons from the Trial of Christ."

—The Great Northern has got a conductor with whom the young ladies will doubtless all be delighted to travel; he is so polite that he was actually heard to say "thank you" while he smilingly took up a ticket the other day.

—Hi Dyer has greatly improved the appearance of his meat market with a fresh coat of paint.

—$1.30 cash will pay for the St. Paul Weekly Globe, and the BUFFALO GAZETTE for one year.

--John Mayer thinks of taking a job on this end of the G. N. this summer so he can be at home with his family, who prefer to remain here.

—LOST—A yellow memorandum book, with letter addressed to my wife. Finder please return and get reward.
26-p2 J. A. MAYER.

—Rev. J. W. Powell will hold morning services here again after next Sabbath. The old plan morning and evening services every Sunday will be resumed.

--Our Independence correspondent asks about how many kinds of sociables there are now? We don't know. The latest we have hetrd of was an "egg sociable" to buy singing books for the Epworth League, at Clear Lake.

—Prof. C. M. Johnson, of Rockford visited Delano friends on Sunday. He says he was at Minneapplis on business Wednesday and took in the McKinley meeting for a short time. He says he never was in such a crowd before, once he was taken entirely from the floor.

—The Litchfield News Ledger in mentioning the visit of the Delanoites to their city this week says: "While in the city they made a raid on the Ledger office and we stand ready to make affidavit that they were as fine a lot of gentlemen as ever lugged big woods mud into Litchfield."

—Things were satisfactorally arranged at the school board meeting Saturday evening, and a committee from the board visited the school on Monday morning when President Vorse proceeded to expound the rules and regulations to the teachers and scholars; and now peace and harmony prevails.

—If we are to have water works, let wells be dug or driven in some proper place where pure water can be procured for general use. It will not only be healthier but cheaper in the long run. Litchfield had planned to use lake water but gave it up and now have 28 drive wells 8 feet apart and 40 feet deep supplying abundance of water for a much larger place than Delano.

--Our merchants have on hand this spring the best and most complete assortment of goods ever shown in Delano, and are selling at lower figures than ever. Cash trade is better for everybody. Where the merchants take pains to keep what people need and sell at a fair profit they should have the patronage of the entire community.

—Uncle Joe Van Eman, who has had considerable experience on this terrestial sphere, and who owns a meadow a short distance up river says if a dam is put in here there will be no end of legislation for a long time. Ingerson's spring will be overflown, Young's meadow made too wet to cut, etc., etc. It is hardly likely that one will be built.

--Some of the down street Republicans are telling around that had all Minnesota Democrats listened to McKinley's speech last week there would be but two left in the state, Dr. Catlin and F. A. Cramer. This is indeed a flattering complement to the faith and honesty of those two gentlemen, which even their political opponentr have learned to respect.

—Wheat is up 3 cents. Now 57 cts.

—A fine pair of long-eared animals, supposed to be English hares, arrived at the depot, for Carl Denzel, of Watertown.

—Alderman Dyer is accused of eating up a good share of ye editors dinner, at Litchfield on Wednesday. He pleads guilty.

—The Daughters of Rebekah held their first birthday party Tuesday night. They ought now to be able to talk and walk alone.

—In arguing the waterworks and electric light plant, the Eagle says some people think there will be a decrease in the number of saloons in Delano; in the adjoining column she announces that there will be two new saloons started in town soon.

—An election will be held on Tuesday April 10, at the city hall to vote on issuing $10,000 bond to build water and eleitric light plants. If suitable plants can be procured and properly arranged they will offer greater inducements to manufacturers to locate here than would cash bonuses as some have suggested.

—The Eagle says: "It is becoming a very serious question whether revivals are not productive of much more harm than good and whether it would not be wise to put a stop to them in some way." "People who "get religion" very suddenly and make an exhibition of themselves at revival meetings invariably prove backsliders, if they do not go crazy and little good is accomplished by these meetings." Wonder if the old bird has been to one of these meetings?

School Notes.

MISS GRACE O'HAIR, Editor,
EDWARD FREEMAN Assis't.

Last Friday's Senate. Sente File No. 6, relating to the tariff was again considered, but as usual a motion was made that it be laid aside and that Senate File No. 10 be taken up. Quite a lively debate ensued and it is evident from the result that there are very few Prohibitionists among this worthy body. As we then ran out of bills the tariff bill was again brought up. Senate adjourned in good order at 4:55.

The Seciors are at work on their commencement orations and expect to astonish the town people with their brilliant oratory.

County Cullings.

The Litchfield Independent says the man arrested at Buffalo and allowed to escape had not been placed in Sheriff Maher's charge as stated by the Buffalo Journal. Who did let him get away, was it our sheriff?

If you don't want a fusion ticket a mongrel concern, made up of Democrats, Populists, Republicans and Prohibitionists turn out to your party caucus and help nominate representative men. Men who will discharge their duties as delegates to nominating conventions and not be wheedled into placing a ticket into the field to trade on.

If you are a Prohibitionist insist on having good straight Prohibitionists on your ticket. It your a Populist have men who believe in your theories placed on the ticket. If you are a Republican see that you have a Republican ticket. If you are a Democrat do your best to get up a ticket with candidates who believe in "equal rights to all and special privileges for none." If you are voted down in your caucuses and men not fit for the place are put on you can vote for a clean man on some other ticket.

Democrats are awakening to the fact all along the line that if they are to cut any figure in politics this fall they must hoist their banner high, emblagon thereon "equal rights to all and special privileges for none." Hold honest, fair caucuses. send their representative men to the conventions, and do their best to have their strongest men in the party nominated, at the convention called for that purpose, to every office on the ticket All trading stock must be let off if we expect to win. Tickets should be made in time to give people a chance to know who their candidates are.

The following is clipped from the Minneapolis Journal; "Rev. J. N. Powell preached at Delano a week ago last Sunday evening, in his own ardent style, that there was but one way to be saved, and that the Odd Fellows or the Masons had never yet saved a man. As they had never claimed to have done so, these orders are slightly mad at Powell." Mr. Powell is a '93 man--Anandale Post. The Post has it wrong. It was J. W. Powell Sr. and he is 72 years old. We presume it has mixed him up with J. W. Jr. The Post should not attribute the sins of the father to the son, a '93 U. M. man.

Gone to Idaho for a Husband.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 5.—Miss Alice C. Yingst, of Sand Beach, Dauphin county, Pa., who is 26 years old and weighs 338 pounds, started last night for Coeur d' Alene, Idaho to meet her prospective husband, whom she has never seen. Miss Yingst answered an advertisement by Harry Cratzer, which she saw in a matrimonial journal about five months ago and the engagement resulted.

Ziebarth on County Bills.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—While in Buffalo the other day, I took occasion to look over some of the bills in cases of contagious diseases, rejected or allowed by the county board, and as I know that many of your readers are greatly interested in this matter I give a copy of one of the bills allowed and one rejected, and the readers may then form their own opinion. The bill allowed:

COUNTY OF WRIGHT, Minn.,

To Gottlieb Kersten, Dr.

Dec. 1st, 1893, to quarantine of scarlet fever and guarding patient in family of H. B. Miller, town of Southside by request of A. M. Rigway, M. D. from Dec. 1st to Dec. 16th, inclusive 8 days at $1.50 per day.....$12.00

Authorized by G. I. Ruscoe, Co. Com. 1st district.

Sworn to as in usual form and signed by Gottlieb Kersten, Chmn. Town Board of Health. Allowed at $12.00.

A bill rejected:

WRIGHT COUNTY, Minn.

To James Sherry, Dr. Claim of Board of Health, Town of Franklin.

Jan. 29 to Feb. 25, 1894, inclusive. to quarantine services of John Peterson in diphtheria case of Peter Johnson's family 28 days @ $1 per day.....$28.00
To quarantine services of James Sherry as Healty Officer for placing quarantine and raising, also fumigating in diphtheria cases, four trips, Jan. 7, 14, 29, and Feb. 26, 1894, at $1.....4.00

Total.....$32.00

Signed and served by James Sherry Chairman B. of H.

On this rejected bill appears what purports to be the opinion of the County Attorney, although, while he seems to think that board of health officers should give their full name and official standing, he with his $100 a month salary don't need to sign an opinion as County Attorney, or give even his full name. Here is the opinion:

Am of opinion that the $4 to Sherry should be allowed but the item 28 is not itemized, no one can tell what it is for or who the board of health is. W. E. C.
March 28, 1894.

What profound learning in this opinion. It beats Schlobcrofski all to pieces. "No one can tell who the board of health is," and still the $4 to Sherry should be allowed, what for? I presume because his name is James Sherry, and he is the father of twins, and again, "no one can tell what it is for." I presume the word "quarantine," means coon hunting. Looking at the bill allowed no fuss was made about it, and after all if either of the two should be rejected it ought to be the Southside bill.

Mr. Kersten, it seems, employed himself to guard the family in question, which is clearly illegal, the bill is not properly made out because it says from December 1st to Dec. 16th, (no year) 8 days, while according to my knowledge of arithmetic this would be 16 days, and not 8 days.

When I yet add that Mr. Sherry told me that the commissioner from this district authorized the expense to be made, then every thinking person will see that there is a good sized African some where in the wood pile.

Among Our Exchanges.

It looks as if McKinley, like Blaine used to be, is too popular with his own party to get the presidential nomination.—Branierd Journal.

Some of our Democratic leaders are almost ready to "give up the ship" unless Congress and the administration adhere a little more to the wishes of the common people.--Norwood Times.

President Cleveland has vetoed the Bland bill. This may be all right, but we are a little apprehensive that he has "nuckled" a peg or two to the money power of wall street.—Valley Herald.

Three towns, Union Grove, Manannah and Cosmos, got through last year without paying out a cent for poor relief. This region of country is not so hard up as some effect to believe, to judge from this showing--Litchfield Independent.

Rev. Higgins gave some good advice to his hearers in the M. E. church, relative to a hearafter, last Sunday evening.--Norwood Times.

Rev. Higgins formerly preached at Annandale and probably the people there are familiar with his views on the subject.

It is regretted that Governor McKinley confined his speech, delivered at Minneapolis, to the tariff alone. Many Republicans would have been glad to hear his views on the currency question. It forshadows the purpose of the Republican leaders to make the fight at this year's elections for congress and otherwise on the tariff issue. In our opinion the money question will occupy a more important and controlling place in the politics of this state than the tariff.—Moorhead News.

St. Norway's Day.

The Norwegians of Minneapolis will have a good time on May 17, to judge after the work done by the committee. There will be a street parade and a grand festival in the evening. Large delegations from St. Paul, Stillwater, and Red Wing will be in line. The committee will meet at Normanna Hall. Monday evening April 6th, when all the necessary sub-committees will be appointed. There is some talk of presenting a silk flag to the society making the best showing in the parade. —Minneapolis Tribune.

WHAT AND WHERE.

Mischievous Tommy
He hears every day,
A homily simple
Beginning this way;
"Now Tommy you musn't"
And "Tommy you must;"
And Tommy, stop running,
You'll kick up the dust;"
And "Do not go swimming,
Or you will get wet,"
And "Do not go sailing,
Or you will upset,"
And "Do not be wrestling,
You'll fracture your bones,"
And "Do not go climbing,
You'll fall on the stones!"
And "Do not be whistling,
You're not a mere bird,"
And "Good little children
Are seen and not heard.
Which Tommy, on hearing,
Exclaims, "Deary me!
What can a boy do,
And where can a boy be?"

T. J. CATLIN, Publisher and Proprietor.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter, at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

GOV. NELSON has appointed April 27 as Arbor Day.

THE A. P. A. question is being discussed in the cities Donnelly and Sims seem to be reaping the wealth.

ST. PAUL has for candidates already nominated for Mayor, Doran, Rep; Smith, Dem; and Cullen, People's ticket.

W. H. HARRIES Ex-Congressman from the 1st. dist. has been appointed collector of Internal Revenue. This is said to please Baldwin and Hall.

FOR representative to Congress from the Sixth District the Sherburn County Times nominates D. W. Bruckart, of St. Cloud. M. R. Baldwin of Duluth will most likely be the Democratic nominee.

CARTER HARRISON'S murderer it is said will not be hung before July 2. Possibly he may bring in a big bill of damages for false imprisonment for the time having elapsed since the first date set for his execution.

IT looks as if lawyer Thompson had gotten down tolerably close to the lower end of the moral ladder himself, sometime; judging from his address to the jury in his efforts to save his client, Colonel Breckinridge.

THE Minnesota Democratic Association have, by a recently issued address, waked up some of the Congressmen in Washington, who are offering explanations for their votes. Baldwin and Hall are not among the explainers.

NEW YORK may as well learn first as last that she is no longer the hub on which revolves this great Republic; that the rest of the United States are of more consequence, politically speaking than is the Empire State. When nominees are chosen for chief executive officers again it should be remembered that New York's quota, for years to come, has been filled.

THE Oracle of the Ryan complain that the country papers have kept him out of office. He has been trying for a long time to get a voice at Washington, why don't he go along with his friend Brown and Coxey and aid in procuring some good laws instead of occupying his comfortable quarters and sicking on the "dogs of war?" He would not have to be elected by the people for this. Perhaps Coxey would make room in his carriage.

SENATOR HILL, of New York seems to be very fastidious in political matters. About the first we remember of him he didn't like Grover Cleveland's candidacy for President of the United States and managed to get himself elected Governor of New York while Grover didn't get the electoral vote of the Empire State. Next time he was so eagre to have a presidential delegation chosen as to succeed in having caucuses and nominating conventions in his state called a number of weeks earlier than usual; his fine Italian hand began to become conspicious among those holding the political wires of the "pivotal" state. After failing to supplant Grover as head of the Democratic ticket in 1892 he has as Senator, followed him to Washington where he headed the "senatorial courtesy" movement to prevent the nominees of President Cleveland, Hornblower and Peckenham from being confirmed as Supreme Justices of the United States Supreme Court. The past week he took occasion to parade his views on the pending Wilson bill in a manner not complimentary to anybody in particular and especially his old stumbling stone, Grover Cleveland. He apparently looses no opportunity to give his superior in office a thrust; taking him to task for appointing Judge Gresham, who openly announced himself as in full accord with Grover Cleveland's tariff and other views, rather than select him or some other protection Democrat as Secretary of State; the Hiawaiian imbrogilo is bought up. And President Cleveland is accused of obtaining information which was "inacurate as well as premature" concerning the proposed tariff bill, which the Senator from New York don't seem to favor, and which, since being amended by his collegue from the state that elects the president, by placing a higher tariff on collars and cuffs is less acceptable to Democrats. On the whole it looks to people at this distance as if Senator Hill would make no better president than he accuses Cleveland of being.

Protection Unnecessary.

When a child is born it is necessary to protect it, and care for its wants. It must be given food and be sheltered from the weather. If it should become sick it would need still further waiting on and attention from its guardians; and its natural parent, its own mother, is the best and most careful protector it can have. When the child becomes a youth it needs surroundings of a different nature; it needs instruction in the ways of the world; it needs the guiding hand of a father and the sympathies of a mother. It must be taught obedience to the paternal laws; it must learn to wait upon itself, and not rely upon the protecting care of its parents to supply its every want. If it falls down it must learn to get up again. It needs protection and guidance still but not to the extent it did a a few years ago. A few years more and the youth is a young man; he can now, on a pinch, make his own way in the world; he can earn his own living, but still needs the guidance of his parents. He finishes his school-boy years. He commences business for himself, he is more capable in almost any line than was his father before him; he can safely rely, many times, upon the more mature judgment of his father in business matters; but is no longer under the rule of others. He no longer needs protection, as when he was younger; he has outgrown the necessity for relying on his parents for his daily food and raiment, but can aid in smoothing their remaining days, and assist them in procuring many luxuries in their old age. Things have changed. The baby has become a full grown man; has a family of his own and instead of being in need of protection he is now prepared to protect those under his care.

A few rears ago, within the memory of many of our readers, this very county was a vast forest, without even roads to travel into it, and filled with wild animals, and Indians, and numerous other dangers to home seekers. Those pioneers who first hunted up the best places and settled on them needed protection. Each had his faithful dog and his trusty rifle, and felt quite safe when locked in his log cabin against all comers. In '62 the wily Sioux began to kill men women and children, where ever they could catch them, and the people became alarmed and felt that more protection was desirable, and if they wished to preserve the scalps of themselves and families it was necessary to band themselves together and place the women and children in stockades built for the purpose while the men kept a watch for the foe. In fact many felt that two much protection could hardly be secured, while a few settlers actually remained on their premises and weathered through the Indian massacre without being disturbed by the appearance of the enemy, and with little if any protection but a clear conscience and a trust in Him who doeth all things well. Others in what they considered comparative safety were shot or tomahawked by the red man. Here was where protection was of use to the people. Soldiers were sent out to guard the frontier and under their protection the settlers returned to their homes, many coming from the large cities where they had fled for protection. The Indian war finally ended and the warriors and their families took up their residences beyond the reach of our people and peace and plenty again prevailed. Those who had gone to the South to fight our country's battles returned and for nearly thirty years a gun in the house has scarcely been needed; protection has ceased to be called for in this direction and people take good care of themselves.

When our country was settled it was necessary to protect the settlers from Indians. When the Revolutionary war begun and the supply of clothing and provisions and other things were taxed beyond endurance, by the mother country it was thought best by our sturdy forefathers to tax ourself in the interest of building up factories at home rather than submit longer to the demands made by those having us in their power. A tax of about 12 per cent, average, was imposed for this purpose, on goods; and people here in this then new country, were encouraged to do their own work, make their own goods. This protection to home industries which people were willing then to pay has been growing ever since until it has quadrupled; those who do the manufacturing claim it necessary yet. Though our country has grown from babyhood to man's estate, and now boasts that she fears no other country on the face of the globe; and claims to be able to compete with any nation in manufacturing; whose goods are sold throughout the known world many of them cheaper than at home; and whose boundless resources are uncomparable, still has within her bounds those who do come year after year to the houses of Congress, personally, or by agent, and beg that this, that and the other article be kept on the tariff list. And, sad to tell, by intrigue and "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" succeed in getting what they ask for.

Protection to home industries now, in this country, are just about as much needed by our wealthy corporations as is the tender care of the wet nurse to the sturdy man; or the trusty rifle, and faithful watch dog of pioneer days to the average Wright county farmer today, and like they would be now, but a bill of expense, and a trouble to himself and neighbors.

Representative "I. D's."

"I. D." in the Representative seems to enjoy having the country press advertise him, and ever and anon prods up a few of them, and occasionally the most of them by some of his sensational "I. D's." Of all Minnesota writers he takes the cake in the use of expletives and exclamation points; occasionally putting a clause in italic with three !!! after it. He keeps calling the attention of people to their terrible condition! while he informs them that "We have a phenomenon heretofore unheard of in this country;—a dangerous phenomenon;— the outgrowth of the terrible conditions into which the people are plunged; and one that may yet cover the whole land with the lurid flames of civil war. Great bodies of drilled men are moving like armies upon the seat of government at Washington; their number steadily increasing; with a strong probability that they will march up Pennsylvania avenue 100,000 strong. The leaders are a man by the name of Coxey, and my old friend Carl Brown, of California. Coxey is a man of wealth, a horse raiser and racer and farmer, dwelling near Masillon, Ohio. Brown is an enthusiast who has been travelling through the country, dressed in a buckskin suit, exhibiting a panorama illustrative of the money power and the sufferings of the people, Brown is an able man, witty and a good talker." After abusing the news papers and telling how the army is rapidly growing and what a time they are having to get to Washington, from California the sage further says:

"The eastern movement is a great picnic and political campaign. Coxey and Brown hold vast meetings every night, and the newspaper enslaved East is at last hearing Populist doctrines. The people are moving in their primary capacity and the shackles of the hireling press are falling from their limbs.

But we fear for the future what will this vast army do if Congress refuses to pass the laws it asks for? The members of the House and Senate may be placed between Wall street, and its gold, on one side, and the multitudes, with ropes in their hands, on the other. It will be an awful ordeal! Nothing can be more terrible than the feelings of a corrupt rascal who cannot take the money that is offered him. And how will this mob be scattered? And who will feed them? And who can control them? It is a very serious condition of affairs. It may be the beginning of terriable events."

We are led to believe that the great Ignatius, known on two continents, and who is making so good a living as he boasts while the country papers, according to his tell, can be bought for $50.00 apiece is exagerating things a little; is writing for more dollars for the Representative and Caesars Column, when we find him in the same article saying: "The daily papers would ignore the sun, moon and stars or lie them out of their orbits, if Wall Street demanded it." Ignatius you should have drawn the line before coming to that.

McKINLEY.

"He Comes, the Messiah of Plutocracy Comes.

MR. EDITOR:—I have just returned from Minneapolis where William McKinley was the hero of the day. The most extravagant tokens of regard were paid him. Crowds came in on every train; people flocked to the Milwaukee depot to catch a glimpse of him as he alighted from the train; the exercises were suspended at the University and the male portion of the students were at the depot to receive him. Extravagant prices were offered for tickets of admission to the exposition building to hear him speak. I thought why do they make such a fuss about the man? What has he done to merit it? Is he a great statesman? Is he a distinguished thinker? Oh, no! He has neither of these qualities. He is simply an ambitious politician of the last decade of the 19th century. He happened to get on the Ways and Means committee when in Congress and put into form a tariff bill which bears his name but which was dictated by attorneys who represented the interests of large manufacturing corporations. If he made the bill without that help it would have shown no legislative ability. His speech was even worse than I expected. His reasoning was poor, his conclusion was unwaranted and contradictory.
